MEXICANS TAKE EIGHT BANDITS AS KIDNAPERS

Seized in Dance Hall Raid; Yankees Push On.

BULLETIN.

Laredo, Tex., Aug. 23.—Mexican newspapers received here today contain references to reports from Progreso, Yucatan, of the presence of several British warships at Delize, British Honduras.

The papers add that according to advices from Vera Cruz five warships, believed to be American, passed that port northward bound a few days ago.

Marfa, Tex., Aug. 23.—Eight bandits, believed to be part of the Jesus Renteria gang which kidnaped Lieuts. H. G. Peterson and P. H. Davis, American aviators, have been captured by Mexican federal troops at Coyame, Chihuahua, according to a report to Col. George T. Langhorne from Mexican Consul Cosme Bengoechea at Presidio tonight.

The bandits were captured in a dance hall after the federal troops had surrounded it, the report says. The troops had marched to Coyame from Chihuahua City. The prisoners were taken to Chihuahua City by Gen. Manuel Dieguez's cavalry, the reports said.

Army headquarters here announce the Mexican cavalry troops had been seen by aviators marching toward Coyame. The time of the capture was not given.

Coöperate with Yanks.

The Mexican consul's telegram said the information came from Gen. Antonio Pruneda, in the field near Coyame. The general also said he was returning to Cuchillo Parada from the vicinity of Coyame, where he was going in pursuit of other bandits.

Pruneda also asked that American aviators reconnoiter the country near Las Palomas, Chihuahua, where Villa bandits had been reported.

The reported capture of the bandits is taken to confirm earlier reports that the Mexican federals were coöperating with the American expeditionary forces.

It was believed here that the bandits would be executed at Chihuahua City, after court martial, as Gen. Dieguez has been conducting a vigorous campaign against banditry in Chihuahua.

Americans Push On.

The American punitive expedition today continued its march toward its objective, which was a new field base. It was the first time the entire expedition has marched in one column, as the troops have been operating in separate columns to run down reports of bandits' location.

Scouts are searching in the mountain canyons, as they march, but it was admitted here that the belief is that the bandits are further south.

The troops will spend their first Sunday in Mexico in the saddle, as it is planned to make a forced march to reach the new base tomorrow.

Abandon Cattle Thieves' Chase.

El Paso, Tex., Aug. 23.—Two troops of United States cavalry crossed into Mexico below Fort Hancock at 4 a. m. today in a chase after Mexican cattle thieves who had raided American ranches in that vicinity Friday. Gen. James B. Erwin announced this afternoon.

The cavalry, which was made up of troops E and G of the 7th, was ordered to return late today, as it had failed to locate the trail of the bandits.

"The mission for which the troops were ordered into Mexico could not be accomplished," Gen. Erwin said, "so I have ordered the men to return."

In their trip at dawn troop E crossed the line at Fort Hancock, fifty miles southeast of El Paso on the Southern Pacific railway, and troop F at Fabens, thirty-two miles from here in the same direction.

Bandits' Old Headquarters.

Fabens, is opposite the country in which Francisco Villa, Felipe Angeles and Martin Lopez made their headquarters before they attacked Juarez June 14, and over which they were chased in rout by the cavalry brigade under command of Col. S. R. H. Thompkins, which was sent to disperse them.

Andreas G. Garcia, Mexican consul general here announced tonight that

SHANTUNG CUT OUT OF TREATY BY COMMITTEE

May Block Covenant if Report Is Approved on Senate Floor.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Aug. 23.—[Special.]—The Shantung decision of the Paris peace conference, under which 40,000,000 Chinese were turned over to Japanese domination, was reversed by the senate foreign relations committee today.

By a vote of 9 to 8, the committee decided to amend the treaty to provide for the restoration of Shantung to China. The change made was extremely simple; it merely strikes out the word "Japan" and subsittutes the word "China" in the section which disposes of Germany's former rights in the Shantung peninsula.

Senator McCumber, North Dakota, Republican, voted wtih the Democrats against the Shantung amendment. Otherwise, the vote was of a strict party nature.

May Block Whole Treaty.

The effect of the committee's action, if sustained by the senate, will be to send the peace treaty back to the other principal allied powers. As Japan, according to President Wilson, refused to sign the treaty unless given Shantung and as France, Great Britain and Italy are bound by their secret treaties to support the Japanese claims to Shantung, it is considered extremely probable that the amendment if sustained in the senate, would create a deadlock among the powers. In administration circles, it was frankly admitted that the amendment, if agreed to by the senate, meant the defeat of the treaty so far as the United States was concerned.

Defeat Predicted on Floor.

"It is an open declaration of war to defeat the whole treaty," declared Senator Swanson of Virginia, administration spokesman in the absence of Senator Hitchcock. "In view of the secret treaties of Great Britain, Italy, and France, they certainly will reject the amendment and the United States will be forced to make a separate treaty with Germany."

Senator Pomerene of Ohio, a Democratic member of the foreign relations committee, declared the committee's action had no significance and predicted the senate would reverse it.

"I am confident that a majority of the senate will see that the adoption of the amendment would be most unwise," Senator Pomerene said. "It not only would not aid China, but would positively injure her chances to get back Shantung by bringing her grievance before the league of nations in case Japan does not keep her promise to restore it voluntarily."

"Can't Guarantee Infamy"—Johnson.

Senator Johnson of California, Republican, praised the action of the committee in wiping out the proposal to "guarantee the infamy of the Shantung settlement by our treasury and our blood. It may be true, as asserted by our opponents," he said, "that we cannot remedy the wrong; at least, we are not parties to it."

"It ought not to be forgotten," commented Senator Brandegee of Connec-

ARRESTED TAXI DRIVER CHARGES FOR DRIVE TO CELL

For some time yellow has been a forbidden hue in the exterior color scheme of the Hotel La Salle. Last night Patrolman Herbert Audiss was summoned by Manager E. J. Stevens.

"Arrest that man," said Stevens, pointing to Herman Rocklin, driver of a Yellow taxi, standing in front of the hotel. "He's blockading the passageway."

"Shall I call the wagon?" asked Audiss.

"Not necessary," replied the manager. "We'll just jump into the cab and mosey down to the First precinct."

Stevens and the policeman entered the cab and Rocklin drove them to the station, where Stevens alighted and started towards the entrance.

"One moment, please," said Rocklin, placing a detaining hand on Stevens' sleeve and pointing to the taximeter. "Fifty-five cents. That's the fare for two passengers."

And Stevens paid for the two block ride.

Minister on Vacation Discovers New Comet

Cambridge, Mass., Aug. 23.—Discovery of a new comet by the Rev. Joel H. Metcalf of Winchester while on a vacation at South Hero, Vt., was announced today by the Harvard observatory.

It was the first new comet to be discovered this year, observatory officials said, and the fifth which Mr. Metcalf has to his credit.

It is visible, through a small telescope, in the eastern sky during the early evening, and is moving rapidly northward, indicating that it is fairly close to the earth.

Union Chiefs Warn Men of 7 Months of "Crisis"

LONDON, Aug. 23.—The quarterly report of the General Federation of Trades Unions contains a warning by the management committee.

"November, 1919, to May, 1920, will be fateful months," says the report. "Unless sanity returns and production increases they will be tragic months."

GROOM HOOVER FOR PRESIDENCY

His Friends Want Him on G. O. P. Ticket; In Receptive Mood.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

PARIS, Aug. 23.—Herbert C. Hoover, head of the interallied food commission, is receiving hundreds of letters from friends in the United States asking him to consent to be a candidate for the presidency on the Republican ticket.

Mr. Hoover yesterday replied to a certain well known easterner who wrote asking permission to boost Mr. Hoover and begin a Hoover campaign, stating that he "preferred" not to be a candidate for office as he has given more than five years of his life to public life and had intended to return to California in September with his family and retire.

Fears Hands Will Be Tied.

Mr. Hoover wrote he "disliked the idea of going into politics because he feared political life would require him to abandon certain of his principles and that he could never consent to do." Mr. Hoover added that he planned to live quietly and privately awaiting some future world development whereby he might again proffer his ability and experience in aiding people.

May Run After All.

Certain well informed persons here, familiar with the contents of the letter, declare it is not a refusal to become a candidate, however, and that if Mr. Hoover receives assurances from the G. O. P. that he will be able to maintain his ideals and principles as a presidential candidate he very likely will decide to run.

AIRSHIP GOLIATH FOUND AT LAST; ALL ABOARD SAFE

PARIS, Aug. 23.—[By the Associated Press.]—The French airplane Goliath has landed north of Dakar with a broken propeller. All on board are safe.

The Goliath is reported to have landed near the village of Cayor, about seventy miles northeast of Dakar.

Cayor is isolated and has no modern means of communication. This explains the absence of news for the last week or more.

Since leaving Magador Aug. 16 the only word received of the Goliath was a wireless message saying the airplane was within sixty miles of Dakar. There were eight persons aboard the machine when it left Versailles.

Airplane Efficiency Takes Toll of Two More Lives

San Antonio, Tex., Aug. 23.—Lieut. Reid Haslam of Boston, Mass., and Private Harry Higgins of Pennsylvania were killed late today at Kelly field when a new airplane they were testing fell 200 feet.

SHOOTS WIFE AND ESCORT IN CROWDED CAFE

5,000 Jam Street After Triple Tragedy.

Entering the Royal Canton café, 343 East Forty-third street, Private William E. Stewart, a returned overseas soldier, last night shot and killed his wife, Mrs. Emma Stewart of 2216 Prairie avenue; Charles Schools of 4812 Calumet avenue; and then himself.

Mrs. Stewart and Schools were dining in one of the booths, the tables on the main floor being occupied. They had been there but a short time when Stewart entered, about 9:30 o'clock.

Wearing his soldier's uniform and with his right hand in a sling, he walked directly to the booth and with his left hand drew an army revolver. Aiming carefully at Mrs. Stewart's head, he fired, the bullet enterng back of the right ear.

Turns Gun on Self.

Before Schools could arise the soldier had fired at him, the bullet entering the right temple. Then Stewart turned the revolver on himself.

Waiters and diners were stupified for a moment. Then a condition akin to panic prevailed. A number of women fainted and men cried to the waiters to call the police. A crowd of 5,000 gathered in the street within a few minutes.

In the meantime the bodies lay where they had fallen—Mrs. Stewart and Schools half reclining in their chairs, and Stewart on the floor just outside the booth. They remained thus until the Wabash avenue police arrived.

One Dies in Ambulance.

Mrs. Stewart and her husband were dead. Schools was alive, but unconscious. The ambulance conveyed him to the Washington Park hospital, 437 East Sixtieth street. There it was found he had died en route. He was placed again in the ambulance and taken to a nearby undertaking establishment.

In the café were acquaintances of Mrs. Stewart, among them Miss Anne Collyer, 4410 Calumet avenue. She supplied the police with an excellent account of the shooting. She was in a booth opposite that occupied by the victims.

Woman Describes Shooting.

"I had just seated myself when I heard a shot," she said. "I looked up and saw Stewart. He had just fired at Mrs. Stewart. She had fallen forward.

"The next moment I saw Mr. Schools' head fall forward on the table. Another shot followed. By this time I was so frightened that I sprang up and ran out."

Miss Collyer said that she had been informed by Mrs. Stewart that the latter was about to file a suit for divorce, charging her husband with cruelty and making threats against her life.

Schools had accompanied Mrs. Stewart to the café several times, the police were told, but always as a protector, as the woman feared her husband would harm her if he caught her unescorted.

Letter Indicates Separation.

That they were not living together was indicated by a letter found in Mrs. Stewart's waist. It was from the Chicago Bar association and asked her to return certain articles belonging to her husband. It was dated Aug. 5, 1919, and read:

"We are writing in behalf of your husband, William Stewart, who states that when he entered the military service he left in your charge a suit of clothes, a watch and chain, and a traveling bag which you refused to return to him. He also states you have a pair of diamond cuff links belonging to him which you refuse to return. We hope to hear favorably from you in the near future.

"ATTORNEY RAYMOND WAILL."

Friend Tells of Jealousy.

A. W. Mieras, 4228 Grand boulevard, a friend of Mrs. Stewart, said that Stewart undoubtedly fired the shots while in a jealous rage.

"Mrs. Stewart feared for her life and had told me that her husband several times in the last few weeks had threatened to kill her," he said.

"When Stewart entered the army his wife went to work and saved money. He sent her money frequent-

300 Tommies in Mutiny at Russ Service

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Three hundred soldiers belonging to Warwick, Berkshire, and Gloucester regiments were arrested today at Southampton for refusing to obey orders to embark for France. The ringleaders were driven away in motor lorries.

The soldiers, who had been on leave, are for the most part veterans. They objected to embarking because they had heard they would be sent to the Black sea after their arrival in France, whereas they had received promises that no one would be sent to Russia unless he volunteered.

The men are quartered in a public park. Perfect order prevailed.

A war office statement tonight says that the men were being sent to Turkey, not to Russia.

RESIGNATION OF ARCHDUKE JOSEPH IS CONFIRMED

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

BUDAPEST, Aug. 23.—Archduke Joseph and the cabinet of Premier Friedrich have resigned as the result of the refusal of the peace conference to recognize them.

[This confirms the exclusive cable from Henry Wales in Paris to The Tribune yesterday.]

CALL FOR A SHOWDOWN.

BUDAPEST, Aug. 22.—[Delayed.]—[By the Associated Press.]—In order to force the situation, representatives of the different Hungarian parties have decided to request of the allies direct declarations of their attitude toward Archduke Joseph. While the representations from Paris on this point have been unequivocal, they have been couched in diplomatic terms, apparently affording the archduke and his supporters room for evasion.

Meantime, the Roumanian propaganda continues industriously. The unfavorable reception of overtures toward joint action with Roumania is so pronounced in Hungary that the Roumanian agents have taken another tack, pointing out the advantages of an economic alliance carrying also some degree of political harmony along certain lines. In addition, they make promises about sharing the natural resources of Transylvania.

There is now some talk of a directorate form of government pending the elections, composed, probably, of three men representing the leading political elements.

GIVE UP HOPE OF FINDING 2 U. S. LOST AVIATORS

San Diego, Cal., Aug. 23.—All hope of finding Lieuts. Frederick Waterhouse and Cecil H. Connelly, aviators, believed lost in Mexico, has been abandoned, according to statements by officers at Rockwell field tonight. Col. Arthur J. Hanlon, commanding, said that so far as airplane search is concerned the army has done all it can do.

Mexican Searchers Return.

Calexico, Cal., Aug. 23.—All Mexican cavalrymen except one patrol who have been searching in Lower California for the two lost American aviators have returned without any trace of the men.

The cavalrymen, who are a part of Gov. Cantu's forces, have been operating under the direction of Col. Hipolito Baranca with headquarters at Mexicali, directly across the line. They have been searching the northern part of Lower California.

The American army forces here reported no news of the missing aviators up to 2 o'clock today.

League Is Controversial, Gillett Says of Prayer

Washington, D. C., Aug. 23.—Speaker Gillett tonight answered recent charges of Representative Heflin, Alabama, that Republicans were preventing the blind house chaplain from mentioning the league of nations in his daily prayer.

"My position is that the chaplain in his prayers should not mention controversial subjects," said Gillett, who added he had spoken to the chaplain about the matter after he had prayed for the league.

Rev. Couden, the chaplain, also stated the speaker had mentioned the matter to him, but declared that he had since prayed for the fundamental principles of the league.

50 GRAFT AND RIOT SUSPECTS TAKEN IN RAIDS

Hoyne Rakes Black Belt in New War on City Hall.

State's Attorney Hoyne declared a new graft war yesterday against the mayor and his political associates at the city hall.

In a series of raids, through the "black belt" and in the East Chicago avenue police district, the prosecutor's aids seized more than fifty Negroes, thirty of whom, Mr. Hoyne declared, have been identified as primarily responsible for the recent race rioting.

Rifles, magazine pistols, revolvers, ammunition, knives, razors, and blackjacks also were confiscated.

In a statement made last night the state's attorney charged that the riots were launched and carried on chiefly by Negro thugs, operating in six motor cars, with three gambling resorts as their base. These resorts, he said, are operating under the protection of city hall politicians and police officials.

Blames Mayor for Riots.

Upon the city administration the prosecutor laid primary responsibility for the racial disorders. In its anxiety to control the Negro vote, he said, it had encouraged the lawless element of the Second ward until conditions there are worse than when he tried former Chief of Police Charles Healey and former Ald. Oscar de Priest on graft charges in 1917.

The first deed of violence during the riots, Mr. Hoyne declared, followed a quarrel between Negro members of the Ink Well club, a crap shooting organization which played near the Twenty-ninth street beach, and a white policeman named Callahan, over whether the latter was affording them sufficient protection.

Deputy Sheriffs Accused.

The prosecutor claimed further to have uncovered evidence that after the riots a slush fund of $800 was raised among Negroes to effect the release of Deputy Sheriffs Henry Harris and Scott J. Brown, members of their race, arrested July 28 in an automobile from which a white woman and a boy had been shot.

The men were discharge [illegible] Judge Barasa in the Municipal court. Neither the judge nor Sheriff Peters, who commissioned the men, could be reached last night.

Ready for Grand Jury.

The prosecutor announced that this evidence, with a mass of other detail gathered in an all night interrogation of the fifty prisoners, would be presented to the grand jury tomorrow morning.

He predicted other arrests today.

Preparations for the raids have been in progress for more than a week. They were guarded with the utmost secrecy.

Early yesterday afternoon, sixty-four policemen, in uniform and plain clothes, met in the criminal courts building.

List of Places Raided.

At 2 o'clock forty-nine of the number departed in seven automobiles and half an hour later battered their way simultaneously into the following "black belt" resorts, where weapons, ammunition and prisoners were seized.

The Pekin, Twenty-seventh and State streets; a theater and "black and tan" dance hall with clubrooms on the second floor, against which numerous complaints have been made to the police.

The Elite, 3030 State street; a saloon and "black and tan" cabaret, where Negro rioters are said to have obtained ammunition for raids against the whites.

The Rainier Club, 3010 State street; devoted to gambling, from which two of the six automobiles used by colored rioters operated.

The Pioneer Club, 3512 State street; also a gambling resort, and the base of operations for two other of the rioters' automobiles.

Mexican Frank's Place, Thirty-fifth and State streets; a restaurant and gambling resort.

Bill Lewis' Club, 12 East Thirty-fifth street, a gambling resort, from which the remaining two of the rioters' cars are alleged to have started.

Julius Venvenuti's saloon, 2900 Federal street; where gambling also goes on and where rioters are alleged to have obtained ammunition.

These raids were supplemented by forays into the East Chicago avenue police district and others into the "black belt" throughout the night.

Among the principal persons seized were:

Art Cadozas, proprietor of the Elite and a figure in the trial of former Ald. Oscar De Priest and former Chief of Police Charles C. Healey, who is said to have dispatched his employés on expeditions of shooting.

"Cash" Harris, proprietor of the Rainier, club, who is charged with organizing the first of the mobs in the race riots and with procuring the six automobiles to convey it on its terror trips.

Moss Thompson, said to be Moss Moore, bartender at the Elite, which is managed by Harris for Cadozas. Moore is accused of being among the rioters enlisted by Harris.

Arms Are Seized.

Lawrence Newby, manager of the Pekin, where the Hoyne raiders seized two rifles, two revolvers, and ammunition from a chest in front of the bar.

Will Harris, manager of the Rainier club, where the raiders found three guns, three razors, blackjacks, and ammunition stored.

Edward Waters, assistant to Harris.

—— Turner, manager of the Pioneer club, where the raiders found twenty-four knives in a drawer of a pool table, and two magazine pistols, four revolvers, ammunition, and incendiary literature secreted in a steel locker.

John Martin, an employé of the Pioneer club.

Fred Dean, a white man, who is accused of conducting the crap game at Mexican Frank's place.

Others Are Sought.

Others whom Mr. Hoyne expected to have in custody before morning were:

Packey McFarland and Jimmy Williams, proprietors of the Pioneer club, who are alleged to have aided Harris in organizing rioters.

"Shug" Burrell, Dickey Basket, and "Rough" Towser, charged with participating in "Cash" Harris' original raid against the whites.

Alonzo Barrett, alias Lumsey, an alleged rioter and companion of Deputy Sheriff Henry Harris, who was held on a rioting charge July 28.

Suppliers of Ammunition.

Clarence Owne, a handbook operator, from whose home at Twenty-fourth and Dearborn streets, as well as in Cadozas' saloon, the colored rioters are said to have obtained much of their ammunition.

Fred Stewart, a Socialist agitator and alleged companion of "Cash" Harris' band of thugs, who is said to have spurred on the rioters.

Will James, proprietor of a disorderly house at Thirty-seventh street and Wabash avenue, a member of the same coterie.

Deputy Sheriff Scott J. Brown, also accused of inciting to riot as early as July 1. On July 4 he is said to have urged Negroes to go to Washington park and "do as they pleased."

Chief of Police Garrity denied knowledge of gambling or existence of disorderly houses in the Second ward. He further said he was unaware that politicians were active in protecting vice and crime.

"If Mr. Hoyne has any evidence I shall be more than glad to receive it," he said, "and I shall act upon it immediately."

The mayor was out of town and efforts to reach him at Fox lake, where he was reported to be a guest of the home of Fred Lundin, failed.

HOW RAIDS WERE MADE

Though the prosecutor's raiders were drawn from the police force, each party was in charge of a member of the state's attorney's staff.

The police received orders and instructions, which were not made known to the rank and file until the various automobiles were near their destination.

Two raids were conducted on the Elite. The first netted only the bartender, who gave the name of Thompson, but shortly a party was redispatched from the prosecutor's office and found Cadozas and Harris in the place.

Cadozas seemed particularly incensed at the state's attorney's course.

He said he intended to let Mr. Hoyne know the machinations of "some white ——" and elected to ride down town in his own automobile.

The remainder of the raids stirred hardly a ripple of excitement.

A parade of marines, on the way to the White Sox ball park, was passing at Thirty-fifth and State streets when the state's attorney's squad arrived before the Pioneer club.

In consequence, hardly any one noticed the officers enter the passage between two buildings which leads to the entrance in the rear. Nor did forty or fifty gamblers know of the law's approach until they had been surrounded.

The steel locker, which contained the club's arsenal, resisted attack for some time. None appeared able to produce a key, so eventually the police decided to use a jimmy.

When the door was forced the magazine pistols, revolvers, and ammunition were found wrapped in some old clothing.

Twenty-five gamblers were similarly taken by surprise when the police arrived at the Rainier club. At that place razors, guns, ammunition, and knives were found stored in a desk.

The players took the intrusion good naturedly and joked with the officers until they departed.

At the Pekin the cache of weapons was found in a box in front of the bar. The raiders followed a diagram prepared by one of the state's attorney's Negro investigators. It proved correct in all details.

The descent on Mexican Frank's place proved a disappointment. The prosecutor's information indicated that a large crap game would be in progress. But Dean, the keeper, was alone, except for a few patrons of the dairy lunchroom.

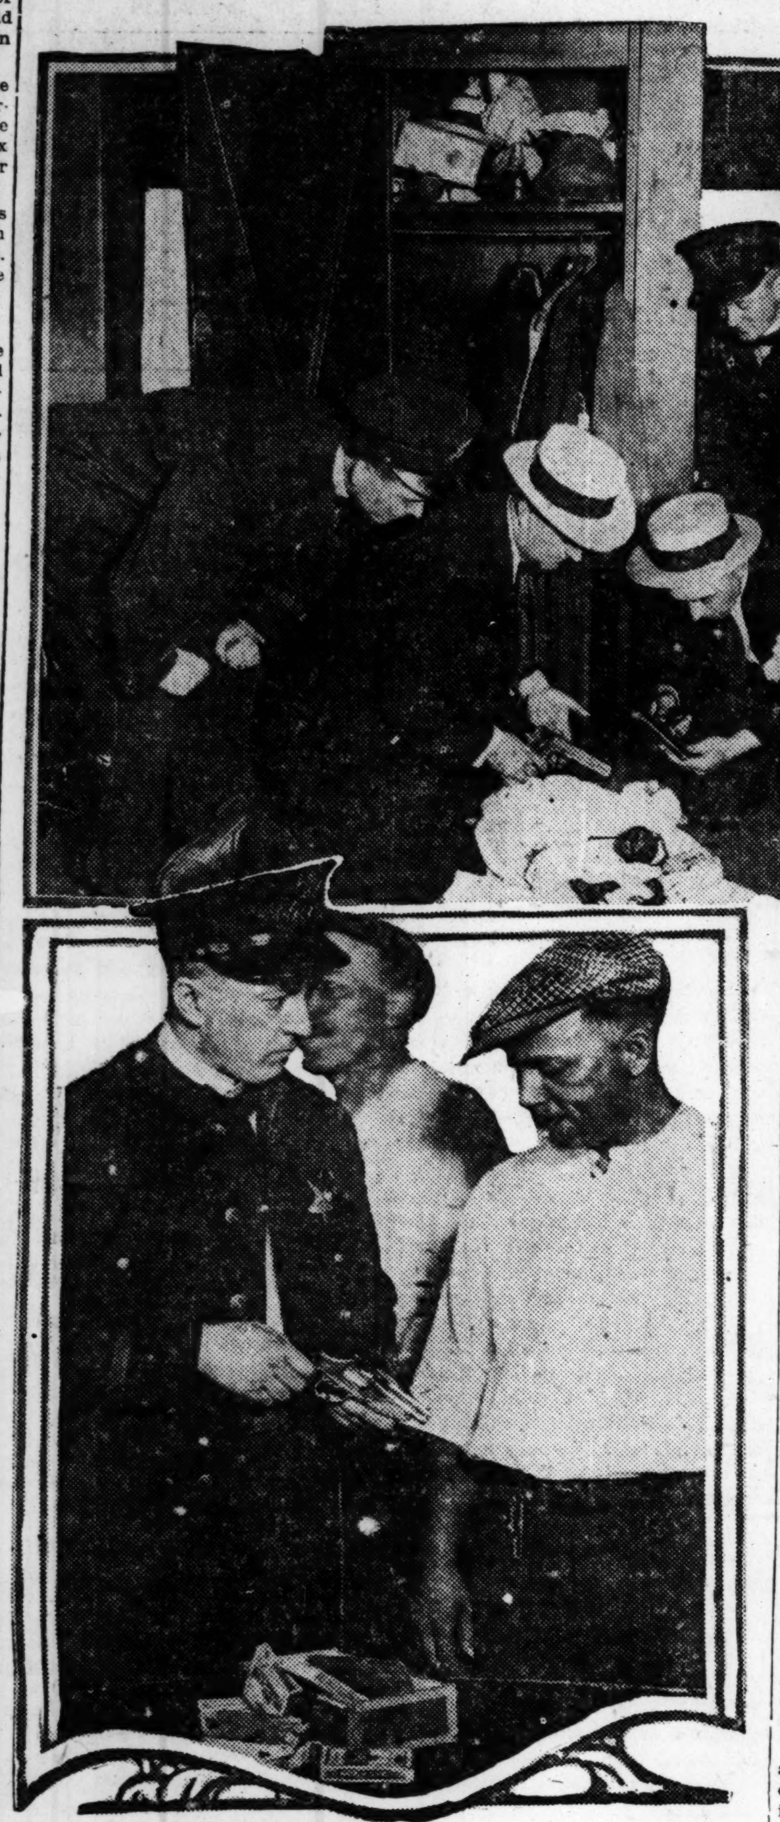
In the Upper Picture the Police Are Shown in the Pioneer Club at 3512 South State Street, Where Twelve Revolvers Were Obtained; in the Lower an Incident to the Raid on the Rainier Club at 3010 South State Street Is Portrayed.



STORY OF RIOTS

The events which led up to the raids were described in a statement by the state's attorney as follows:

"Before the rioting had been under way more than forty-eight hours, I arranged through private detective agencies for the employment of both colored and white investigators, with instructions to report every murder or case of violence, burning or looting which they could discover impartially, and give the names of all possible witnesses who could testify to these occurrences.

"They were also instructed to report on conditions in the districts where the rioting occurred.

"Early in August some of our colored investigators reported women of the street and other dissolute women were doing all they could to bring about a renewal of the riots; that during the rioting they had been successful in picking pockets and obtaining property from homes which had been abandoned.

"Gambling houses were reported to be wide open and as being the headquarters for the worst toughs in the 'black belt.'

"The proprietors of three separate gambling houses in the 'black belt' each furnished two automobiles, into which they loaded their employés, followers, and other toughs, who were provided with guns to invade the white districts.

"This was on Sunday afternoon, when news was received that the Williams boy was drowned.

"These six machines, after invading the Lake Michigan district, returned to State street and picked up two deputy sheriffs, Henry Harris and Scott J. Brown, followers of ex-Alderman Oscar De Priest, through whom they were appointed by Sheriff Charles Peters.

"The gambling houses in question were the Rainier club, 3010 South State street, proprietor 'Cash' Harris, and the Pioneer club, 3016 South State street, operated by Packey McFarland and Jimmy Williams. The third gambling house is that operated by Bill Lewis at 12 East Thirty-fifth street, with his partner Steve Markey.

Accuses "Cash" Harris.

"'Cash' Harris is said to be the real author of the riots and to have visited the other gambling houses to organize the mobs in procuring the machines.

"In the original mob organized by these gamblers were 'Shug' Burrell, wounded in the hand; Moos Moore, bartender at 3030 South State street, which is managed by 'Cash' Harris for Arthur Cadozas; Dickey Basket and 'Rough' Towser.

"According to my reports, Harris has cleared nearly $30,000 in the last few months at 3010 South State street, his victims being mostly colored workingmen. The entrance to his place is at 3018 South State street.

"In anticipation of possible raids, the getaway arranged was through an open window on to the roof of an adjoining building.

POLICE ARE DEFIED

"Harris has openly defied the police captain in the district for a long time.

"After the first days of rioting a police order was issued to close saloons and poolrooms in the district in which Harris operated. Nevertheless, in defiance of this order, he kept his joint at 3010 South State street open on a larger scale than ever.

"On the night of July 28, when Deputy Sheriff Henry Harris and others were arrested at Twenty-seventh street and Wentworth avenue, one man escaped. His name is Alonzo Barrett, alias Lumsey, an ex-convict and New York police character. He resides with Gertie Jordan, shoplifter and stickup woman, at 3028 South State street. He was driven from New York about two years ago and then came to Chicago, during which time he has twice been arrested in State street stores, but fences to whom he disposed of stolen goods are said to have brought about his release.

Names "Munition Centers."

"The colored gamblers and thugs who used automobiles Sunday, Monday and Tuesday during the rioting are said to have obtained much of their ammunition at Elite No. 1, run by 'Cash' Harris, and the home of Clarence Owens, Twenty-fourth and Dearborn streets, who runs a handbook in the saloon of Bill Lewis.

"It may be pertinent to inquire why the police would not obtain the foregoing information during the past months and years, if my investigators have been able to obtain it in a few days or weeks.

"During the early days of the riot ex-Alderman De Priest was frequently in company with Fred Stewart, one of his followers, and said by some of the colored people to be his spokesman. Stewart is an athlete and socialist, according to his professions.

"'Shug' Burrell, 'Rough' Towser and Will James during this time were also in their company. James conducts a disorderly house at the southwest corner of Thirty-seventh street and Wabash avenue and is interested in a crap game at 3742 South State street with one Rothschild, who poses as a Jew, but is said to be a colored man.

AGITATORS ARE BUSY

"During the rioting Stewart frequently urged colored workers to go where feeling was strong against them. He suggested their going particularly to Argo.

"Deputy Sheriff Scott J. Brown, as early as July 1, was constantly talking race riots and was spreading the report that the blacks would be run out of Washington park on July 4.

"He urged that the Negroes arm themselves and go to the park on that date and do as they pleased.

"He said he proposed to go and subsequently moved about with a large gun in place of the smaller one he previously carried and a cartridge belt. This equipment he said he would take to the park.

"Several leaders of colored mobs, thugs and hoodlums, were hanging about Ex-Alderman De Priest's place during the days of the riots.

Saloon Men Accused.

"My reports show that frequently the winners of considerable sums of money at gambling in the Rainier club. 3010 South State street, were followed from this place by trailers, who would hold them up and rob them of their winnings. It is charged that these trailers operated with the knowledge of Harris. One colored man was murdered by some of these trailers.

"Julius Vannucci or Venvenuti, 2900 Federal street, encouraged rioting and his saloon was made a headquarters for various mobs of rioters.

"A large number of guns, about thirty, were held by him in pawn, but they were returned to their Negro owners at the time of the rioting for use in the riots.

"In the flat adjoining his saloon he operates a gambling game imported from Georgia, known as 'skin.' He also operates a gambling joint opposite his saloon, called 'The Point.' Here craps is the form of gambling, chiefly.

Calls Carnival Disgrace.

"Mexican Frank's gambling house at 3434-3440 South State street is another headquarters for Will James, "Rough" Towser, and "Shug" Burrell, who represent the toughest element of the Negro race and are charged with having been responsible for many stickups along Michigan avenue and elsewhere. Mexican Frank's gambling house obtained such notoriety before and during the trial of Oscar De Priest and was thoroughly exposed, but remains undisturbed by the police.

"Saturday afternoon we had taken in custody Axel Schelby, 3420 Michigan avenue, as the driver of the automobile which on July 28, about 6:30 p. m., was driven through the district between Thirty-fifth street and Forty-seventh street. In this car were Deputy Sheriff Henry Harris, 4046 Dearborn street; Scott J. Brown, 26 East Thirty-seventh place; Robert Cummings, 3346 South Park avenue; William Lyfles, 3417 Wabash avenue; Frank Brown, 3706 Prairie avenue, and Schelby, the driver.

One Case Dismissed.

"This car started out on one of its rampages on Thirty-fifth street and was driven to Lowe avenue, thence to Thirty-ninth street, thence to Wallace street, thence to Root street, and after going west finally was driven to Forty-seventh street and east to Wentworth avenue. The occupants were arrested on Wentworh avenue, between Forty-third and Forty-fourth streets.

SLAP AT BARASA

"The case first came up before Judge Barasa and the police were not present.

"The judge stated that unless the witnesses were present when the case came up again, it would be dismissed for want of prosecution.

"When the case again came up the officers were not present and it was dismissed.

"The police officers subsequently had the judge reinstate the case and there was a hearing in court, at which the defendants were represented by ex-Ald. Oscar De Priest and counsel.

"Judge Barasa, after giving the officers a brief hearing, dismissed the case.

"The evidence against these men will be presented to the grand jury on Monday despite their claims that they were acting in self defense.

"We have ten witnesses, including police officers and citizens, to show that the occupants of this car were the aggressors throughout their automobile ride and were wantonly shooting down every white person they saw.

"They shot, among others, one woman and a boy, threatened several others with thier guns, and shot into a store kept by a woman on Wentworth avenue."

"City Hall Politics Caused Riots"—Hoyne

STATE'S ATTORNEY HOYNE, in a general statement issued yesterday shortly after his raiders left the Criminal courts building for the "black belt," gave his reasons for his charge Mayor Thompson and his political associates primarily were responsible for the recent race rioting.

In the course of the statement Mr. Hoyne says:

"Since the race riots at the end of July I have been repeatedly asked by the newspapers and various organizations for a statement as to the causes of the murders and assaults which occurred for several days.

"I believe as a result of our weeks of investigation I am now able to definitely answer these questions.

"Black Belt" Politics.

"These riots and the crimes which attended them may be directly traced to the 'black belt' politics of the city hall organization leaders, black and white, who have not only permitted but encouraged and participated in the profits of gambling, disorderly saloons and hotels, and other violations of law.

"They have preached by precept and example that the Illinois laws and Chicago ordinances are a joke and that the police force and other public officers do not count so long as a colored man has a sufficient political pull to stand in right with the city hall organization or its leaders.

"Commanding officers in the police department and their subordinates who have sought to do their duty and interfere with the protected grafters in the 'black belt' have been threatened with the loss of their positions or. a transfer to the 'woods.' The police force of Chicago has been and is demoralized by reason of these tactics.

"Neither the mayor of Chicago, his appointed officers, nor the police can plead ignorance of these conditions. They were fully brought home to their attention during the long trial of Charles C. Healey, former superintendent of police, and of Oscar De Priest, former alderman from the Second ward.

"Instead of conditions having improved, they have become worse, and the vicious Negro element of the "black belt" has become more arrogant, more insulting and lawless in their defiance of decency. By reason of the gambling houses, poolrooms, hotels, and other disorderly places which have been permitted to run day and night the decent colored people, who have ordinary human aspirations and a desire for comfortable, clean, quiet homes, have found residence in the neighborhood of these joints intolerable.

Offer Special Privileges.

"The city hall leaders have not preached to the Negro the doctrine of equal rights, but the doctrine of special rights and privileges, provided they have a political pull. In no other section of Chicago is open gambling, with the attendant cappers on the sidewalks, permitted.

"These leaders, in their effort to control the Negro vote, have led the credulous and ignorant to hope for Negro domination and they seem to have forgotten entirely the rights of other persons of other color or race.

"The fear of losing the colored vote by offending the leaders of the vicious element has not only affected the police force, but seems to have spread to other public officials, including some of the judges on the bench. I, of course, am referring to public officers elected by the Republican party, not because as a whole or on the average Democratic officials are 100 per cent free from this fault, but because they are without hope of obtaining any considerable percentage of the Negro vote in Chicago.

Deneen Faction Attacked.

"The Deneen faction of the Republican party has struggled desperately to entice away from the city hall administration a portion of the colored vote and has used the same methods as the city hall leaders to gain this object; that is, it has appealed to the colored leaders who have in their following the criminal and the lawless.

"That the race riots of July 26, 27, 28, and the days following were the logical and necessary outcome of this criminality and lawlessness is easily shown. The public have been led to believe that the origin of these riots is to be found in a quarrel at a south side bathing beach.

Crap Games Started Riots.

"The truth is, according to my investigators, that its origin was in a crap game operated not far from the beach and protected by a police officer.

"On the Sunday in question, while this gambling game was in operation, a quarrel arose between some of the black and white participants. This quarrel was continued to and extended to the bathing beach about a block away. It did not have its origin in the "black belt" or in the stockyards districts or any of the parks.

"As soon as word of the drowning of the boy Williams, which was the outcome of this beach quarrel, reached the "black belt," a crowd of black gamblers, gun men and their followers, protected violators of the law, hurriedly gathered arms and rushed into six automobiles and started for the lake down Thirty-first street.

"Through the subsequent days of the rioting these men actively participated in shooting whites on sight and emptying their guns into the windows of houses which they passed."

MAYOR WEEK ENDING; NO ONE ELSE REPLIES TO HOYNE CHARGES

MAYOR THOMPSON was not in the city to answer Mr. Hoyne's charges. He left the city Friday night for a week end at the Fox lake summer home of Fred Lundin. A telephone message to Mr. Lundin's summer place elicited the information that the mayor left yesterday afternoon for an automobile trip around the lake and might not return until today.

In the absence of the mayor, members of his cabinet who are not vacationing were loath to comment on Mr. Hoyne's charges. One of them said that Mr. Hoyne has been making graft charges against the Thompson administration for six years and that he has yet to prove most of his declarations. All of the mayor's friends saw politics in the declarations of the state's attorney.

"If there is any answer to Hoyne's statements it must come from the mayor, who will be back at his desk Monday morning," said Percy B. Coffin, president of the city civil service commission. "There is no one in the city empowered to speak for him."

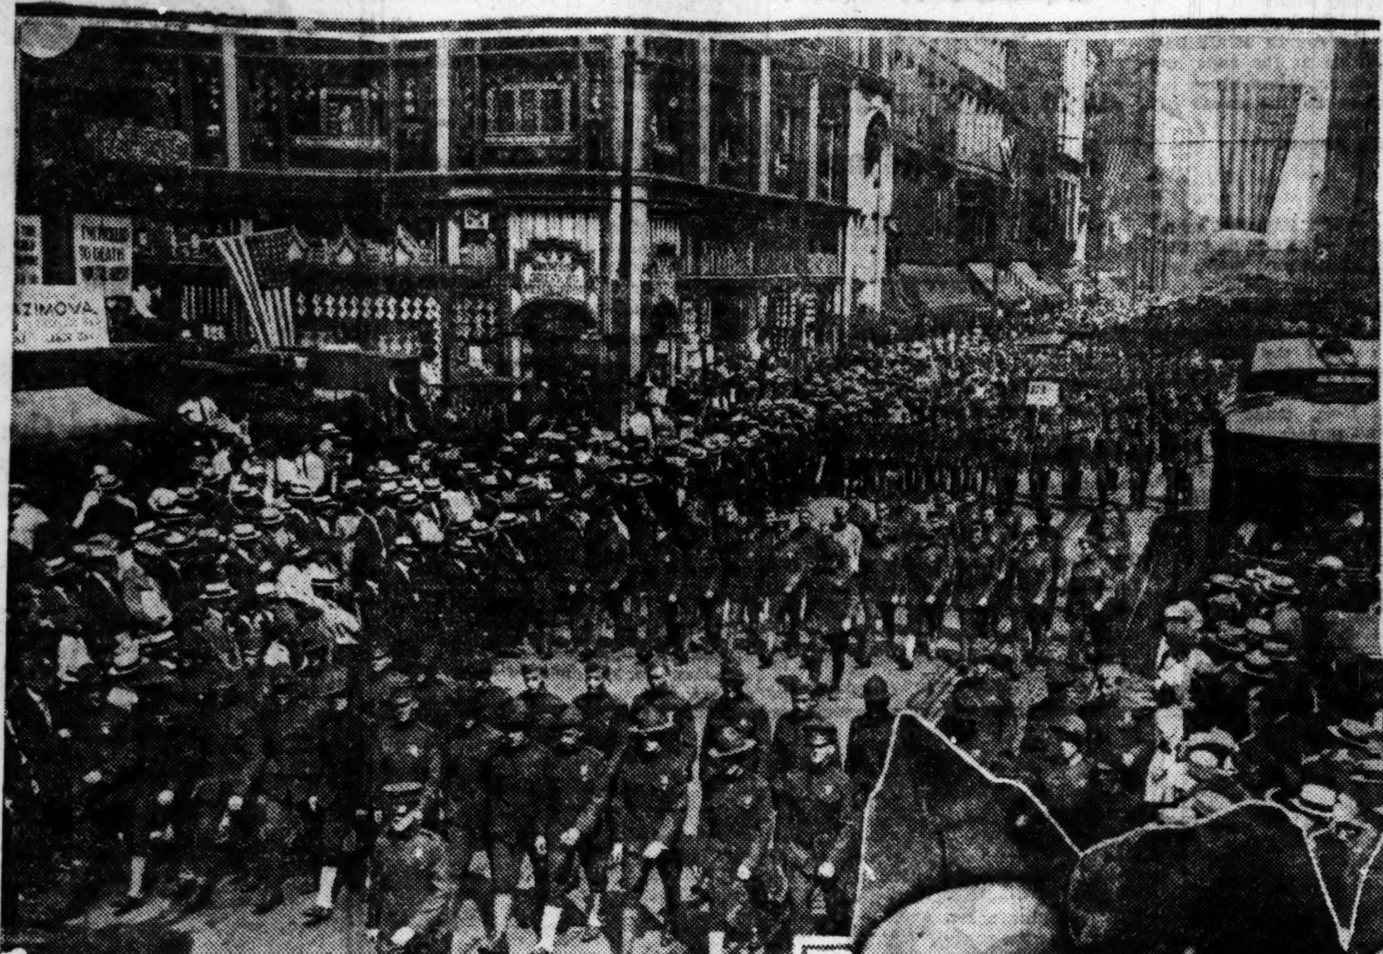
The Devil Dogs Have Their Glory Day in Chicago

How the City and State Formally Welcomed Home 2,500 Hero Members of the Marine Corps Yesterday.



PARADE OF THE MARINES IN STATE STREET.

GOVERNOR HUGS HERO MARINES AT GLORY FETE

Two Receive War Cross; City Hails 2,500 as Conquerors.

"The marines have landed and have the situation well in hand."

For years that message has flashed in from all corners of the globe where the "Leathernecks" have gone to bring order out of chaos.

And it holds now.

The marines, 2,500 of 'em, veterans of all the concentrated essence of inferno the German high command could direct on the American sectors at Soissons, Chateau Thierry, Mont Blanc, Belleau Wood, St. Mihiel, and the Argonne, landed on the heart of Chicago at 11 o'clock yesterday morning.

By noon, when they wound up their parade along Michigan avenue and through the loop at La Salle and Madison streets, the situation was "well in hand." Any man in marine uniform could look anywhere in the loop, ask for anything, and get it.

Lowden Bestows Medals.

The high spot of the celebration came at the luncheon at the Hotel La Salle. Gov. Lowden called Sergt. Charles F. MacCarthy of the 7th Company, 5th Marines, before the speakers' table to pin on his breast a Croix de Guerre awarded by Gen. Petain.

The governor read the citation for the war cross, which told how MacCarthy, "his chief having been wounded and taken away, himself took command of the men, whom he led and encouraged until he was wounded."

"I haven't learned how to kiss a man yet," said the governor, "but I can hug you right here until you can't stand it any more."

And, while the "devil dogs" in front howled their enthusiastic approbation, the governor did just that thing, while "Mac" blushed and struggled and tried to hold a last remaining shred of dignity.

Another Cross, Another Hug.

Private William H. Behr, also of the 5th Marines, was called before the governor for a Croix de Guerre immediately after Sergeant MacCarthy had been awarded his. The governor hugged the private with as much enthusiasm as he had the sergeant, and read the citation:

"On June 9, 1918, he went to the aid of a French section and aided them to break the attack of three waves of Germans and in putting the enemy to flight, receiving a serious wound during the action."

The governor arrived in Chicago early in the morning to attend the Marines' celebration. He was in the reviewing stand just south of the Art Institute, when the column, in platoon front, filed past. With him were Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, commander of the central department and his staff; Admiral Bassell, commandant at Great Lakes, and his aides; Chief Garrity, representing the city in the absence of Mayor Thompson; Captain L. W. Putnam and Major Walker of the local Marine headquarters; Samuel P. Thrasher and six hundred members of the Marine League of Chicago, and friends and relatives of each of the 2,500 parading marines.

First the police escort and the band moved north along Michigan avenue from Van Buren street.

A Trio of Heroes.

Then came Capt. Mark Smith of the 6th Marines, twice wounded and once gassed during the activities of the 4th brigade, as commander of the column. With him were Lieut. Emmett Trainor, an attorney for the Santa Fé railroad, who fought with the 74th company of the 6th regiment and lost an arm during the fighting, and Lieut. C. W. Brooks, who won the Croix de Guerre and the American Distinguished Service cross.

As the column swung west in Randolph street, then south in State street, hundreds of girls from the windows of Marshall Field & Co.'s building threw flowers upon the heads of the marching men.

Too Bashful to March.

There was one marine who didn't parade. He was John J. Kelly, 6558 Dorchester avenue. During his travels with the 5th regiment he won the Congressional Medal of Honor, the Distinguished Service Cross, the French Medaille Militaire, the Croix de Guerre, with palm, and the Gold Cross of Montenegro.

But Kelly's a bashful kid, for all that. His buddies tell a story that when the commander in chief of the A. E. F., Gen. Pershing, came to the 5th marines to decorate him with some of the medals Kelly was digging a ditch. He was told the general was waiting for him.

"Aw, gee," said Kelly, "I'm too busy for that stuff. Tell him to leave 'em with the adjutant."

Once the "devil dogs" were corraled in the two great dining halls on the nineteenth floor of the La Salle, and the "chow" was put before them, the war memoirs began.

When the food had been taken aboard, the two dining rooms were concentrated in one, and Col. Abel Davis, who commanded the 132d infantry overseas and who has been acting as chairman of the Marine day committee, introduced the speakers.

Mr. Thrasher, whose son died with the 5th marines at Belleau woods—his last words, "They've got me, but keep after them and give them hell," were told Mr. Thrasher two days ago for the first time by two members of the boy's company—told the "boys" of the permanent Marine club that has been opened at 17 North Wabash avenue for all ex-marines and marines still in the service.

Lowden Gives State Welcome.

Then Gov. Lowden was introduced and paid the respects of the state to the men. When he finished there were three cheers for the governor and then three more for "the next president of the United States."

From the dinner the marines went to a special train on the Northwestern elevated at Wells and Madison streets, to be taken to the ball game at White Sox park. From the game they scattered to their homes to "slick up" for the dance that started at 9 o'clock in the 1st regiment armory, Sixteenth street and Michigan avenue.

POLICE CAPTURE STOLEN AUTO IN RUNNING BATTLE

A seven passenger automobile belonging to Miss Minnie Selmier of 4513 North Racine avenue, which was stolen on the night of Aug. 20, was recovered yesterday by Detective Sergeants Schupolski and Brandt of the Chicago avenue station.

The two detectives were standing in front of the police station when they saw the car pass, driven by two men whom they recognized as pickpockets. They followed in a police automobile, and chased the men down Chicago avenue to Halsted and on Halsted street to Erie street, firing several shots at the back of the car.

At Erie street the men abandoned the car, ran into an alley, and escaped.

"ROCK OF THE MARNE" REGIMENT IS BACK FROM WAR SCENES

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—[Special]—Six transports docking here today brought 5,886 men of the 3d division the unit which took part in six major operations in France. Included in the roster is the 38th infantry, known as the "rock of the Marne," which won and held the most important road to Paris after the German offensive in July.

On board the steamship Nansemond, one of the vessels arriving today, was the bride of Lieut. S. Kenneth Griffen of Bridgeport, Conn. She is the first German girl brought here since the war.

The other ships in were the Prinz Frederick Wilhelm, the Sol Navis, the Huron, the Powhatan, and the Madawaska.

Maj. Gen. Robert Lee Howze, who commanded the 3d division in France, praised the work of his men and said their fine morale was due to Maj. Gen. Joseph P. Dickman, who commanded them until they entered the Argonne.

Before leaving France two monuments, one to the dead and the other to the achievements of the 3d division, were dedicated at Chateau Thierry. In all 70,000 men casuals or replacement troops passed through the division.

Gen. Howze wears the Distinguished Service medal, the Croix de Guerre, the Legion of Honor, and the Congressional Medal of Honor, which was awarded in 1891 in an Indian campaign.

Failure to Salute Leads to Fake Sailor's Capture

As Ensign Eugene Lounstur, stationed at Great Lakes, was walking down West Madison street yesterday he passed a sailor who failed to salute. He asked him why he refused to recognize his superior officer, and the answer was not satisfactory. Ensign Lounstur took him to the West Chicago avenue station, where he admitted that he was not a sailor. He gave the name of Clarence Smith of 410 West Seventy-ninth street.

254 RENT "KICKS" READY FOR TAX BODY TOMORROW

Three complaints of excessive rent boosts received yesterday by the council rent committee brought the total which the committee will place before the board or review tomorrow up to 254.

In a letter to Ald. A. J. Fisher, chairman, L. C. Hinton, 4603 North Western avenue, declared L. L. McKay, 753 Junior terrace, has increased rents from $40 to $65.

Mrs. Spiedel, 3913 West Division street, complained the rent of her rooms, in the rear of a store, has jumped $5 a month since she has refused to trade with the proprietor of the store, to whom she pays the rent.

The third complaint was from tenants of the Evergreen apartments, 4801-13 Washington boulevard, who are dissatisfied with rent increases of $10 a month on four room and $15 on five room apartments.

WAR CROSS FOR CHICAGO BOY; KISSES BARRED

Page Sigmund H. Moss, formerly Sergt. Moss of the United States ambulance unit No. 609.

The army wants him.

If he doesn't duck out of sight forever at that line tell him the army isn't trying to pull him back into the service, but merely wants to turn over to him a French Croix de Guerre that was forwarded to the local recruiting office, 526 South State street, with no other address than Sergt. Maj. Sigmund H. Moss, Dorchester avenue, Chicago.

Lieut. B. W. Beers of the recruiting office took a look at the length of Dorchester avenue on the map and decided he'd ask THE TRIBUNE to find Citizen Moss rather than start out on foot to find him.

Note.—Lieut. Beers positively will not kiss the recipient of the war cross, even if it is the French custom at such presentations.

Darrough is from Milford, Ill., while his bride to be is from Kankakee.

HOUSE WILL QUIZ BAKER ON YANKS KEPT IN SIBERIA

Lansing Also to Testify; Chicagoans Sob at Tale of Exiles.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 23.—[Special.]—Secretary Lansing and Secretary Baker will be summoned before the house committee on foreign affairs to discuss American troops in Siberia.

The committee decided to take this action today after listening to the delegation of nine Chicagoans who urged President Wilson Wednesday last to recall the drafted men at once, even though regulars are kept there.

Representative Porter, Pennsylvania, committee chairman, expressed his opinion that the drafted men were sent to Siberia with "absolutely no justification in law." He said the time had come for congress to "challenge the extraordinary use of the army." He declared that if troops could be sent to Siberia without authorization from congress they could be sent anywhere.

Why? Resolution Asks.

The committee had under consideration a resolution introduced by Representative Rhodes, Missouri, calling for information from the war department as to the reason for keeping soldiers in Siberia, the number of Japanese and Italian soldiers now in that country, and why Great Britain and France have not sent forces.

There was an affecting scene during the testimony of the Chicago delegation. Fred McAver, chairman, broke into tears while addressing the committee and was obliged to leave the room. Mrs. K. Alexander, one of the other members of the delegation, also wept as the others told their stories.

Apologizing for being unable to restrain their emotions, Mr. McAver said the boys went away gladly to fight Germany. Hopes were high at home and among the boys that they would come home in June of this year, but repeated postponements of the time had discouraged their parents.

Pledged Early Return.

Finally, he said, the delegation decided to come to Washington. He told of his visit to the adjutant general's office yesterday, where he was told that 2,500 of the drafted men will return to this country as soon as a transport, now en route with replacements, arrives there; and that 3,400 of those in Siberia had enlisted for further service, making only 1,600 whose return would be delayed.

"The president received us nicely, but did not give us any definite promise," said Mr. McAver. "He said the job in France was done, but that the job in Siberia was not. He said, 'Go back to your people' and he would take it up with the war department and find out what the situation is."

"You have a son over there?" inquired Chairman Porter, when the witness began to sob.

"Yes," he replied and hurried from the room. Members of the committee sat silent as half a dozen of the delegates restrained their tears only with difficulty.

CRYSTAL GAZER TELLS MRS. DEAN OF MISSING GEM

$6,000 Pin Picked Up by Man Who Gave It to a Woman.

A $6,000 sapphire and diamond breastpin, which has been carried across the ocean twenty times, over the sands of the Sahara, along the Red sea, and through almost every foreign country, has been lost in the loop.

It is the property of Mrs. Ella Wood Dean, society woman, novelist, and globe trotter, and she says it cannot be duplicated. It had been in her possession for twenty years.

The brooch was dropped somewhere between her residence, 116 East Walton place, and the loop on July 29, the first day of the street car strike. She has instructed the Bank of Commerce to pay $1,000 for its return.

Surrounded by Diamonds.

The missing jewel is described as a 9 karat sapphire surrounded by thirty diamonds in a cluster. It is formed in two circles around the center stone and set in gold of an old fashioned design.

Last week Mrs. Dean sought the advice of a local crystal gazer. After peering at the small crystal ball, the dealer in the occult gave forth the information that the pin had been picked up in the loop by a man who had given it to a woman. She further told that the present possessor of it is willing to return the pin to the rightful owner.

Mrs. Dean said she had never met the woman before and, as far as she knew, had no knowledge of her personal affairs. The crystal gazer also told Mrs. Dean of the plans she had made to go to Canada. Mrs. Dean stated she had made no mention of her plans to any one.

Widow of Grain Broker.

Mrs. Dean is the widow of John E. Dean, millionaire grain broker. The lawsuit which followed after she contested her late husband's will furnished food for thought and talk by society for years. The late Mr. Dean, by his first marriage, had four daughters. Two of them were twins and were known as the most popular debutantes of a Chicago season. Because of her action it is said they refused to speak to her.

She settled the suit against the Dean estate for $193,750. The legal action resulted from an antenuptial agreement which she had signed whereby she would only receive $25,000 of the estate at the time of her husband's death.

Illness of T. P. Shonts Shows No Improvement

New York, Aug. 23.—[Special.]—Theodore P. Shonts, president of the Interborough Rapid Transit company, who has been ill at his home, 930 Park avenue, for nearly three months, continues in a critical condition, according to announcement made tonight by Dr. George F. MEET OUR HERO, THE REPORTER; HE EATS BOMBS

Great Federal Building Mystery Blows Up—Into Sirup Can.

Yet another day was added to the journalistic diadem of heroic achievement yesterday when a hitherto obscure private in the ranks leaped into the breach in the dread hour of panic among policemen, secret service men and detectives at the federal building and dauntlessly proved himself the man of the hour.

As prologue it may be set forth that at 5 o'clock in the afternoon—at which time business for the day in the building is virtually suspended—there remained in the office of Postmaster William B. Carlile one person—Frank Stewart, colored, Mr. Carlile's private stenographer.

An Item in the Paper.

Mr. Stewart, as was his daily wont, was scanning the evening newspapers. One item in particular attracted his attention. It was a very short item. Anarchists had placed a bomb in a certain building and with diabolical cunning had arranged its mechanism so the explosion did not occur for a year afterward.

Perhaps it was the silence, the loneliness of the office—anyway, the item held a singular fascination for Mr. Stewart. He read it again and again, and the details of bomb plots aimed at the federal building in the past shaped themselves in his mind. A man was really helpless against these anarchists.

Suddenly he dropped the paper, jumped up and looked furtively about. A door had squeaked. The wind, that was all . . . Wowie! This time he jumped across the room. Immediately under his chair was a slim, sinister tin tube.

Bomb Alarm Brings Host.

Neglecting to take his coat and hat, Mr. Stewart sped from the room to the postal inspectors' office. They had gone home. He hastened to the department of justice. Gone home. Then to the secret service. Nobody in. Next to the marshal's office. Closed for the day.

Dashing to a telephone, he called Main 13.

"It's a bomb in the federal building," he informed the police operator. A few minutes later there arrived a patrol wagon with bluecoats from the central detail; a detachment from the sheriff's office; Detective Sergeants Lawrence McDonough and Charles Egan of the "anarchist squad"; Lieuts. Leo Burke, Michael Hughes and Charles Agnew.

Surrounding the bomb, they quickly removed it from the postmaster's office, where it might have damaged valuable effects, and ran, somewhat at random, into the den occupied by reporters, known as the press room.

Our Hero Makes Bow.

There was a quiet little game of pitch at a penny a point in progress, William Krueger of the City News Bureau having accumulated most of his co-pens' coppers, which lay in a neat little pile before him.

"Water, water," cried Lieut. Agnew, who was carrying the bomb.

No water being obtainable in the press room, and the fourth estate being somewhat nettled at the rude intrusion, one of the reporters arose to inquire what might be the cause of the lack of courtesy.

"A bomb," cried Agnew.

"Where?"

"In my hand."

"Give it to me."

The speaker was Mr. Krueger, who, between the Scylla of pitch and the Charybdis of destruction, hesitated not.

The Secret Revealed.

Grasping the bomb, he drew his penknife. The police and the other reporters faded away, leaving him alone with his glory.

There was a long, tense silence, which finally was punctuated by Mr. Krueger's voice.

"Come on back, fellows—and if one of you guys has got enough jack to buy some bread, we'll eat tonight. This tin can is full of syrup."

RIOT ZONE CLUBS SEEK TO REOPEN BY COURT WRIT

Plan to Ask Injunction on Tuesday Against City Officials.

Notice was served yesterday afternoon on Chief Garrity and Corporation Counsel Ettelson that delegations from five south side athletic clubs will appear before Judge Barrett and ask that injunctions be issued to prohibit enforcement of the police order closing their clubrooms.

The clubs to be represented are the Our Flag Athletic, the Ragen Athletic, the Alyward Athletic, the Pelican Athletic, and the South Side Clubs' association.

The police order involved is that issued Aug. 1 making provision for the closing of all saloons, cabarets, poolrooms, and athletic clubs in the race riot zone indefinitely.

O'Toole Charges Politics.

Meantime, the closing of the clubs, all in the Thirtieth ward, has become a political issue in the ward and out of it. Tom O'Grady, according to Ald. William O'Toole, is trying to make enough political capital out of the matter to become an alderman.

"There are six clubs in the ward," said O'Toole, in a statement issued yesterday. "All were asked to close. They complied.

"Some of my political opponents are attempting to make the membership of these clubs believe I closed them and am preventing their reopening. The fact is I knew nothing about the closing of the clubs and have no authority or influence in their opening.

"I have advised the officers of the clubs to obey the police order and stay closed. Four of the clubs are willing to take my advice.

Assails His Foes.

"The purpose of the agitation is to make it appear that I in some way am personally responsible for the closing of the clubs and therefore should be attacked as an alderman. It is a political trick of my opponents, pure and simple, for political advantage."

Chief Garrity, it is understood, plans to keep the clubs closed until the grand jury makes its report on its investigation of the race riots.

RAIL WATCHMAN ENDS LIFE.

William Reimer, a watchman employed by the St. Paul railroad to guard the crossing in Glen View, was found dead at his home yesterday, his body hanging from a hook on the wall.

CROWDS RUSH TO SCENE OF DOUBLE MURDER, SUICIDE

Police Clubs Clear Way Through Throng for Ambulance.

The Royal Canton cafe, 343 East Forty-third street, in which William E. Stewart last night committed a double murder and then sent a bullet into his own brain, is situated in the most thickly populated district of the south side. Past its doors run the cars of one of the most heavily patronized of the city's crosstown surface systems. A half block away is the Forty-third street station of the south side "L," where perhaps larger crowds are handled than at any other south side station save the Jackson park terminus on a holiday.

Forty-third street at this point is flanked by stores above which there are flats. Row after row of apartment houses line the north and south streets intersecting it.

Shots Heard at Station.

The three shots that snuffed out as many lives were heard as far as the "L" station. Long before the first policeman arrived, a knot of curious persons had gathered in front of the doorway, heads were craned from windows, and people came running from all directions.

Passengers alighting from elevated trains, seeing the crowd, rushed down the stairs of the structure and helped to augment it. Street cars filled to the doors when they reached the café, left the scene empty.

The crowd swelled until it became a jostling, struggling throng, filling both sides of the street, and milling towards the café door.

Wanted to See Them.

"They say there's three of them!" exclaimed a woman. "I want to see them."

She clawed her way towards the café. Inside, bland, almond eyed Chinamen moved stolidly about, inducing other patrons to leave the place, barring the curious crowd without and summoning medical aid.

Before the ambulance could back up to the door police with night sticks had to force a way for it. Then they were compelled to lean against human walls to hold them back from closing in too tightly on the stretcher bearers as the bodies were carried out one by one.

Murmur of Pity Heard.

A murmur of pity was heard, and one woman moaned and was aided in her efforts to leave the crush. By this time the word had gone around that a soldier had shot a man and a woman and killed himself. Those living in the immediate neighborhood fought to get near enough to the stretchers to see if they could recognize the victims.

Even after the ambulances had left the crowd milled up and down in front of the café and pressed their faces to the windows to see if they could see into the booth where the shooting occurred. They pointed out to each other the bullet holes in the sides of the booth and the crimson splashes on the floor.

Only a few detectives and newspaper reporters remained inside, except for two stolid Chinamen mopping up the stains as if nothing had happened.

Schools in Hurry.

And across the street, other persons peered into the darkened grocery and market where Charles Schools, one of the victims of the tragedy was employed as manager.

At midnight there was still a crowd about the café, although most of the groups had moved out of Forty-third street and had gathered on corners along Prairie and Calumet avenues and Grand boulevard, still discussing the details of the shooting and such added bits of gossip as reached them from time to time.

ly and she also saved this. On his return he learned she had $500 and he demanded the money. She refused to give him the whole sum because of his cruelty and the suspicion that she would be deserted immediately afterward.

"On Sunday night she heard her husband in the street below her window, and, fearing he had come to carry out his threat to kill her, she remained up all night with the family at whose home she roomed."

According to Mieras, the Stewarts had been married two weeks when he joined the army.

Gives Schools Good Character.

Mrs. G. A. Stoven, landlady of the apartment building where Schools roomed, said last night he had been with her for about nine months.

"I know nothing of his antecedents," she said, "other than that he was single and a man of good character. I understand that Mrs. Stewart posed as an unmarried woman."

Schools was manager of the Cash and Carry market at 344 East Forty-third street, owned by Max Stern. Mrs. Stewart had been cashier there for some time.

Mrs. Anna Cutting, with whom Mrs. Stewart roomed at 2216 Prairie avenue, said last night that Stewart was a constant source of worry to his wife. She said their marriage had not been a happy one and that they had not lived together for some time.

Tells of Clash.

"I drove Mrs. Stewart Sunday morning to the home of Mrs. A. Burns, 3058 South Canal street, a sister of her husband, to deliver the clothing and jewelry," said Mrs. Cutting. "Stewart was there and tried to seize her, but she got away and ran to the car and I managed to drive away before he could catch her."

Mrs. Stewart's mother lives in Columbus, O., and two sisters live in Chicago. She had been married before, her first husband, a Mr. Bennett, dying several years ago.

Patient at Fort Sheridan.

Stewart had been a patient at the Fort Sheridan hospital since June 30, when he had been invalided home from France with a nerve infection of the right wrist as the result of a shell wound.

He was inducted into the service in May of 1918 and served with Company 117 of the train corps, an adjunct of the engineers.

"He left the hospital Aug. 13 on a pass that would have expired tonight [Sunday] at midnight," said an attaché. "He had no close friends. He seemed morose and talked little."

STEWART MODEL PATIENT, SAYS SHERIDAN NURSE

Miss Mary Siddall, nurse in charge of the ward to which Private William E. Stewart was assigned in the Fort Sheridan hospital, said Stewart slept in the hospital Friday night, although he was on leave and not required to return until Saturday.

Miss Siddall said she called him early yesterday so he might attend the races at Elgin. He told her, she said, he intended to stop in Chicago on his way back, and promised to return to his ward last night.

Stewart, she said, was a model patient. He was affable toward other patients, she declared, but became friendly with none.

Given Ride, Robbers Take Automobile, Watch, $3

B. G. Martin, 5154 West Fulton street, was driving his automobile slowly along Lexington street, Oak Park, last night, when two men jumped on the running board and asked for a ride. He granted the request.

After taking his watch, $3, and the car at the point of a revolver, they told him he would find the car this morning at West Lake and North Halsted streets. Martin notified the police.

ROBBERS' HAULS IN LAST WEEK TOTAL $100,000

Everything from Cash to Clothing Included in Thieves' Loot.

One hundred thousand dollars was the toll exacted from Chicago last week by burglars, holdup men, shoplifters, pickpockets, and other members of the "United Brotherhood of Thieves." The amount does not include the value of stolen autos.

About 300 "jobs," as the police call them, were committed. Everything imaginable was included in the loot. Some of the articles taken were: Men's clothing, jewelry, whisky, cigarets, brass and bronze fixtures, women's wearing apparel, automobile supplies, groceries, silverware, cut glass, and boots and shoes.

Biggest Week in Years.

It was the biggest week, the police say, that the "brothers" have had in years.

Veteran sleuths predict that it is a forerunner of what may be expected next winter. When Chief of Detectives Mooney was asked what he thought of it, he said:

"It is the best kind of argument for a large addition to the police force."

Nearly one-third of the $100,000 worth of stuff that was stolen is charged up against the West Chicago avenue district. Capt. John Ryan is in command.

$20,000 in One Haul.

One "job" alone in this district amounted to $20,000. Thieves gained entrance to the Hirsch & Gris Clothing company's store at 512 Milwaukee avenue, through a trap door in the sidewalk. When employés arrived at the store in the morning they found it empty. Several auto trucks, it is believed, were used to haul away the stock.

Another burglary in Capt. Ryan's district was the theft of six barrels of whisky, valued at $2,500, from Frank Bartelt, 1545 North Western avenue.

One thousand dollars worth of women's wearing apparel was stolen from John Malina, 1541 West Chicago avenue, and Carlson Bros., 1466 Milwaukee avenue, report the theft of $1,500 worth of cigars and cigarettes.

One thousand dollars worth of bronze and brass was stolen from Manton & Smith, 1709 West Austin avenue. All of these burglaries were in Capt. Ryan's district.

Style Shop Robbed.

The Belmont Style Shop at 913 Belmont avenue, was robbed of $1,500 worth of lingerie and other articles of feminine wearing apparel. Entrance was made by sawing iron bars in the rear of the store.

Two fur store burglaries in Capt. Gleason's district total $2,500. One was at the store of Isadore Savitt, 3318 Roosevelt road. The thieves sawed the bars on a building next door and then bored through an eighteen inch stone wall to the fur store. Skins and made-up furs valued at $1,500 were taken. Presumably the same burglars visited Frank Stern, 3400 Roosevelt road, and stole among other things a coat valued at $1,000.

The South Chicago garage at 9601 Ewing avenue was robbed of $1,000 worth of auto supplies.

HOLDUPS TAKE $700, BATTLE POLICE, ESCAPE

The stockyards police accidentally bumped into five automobile thieves yesterday a short while after they had robbed John Beitler, cashier of the John L. Herber Brewing company, of $700 in cash and certified checks.

A revolver battle ensued, but the robbers escaped, abandoning a car stolen three days ago from John P. Mahoney, a saloonkeeper at East Sixty-seventh street and Stony Island avenue.

Beitler was about to leave the brewing company's office at 1621 West Twenty-first place with the day's receipts done up in a neat bundle, when the robbers' car stopped in front. Four of the robbers, all of whom wore smoked glasses, carried automatic pistols, while the fifth had a nickel plated revolver. Beitler was forced to turn over the money, $100 in cash and $600 in checks, and then lie face down on the floor. Mrs. Eva Stech, a scrub woman, was told to face the wall while the robbers fled.

At West Fortieth street and Normal avenue the robbers spied Detective Sergeant Greene of the stockyards station and opened fire. Greene returned the fire and the shooting attracted the attention of other policemen. The robbers escaped.

Joseph Norway, a saloonkeeper at 1000 South Canal street, was robbed of $2,000 by two bandits who had stolen a five passenger car from F. B. Martin, 5134 West Fulton street, earlier in the day.

BERLIN-MEXICO PLOT TO INVADE U. S. IS EXPOSED

Carranza Had 45,000 Men Ready in Last German Drive, Charge.

New York, Aug. 23.—Revelation of extensive German plots in Mexico during the war, which included a proposed invasion of the United States by a German-Mexican army of 45,000 men, at the same time that the Germans launched their last drive on the western front in July, 1918, was made here tonight by the National Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico, which gave out a statement by Dr. P. B. Altendorf, formerly of the United States military intelligence department, reciting his experience as an American secret service agent in that country.

Dr. Altendorf, son of a Polish banker in Cracow, Austrian Poland, abandoned a medical course in the University of Vienna at the outbreak of the war and fled to Mexico, where he was offered a position as a German spy to operate against the United States by Kurt Jahnke, head of the German secret service in Mexico.

Eager to Serve America.

"With pretended reluctance, but with secret joy, I accepted," he said, "and at once found myself in a position to render valuable service to the allies in general and to the United States in particular."

He opened communication with the border as a volunteer worker to the military intelligence department, he claims, and was later sworn in as a special agent of the military intelligence department.

The association states that it has investigated his claims and that Brig. Gen. Marlborough Churchill, head of the military intelligence department, "spoke in terms of the highest praise of the zeal and trustworthiness of Dr. Altendorf and the great value of the services he rendered."

Commercial Raid Planned.

In addition to explaining his activities in Mexico, Dr. Altendorf warns the people of the United States against a proposed German commercial conquest of Mexico.

"Within six months after the United States ratifies the treaty of peace," he says, "Germany will have complete economic control of Mexico. Within a very few years, if they are permitted to carry out the plans they have formulated and are now executing as fast as they can, the Germans will have absolute economic, political, and military control of Latin-America, with headquarters in Mexico."

Referring to the proposed invasion of the United States, Dr. Altendorf sets forth that in his dual capacity as a captain in the German army and a colonel in the Mexican army he helped to train 900 German reservists in Sonora, who were to form the nucleus of the proposed German-Mexican army, and that in his true character as an American secret service agent he prevented the raid from being carried out.

Carranza for Invasion.

"This ambitious scheme," he said, "was financed by Von Eckhardt [German ambassador to Mexico] and was undertaken with the coöperation of Carranza."

Dr. Altendorf, enumerating his services in Mexico, says in part:

"I delivered into the hands of the United States military authorities the German agent Lathar Witcke, alias Pablo Wabirski, the most important individual capture of the war so far as America was concerned.

"Wabirski boasted to me that he had blown up several munitions plants and stores of explosives, including the Black Tom explosion in New York; blew up some ships, and caused disastrous fires in the forests of the Pacific northwest.

"Wabirski was on his way to the United States by way of Nogales, Ariz., on another mission of murder and destruction when captured with me. On his person was found a copy of the German imperial code, and this is understood to be the first time that code came into the possession of the American government.

Spy's Fate in Wilson's Hands.

"Wabirski was courtmartialed and from the fact that his case is before the president for review is believed to have been sentenced to death, the only German spy to receive such a sentence in the United States.

"I also betrayed fifty-eight other German agents and thus enabled the military intelligence department to keep effective watch on them, not to mention some renegade Americans who were giving aid and comfort to the enemy."

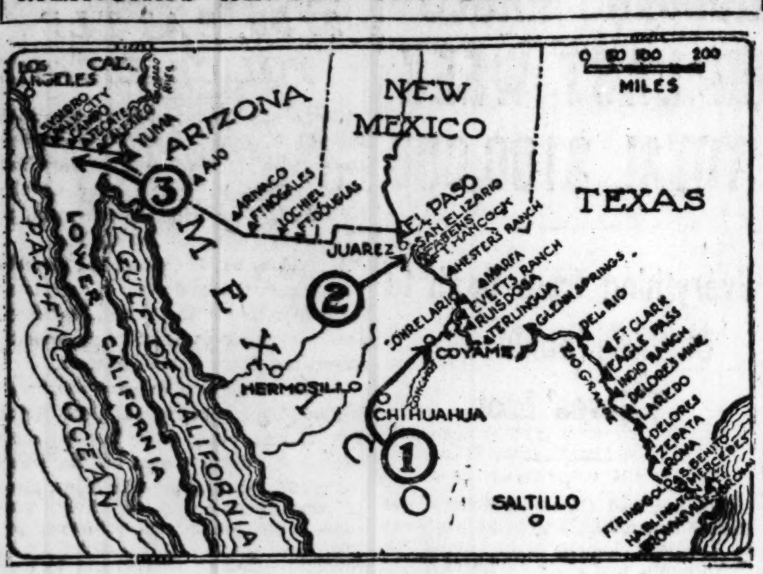
Other acts for which Dr. Altendorf claims credit include discovery of two German wireless stations in Mexico, capable of receiving messages from that country; reporting the plan for the German submarine raid along the American coast in April, 1918, one month before it actually took place; reporting agents sent by Germans in Mexico to poison cattle in the United States, and the revelation of a plot by four Germans to blow up the hydroelectric plant at Niagara Falls.

Other Mexicans Named.

Prominent Mexican officials are alleged by Dr. Altendorf to have been on the pay roll of the German embassy. He says:

"Mario Mendez, director of telegraphs, received a salary of $600 a month from Von Eckhardt. His brother, a senator with influence, received the same salary. A third brother, in the postoffice, also received $600 a month for opening and reading private letters and passing the information along to the Germans."

MEXICANS REPORT CAPTURE OF BANDITS



1—Reports from Mexico state that Mexican federal troops captured eight bandits, part of Jesus Renteria's gang, which abducted Aviators Peterson and Davis, at Coyame, Chihuahua. They apparently had escaped the United States punitive expedition that chased them south of the big bend country.

2—Troop G, 7th cavalry, stationed at Fabens, Tex., crossed the Rio Grande into Mexico yesterday, in pursuit of raiders who drove off twelve horses from the Fort Hancock reservation.

This force was later ordered to return to its post north of the Rio Grande.

3—Mexican cavalry are reported to be scouring the northern portion of Lower California in search for Lieuts. C. H. Connelly and Clark B. Waterhouse, United States aviators, who have been missing since last Tuesday. American cavalry are searching the country on this side of the line.

SIBERIA CRISIS IN NEXT 30 DAYS

Washington, D. C., Aug. 23.—Ambassador Morris, who was sent by the state department from Tokio to Omsk to report on conditions in Siberia, has advised the government here that the next thirty days will probably see a crisis in the affairs of the Kolchak government.

Admiral Kolchak has had to devote so much attention to the military campaign against the bolsheviki that he has been unable to organize sufficiently the civil administration in Siberia to keep the people contented, but nevertheless Kolchak is the best man for the task, according to Morris.

Lack of material aid from the allies has led to friction between the military commanders of the Kolchak forces.

Recognition of the Kolchak government, if it survives the next thirty days, has been urged by Ambassador Morris, it is understood.

RED FLEET RUINED; KRONSTADT GONE

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 23.—[By the Associated Press.]—The bolshevist fleet in the Gulf of Finland, defending Petrograd, has been disabled, the newspapers here report. The defenses of Kronstadt, which were bombarded by British warships, have been destroyed.

a regiment of Mexican federal troops would arrive at Juarez tomorrow morning on a special train from Chihuahua City for the purpose of helping to rid the border district of Mexican bandits.

The third detachment which crossed the Rio Grande in the Big Bend country in search of lost army mules, returned with the missing animals.

Rangers Helping Troops.

Austin, Tex., Aug. 23.—Two detachments of Texas Rangers are in Mexico assisting in the roundup of Mexican bandits, it was oficially announced at the state adjutant general's office here tonight.

One detachment, commanded by Capt. Jerry Gray, crossed the border near Candelaria today to act as volunteer scouts for army cavalrymen under Capt. Matlack.

The other detachment, also working with a cavalry unit from the army, crossed near Fabens early this morning in a chase after cattle thieves who raided several ranches in the Fabens vicinity Friday.

MEXICAN SENATE BUSY

Washington, D. C., Aug. 23.—[Special.]—The Mexican senate, according to official advices reaching Washington today, adopted a resolution yesterday instructing the foreign relations committee "to investigate the cause and character of the international crisis and to make recommendations."

The "crisis" refers to unsettled relations with the United States, and the information concerning the senate action was sent to Washington, together with the interesting bulletins, which have been made public here unofficially, one of which quotes a Mexican newspaper as declaring that President Wilson will be forced to act against Mexico.

Dispatches from Mexico City quote Luis Cabrera, Carranza's treasury minister, as declaring he would remain in office even if the rest of the Carranza cabinet should resign, as he considered it an act of cowardice to resign at this time, with the country facing a crisis.

The "chief official of the war department" is quoted as declaring the army will remain loyal to Carranza and second his decisions.

OIL SITUATION DISTURBS

Washington, D. C., Aug. 23.—Officials here are somewhat disturbed, it was learned today, by an apparent determination on the part of Carranza and his official advisers in Mexico City to confiscate the oil property of foreigners, including Americans, in spite of the protests lodged with the Mexican government by all the nations whose nationals have investments in Mexico.

Two public declarations by Mexicans close to Carranza have expressed the Mexican president's stand on this matter, which public opinion, official and unofficial alike, except Carrancistas, has declared to be vital.

The opinion of all classes in Mexico, as reported in the Mexico City newspapers and trasmitted to the state department, is for a prompt and correct settlement of the petroleum question, which has been declared to be the key to relations between the United States and Mexico.

BRITON ON JOB AGAIN

Washington, D. C., Aug. 23.—After having told William Cummings, the British chargé de archives in Mexico City, that his presence in Mexico was deemed "incompatible with the state in which relations between this government and Great Britain have stood and do now stand," the Mexican foreign office is understood to have relented, and Mr. Cummings expects to remain in the Mexican capital.

Allies Discuss Plan to Send Troops to Silesia

PARIS, Aug. 23.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Supreme Council today discussed the question of sending troops to Silesia in case the Germans are willing to permit foreign troops to enter the district for police purposes before the peace treaty has been ratified. The general impression in conference circles is that the Germans will consent because of the large property interests involved.

Radoslavoff Defeated in Elections in Bulgaria

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Aug. 22.—[Delayed.—[By the Associated Press.]—The legislative elections have resulted in the complete defeat of the party headed by former Premier Radoslavoff. The left and agrarian parties gained most of the seats.

DEMOCRATS GO AFTER 5 MILLION CAMPAIGN FUND

Need It in 1920, Admit; Seek It by Popular Subscription.

New York, Aug. 23.—[Special.]—Efforts to obtain subscriptions to finance the next Democratic presidential campaign were begun today by William D. Jamieson of Iowa, director of finance of the Democratic national committee.

All records for cost in conducting a campaign will be broken next year, Mr. Jamieson said, for in his judgment the Democratic party will need at least $5,000,000 to elect a successor to President Wilson. In 1916 it cost the party $2,500,000 to elect Mr. Wilson. Mr. Jamieson's plan is to induce 1,000,000 people to subscribe anywhere from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000.

Mr. Jamieson is a former member of congress, and was connected with the 1916 Democratic campaign. He said at the Holland house today that he had come to New York to obtain the services of three or four qualified men for his executive staff in laying the foundation for the strenuous campaign to corral the 1,000,000 contributors.

300,000 Contributors Already.

His committee, he said, has already 300,000 contributors on its list, but he was going out with a "fine tooth comb" to ask financial assistance of 2,000,000 persons, with the hope that half that number will actually contribute to the coffers of the Democratic party.

He said it is better to get the political sinews of war from a million people in small contributions than from a comparatively few men or business corporations whose generosity may be actuated by ulterior motives.

In a campaign financed by popular contributions, he said, the elected officials feel more keenly their responsibility to the people. He said his committee expected to reach the popular purse by reaching the individual in the various voting precincts of the country who are willing and able to contribute and to their friends through them using the scheme of an endless chain.

As to Wilson Candidacy.

Mr. Jamieson would not venture an opinion as to the possibility of President Wilson being renominated, except to say that the possibility existed if the league of nations should be defeated.

"I do not speak officially for President Wilson," Mr. Jamieson said, "But my personal opinion is that the only thing that would impel him to become a candidate again is the failure of the league of nations."

Wilson Losing, Hays Declares.

The Wilson administration is rapidly losing strength, and everything is shaping for a Republican victory in next year's presidential election, according to Will H. Hays, chairman of the Republican national committee, who returned here from Washington today after a conference with senators and congressmen regarding the educational features of the work of the national committee.

"The Wilson administration is steadily losing ground with the voters," said Chairman Hays. "It is not always the big things that turn the voter away from his regular party. Ofttimes it is a minor matter, and this is especially true today outside of the large cities. President Wilson has alienated many regular Democrats among the farmers in the Mississippi valley by his opposition to the repeal of the daylight saving."

'IMPEACH WILSON,' CRY IN MYSTERY CHICAGO LETTER

M. Block, 1010 North Oakley avenue, yesterday took a letter to District Attorney Clyne, which he had received through the mails. It contained a petition asking for the "impeaching of President Woodrow Wilson." It read as follows:

"We, the undersigned citizens of the United States of America, hereby petition our representatives in congress to impeach President Woodrow Wilson on the ground that, without consent of congress, he has unlawfully commanded our troops to wage war in Russia and Siberia."

There was nothing in the letter to lead to the identity of the sender.

NO CELEBRATION HERE LABOR DAY, UNION RULING

There will be no organized or centralized labor demonstration in Chicago on Labor day, a week from Monday.

The Chicago Federation of Labor and the Chicago Building Trades council have announced that, owing to the unsettled labor conditions in Chicago, no attempt would be made to hold a "celebration."

Many individual union organizations throughout the city are planning local celebrations, but these will be for members of the local unions and their families and friends. The big parade, followed by outings and speeches, will be missing this year.

BATHING GIRLS AS USHERS GIVE GARRITY SHOCK

"Put Some Clothes on Them," He Tells Theater Manager.

BY JOHN KELLEY.

Chief of Police Garrity is not a man who is easily shocked, but when he saw the young women ushers at the Ziegfeld theater garbed in bathing suits he lifted his left hand to his eyes to shut out the gaze.

"Tut, tut," said the chief, peeking through his fingers, "this will never do."

Then, entering the office of the theater, he told the manager to "make those girls put on their clothes."

Fears for Health.

"You know," added the chief, "they might catch cold. Anyway, the theater is no place for bathing costumes, except on the stage."

Thus ended the novelty of introducing girl ushers in beach raiment. The management thought it would add to the production of Mack Sennett's bathing beauties, but Chief Garrity couldn't see it that way.

Likes Costume of 1869.

On his return to the city hall the chief was shown a picture of bathing costumes of the vintage of 1869. The page was from Peterson's Magazine. The chief was asked what the thought of them. Adjusting his glasses he gazed at the fifty year old bathing suits and observed:

"Now, that's what I would call a sensible bathing suit. That one there on the left is a beauty. When did you say these were in style? Fifty years ago? Well, well! The one that looks like a smoking jacket is a peacherino. I wonder if a pattern could be found today of those old costumes? Beautiful, beautiful!"

HAVERLY THEFTS TOTAL $52,000

While locksmith were busy changing the locks on the doors of the grand lodge offices at 130 North La Salle street, accountants who were auditing the books of the Knights of Pythias found that the total amount stolen by Paul J. B. Haverly, grand keeper of the records and seal, totaled $52,000.

Detective Sergeants Carton and McFarland, who identified him Friday as an ex-convict from Nevada, were busy searching the city on the supposition that he had not left for Canada.

Before leaving for his home in Beardstown Smith L. Von Fossen, grand chancellor for Illinois, ratified the appointment of Al Douglas of Decatur as Haverly's successor.

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Washington Bureau of The Tribune.]
WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 23.

THE senate foreign relations committee began its reconstruction of the peace treaty today, voting to restore Shantung to China by a vote of 9 to 8, Senator McCumber being the only Republican to vote no with the Democrats. Senator Swanson declared that the action constituted a declaration of war on the part of the Republicans to defeat the whole peace treaty, but other Democrats insisted that the amendment would be defeated in the senate.

OFFICIAL advices received here say that the Mexican senate has instructed its foreign relations committee to investigate the cause and character of international complications with the United States. The Mexican press is in large part pessimistic over the situation and one paper has declared that President Wilson will be forced to act against Mexico.

THE house committee on foreign affairs decided to summon Secretary of State Lansing and Secretary of War Baker to explain the Siberian situation after listening to the delegation of Chicago relatives who are seeking an early return of drafted men now in Siberia.

WASHINGTON is alive with rumors that the president is going to lift wartime prohibition on Oct. 1. The report is that the pressure of the banks will induce the president to take this course, proclaiming demobilization at that time. The bankers have enormous amounts of money tied up with distillers and brewers and these must be given an opportunity to lift their loans before constitutional prohibition comes next January.

REPORTS to the postoffice department from ten cities show that there have been 27,000 individual orders for army food through the parcel post, aggregating a value of $400,000. Chicago has recorded 7,000 orders worth $100,000.

WOMAN SLAIN AFTER VISIT TO HER AILING SON

Vincennes, Ind., Aug. 23.—[Special.]—Mrs. Anna Leimbach, widow of Henry Leimbach, was murdered while on her way home after visiting her son, who is ill in a local hospital. Her body was found today in a patch of weeds adjoining the Paul Laurence Dunbar school, located in the Negro section of this city. She had been attacked, slain and her body mutilated. She was 76 years old. A posse is searching for the slayer.

TWO TAKEN FOR GAMBLING.

Capt. William Russell, accompanied by a squad of detectives, made a tour of the Maxwell street district last night in search for gamblers and arrested Edward C. Tancl of 1657 Blue Island avenue for having slot machines in his saloon, and George Patrick, 1338 Euclid avenue, Oak Park, who was operating the machine.

"I'LL SHOOT YOU," PATROLMAN TOLD CAPTAIN, CHARGE

Threat Made During Row in Hogan's Office, Claim.

Joseph F. Wabol, a traffic division patrolman, threatened to shoot Capt. Patrick E. Hogan of the Irving Park station on Aug. 18, charges filed against Wabol yesterday by Chief Garrity assert.

Wabol entered the captain's office with four citizens and "screamed," according to the charges, that one of Capt. Hogan's policemen had attacked three of the four men with Wabol. Then the following conversation is alleged to have taken place.

Capt. Hogan—Be calm. Why all the Wabol—I don't care whether you

Wabol—"I don't care whether you like what I say or not.

Capt. Hogan—You citizens go outside. I want to talk to this officer.

Wabol—You citizens stick right here.

A patrolman and a sergeant were called and ushered the citizens outside. Then came this, the charges say:

Capt. Hogan—"Don't you know you are a police officer and are supposed to be civil and respectful?

Wabol—To h——l with you. You are not worth respecting. I have no use for you and your murdering policemen.

Capt. Hogan—Shut up that kind of talk or I'll lock you up.

Wabol—You lay a hand on me and I'll shoot you.

That was enough for the captain. He summoned two policemen who finally quieted Wabol, but the charges by Chief Garrity followed.

BERLIN PLEADS TO SAVE COWS AWARDED PARIS

Statistics Cited to Show Reduction of Nation's Live Stock.

BY PARKE BROWN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

BERLIN, Aug. 23.—Having, according to reports here, won its battle for the reduction of the amount of coal to be provided France, Belgium, Italy, and Luxemburg under the treaty of Versailles, Germany is now prepared to present its case for moderation of the terms concerning delivery of live stock and particularly of milk cows to France and Belgium.

According to government census figures, the country now is short something between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 milk cows. The normal number is 10,500,000, and the June census showed a total of 2,600,000 below this figure. In the same way the total for all cattle shows a shortage. Where they had approximately 21,000,000 five years ago there are now less than 17,000,000.

It is reported here the allies want 420,000 milk cows alone under the reparation provisions of the treaty.

Further statistics prepared by the government show the total of horses in the country now has been reduced 750,000 below the 4,500,000 of a year ago, and that while there is a slight increase in the number of sheep, the total of pigs has been reduced from 25,000,000 to 10,000,000.

PLUMB PLAN IS BOLSHEVIST, SAYS W. VA. GOVERNOR

Washington, D. C., Aug. 23.—[Special.]—Gov. John J. Cornwell of West Virgina, once a laboring man earning a dollar a day, has written to railroad brotherhood officials, declining to support the Plumb plan for nationalization of the railroads, and declaring that he is "an American, not a bolskevik."

"I was then and am now, in favor of your having not only a fair but a liberal wage," the governor's letter says, "but when you ask the farmers and the laborers in other lines of work to go in debt $20,000,000,000 through the medium of the federal government to buy the railroads and give them to you to operate for your benefit and to use as you please, you are making a proposition that is neither sane nor fair.

"I have been a laboring man myself—carried a dinner bucket—for a dollar a day. My labor now is not regulated by eight, ten, or twelve hours, but often sixteen and sometimes eighteen. I am not now and never expect to be a capitalist, but I am an American, not a bolshevik."

JUDGE M'KINLEY AND WIFE SNARE BOY AS SPEEDER

JUDGE AND MRS. CHARLES F. M'KINLEY collaborated yesterday afternoon in the arrest of an automobile speeder in Lake Shore drive near Lincoln park.

The prisoner, Herbert Williamson, 2612 North Halsted street, a bellboy at the Chicago Athletic association, had driven "Chick" Evans, the golfer, to the Northwestern station to catch a train for the links. The boy's instructions were to return to the garage with the machine, but instead he invited two flappers to go for a spin.

Judge McKinley and his wife were driving north in Lake Shore drive when Evans' car swung out of Division street and just grazed the judge's machine. The judge gave chase and at North avenue succeeded in penning the other car against the curb and compelling Williamson to stop.

Mrs. McKinley ran to North avenue and Dearborn street, where she found Charles Kiefer, a Lincoln park policeman. Kiefer took the boy in charge and the judge signed a complaint.

Then he and Mrs. McKinley continued on their way to the sailors' and soldiers' baseball game at Cubs park.

BOOK OF MORMON AGAINST WORLD LEAGUE PROMISE

Salt Lake City, Utah, Aug. 23.—Revelations given to the prophet Joseph Smith, as recorded in the doctrines and covenants, book of Mormon, preclude any hope that the ratifications of the league of nations will prevent future wars, declares United States Senator Reed Smoot of Utah is a letter to C. N. Lunn Jr., editor of a newspaper at Mount Pleasant, Utah.

"I would consider that I was violating my oath of office if I failed to vote for the suggested reservations," Senator Smoot wrote. "Let me tell you that it would not surprise me to see President Wilson, who you think has been directed by inspiration, approve of the reservations that I have outlined. I have no doubt but that the controlled Associated Press would put the question in such a way as to make it appear as a complete victory on the part of the president.

"For months my mail brought me fifty letters favorable to the league as against one opposing it; today I receive at least ten letters protesting against the league to one in favor of it," Senator Smoot added.

U. S. to Study Wood Pulp Situation in America

Washington, D. C., Aug. 23.—[Special.]—In view of the decreasing supply of American pulp wood used in the manufacture of news print paper, Senator Watson, Indiana, introduced a resolution today authorizing the secretary of agriculture to make a survey and preliminary investigation of pulp wood timber supply in the United States. The secretary also is asked to make recommendations of pulp wood utilization. The sum of $100,000 is asked.

Allies Warn Roumania to Leave Hungary Alone

PARIS, Aug. 23.—The Supreme council today approved the note drafted by the reparations committee, warning the Roumanian government of retaliatory action which will be taken if the Roumanians continue to make requisitions from Hungary. Premier Clemenceau signed the note, and it was forwarded to Bucharest.

ALTER TREATY AS TO SHANTUNG IN COMMITTEE

Senators by Vote of 9 to 8 Substitute "China" for Word "Japan."

ticut, Republican, "that members of the American peace delegation at Paris admitted that the decision was wrong, but voted for it. The senate committee has voted for what it thinks is right."

Fight to See Other Treaties.

As soon as the vote on the Shantung amendment had been taken, Senator Knox of Pennsylvania, Republican, offered a motion to suspend further consideration of the treaty until President Wilson sends to the senate the treaties with Austria, Hungary, Bulgaria, and Turkey. The senator pointed out that the president had said the treaty with Germany is the key to the other treaties and insisted the senate ought to consider them in their relation to each other. This was the only intelligent method of procedure, he declared.

Administration senators raised a vehement protest against the motion. The committee finally decided to postpone action on the motion until Monday. The administration leaders then served notice that if the motion were adopted, they would promptly retaliate by moving in the senate to take the treaty out of the hands of the foreign relations committee. They predicted that with the aid of several Republican votes they could bring about the adoption of such a motion.

Adopt a Compromise.

Senator Williams of Mississippi, Democrat, proposed a compromise by moving to instruct Senator Lodge, chairman, to write President Wilson requesting him to furnish the committee with all possible information on the Austrian, Hungarian, Bulgarian, and Turkish treaties. This motion was carried and Senator Lodge at once wrote the president of the action.

In this connection, Senator Lodge issued the following statement: "The committee has worked as hard and steadily as any committee I have ever seen, and I have been on a number of them, but it has been hampered at every stage by lack of information. Time has been consumed in trying to get information here and there that should have been in our hands weeks ago. It is of the utmost importance that we get the other four treaties, or at least some knowledge of their contents, to assist us in an intelligent consideration of the German treaty. They are all intertwined, we know, but we do not know the provisions as to territory and other things which may be in them."

Senator Lodge flatly denied he had said the treaty would be reported by the committee within a week, and in the face of such reports, the committee decided today to conduct further hearings. It was besieged by new demands from subject peoples for "a day in court" to protest against the violation of the principle of self-determination.

Weel, Weel! Scotland a Brawlin'!

To the surprise of the committee, one of these demands came from Scotland. The following telegram was received from George J. Bruce in New York:

"The Scottish national committee, consisting of leaders of organizations representing majority of constituents of Scotland, prepared a national memorial and protest against Scotland being excluded from peace and league of nations conference. This was presented to Clemenceau and members of the conference and was extensively and favorably noticed by European press. Memorial having been ignored at Paris, we respectfully ask your committee to hear our plea for Scotland's right to self-determination. I, one of the signers of the memorial and member of the Scottish national committee, having arrived here, desire to appear before your committee in this behalf."

The committee took the position that as the appeal came from an alien it could not be complied with except upon presentation by the state department.

To Hear National Pleas.

The committee agreed to grant a hearing to representatives of various Negro societies in the United States who want to present views as to the disposition of the former German colonies in Africa. They will be heard Friday.

Hearings were also granted to representatives of Austro-American and Hungarian-American organizations.

Much of next week will be taken up in hearings. The Egyptians, through Ex-Gov. Folk of Missouri, will present their plea for self-determination Monday. The Irish will have their day in court Saturday, and if possible the Greeks, who are protesting against the Thracian settlement, will be heard the same day. Between times, the committee will work on reservations and amendments.

STRIKE TIES UP FREIGHT TRAINS IN LOS ANGELES

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 23.—Although officials of the three railroad companies whose lines run into Los Angeles tried to dispatch trains today, it was said no freight trains and only two passenger trains, one on the Southern Pacific and the other on the Santa Fé, were moved.

As the result of the strike of switchmen and brakemen, freight yards here were congested, live stock in cars in the yard were said to be suffering, and a shortage of gasoline was imminent.

Several hundred car inspectors struck today.

FIRST CARGO FROM GERMANY.

New York, Aug. 23.—The first cargo to reach this port from Hamburg, Germany, since the entry of the United States into the world war, arrived here today on the steamship Keresan. The ship brought 181 packages of glassware.

PRESS OF JAPAN GRIEVES, RAGES, AT U. S. SHAFTS

Can't Understand Opposition to Shantung; Comment Daily.

BY FREDERICK A. SMITH.

[Staff Correspondent of The Tribune in the Far East.]

TOKIO, July 28.—In view of the world-wide debate on the league of nations and especially with respect of those articles which affect the far east, three points impress an American reader of Japanese newspapers, particularly those published in the shadow of imperial authority in Tokio.

The three features which stand out in the editorials, translated from the native language press and printed daily in English in the Japanese Advertiser, are:

The keen interest with which Japan is following the debate in the United States senate.

The editorial assurance that the Republican opposition to the covenant is based on two foundations; namely, partisan aversion to anything President Wilson indorses, and senatorial obedience to the behests of American "big business," which is "ambitious of dominating the Chinese commercial and industrial field."

The unqualified and reiterated conviction that all the "culture" of the orient is embodied in and monopolized by the Japanese character, and that in Japanese interpretations of "justice, liberty, and morality" lie the future of the far east.

Calls U. S. Public Misled.

Thus the Yorodzu in its daily issue of July 24 says:

"Aspersions in American newspapers and magazines on Japan are reaching a climax. The motive of these attacks is not known, but the debate on the Shantung question in the senate throws some light on it.

"While Chinese peace delegates and other officials conducted a vigorous propaganda concerning the Shantung matter, Japan did not trouble to explain her position. Consequently, Americans and even those well disposed toward Japan have been bewildered and misled by such propaganda and are laboring under delusions.

"Under the Japanese code of morality, good conduct needs no advertisement; we take the view that a fact explains itself. A similar view is taken on the Shantung question; Japanese believe their claims regarding Shantung are too obviously reasonable and proper to require explanation.

"We do not, therefore, consider it necessary to take a counter measure against the Chinese propaganda; but a few words of enlightenment may not be out of place, as even Mr. Lodge, the Republican leader, and others have been led astray."

Different From Fiume.

The article then sets forth the history of the Boxer trouble, and tells how Germany obtained possession of Kiaochao. In 1914, "true to the obligations of the Anglo-Japanese alliance," the Japanese, "without any help from China," took Kaiochao "at heavy expense and losses."

"Even," says the editorial, "supposing there were no understanding between Japan, Great Britain, and France regarding the disposal of Shantung, it is obvious that Japan should discuss the question directly with Germany and not with China. The question is, therefore, entirely different from the Italian occupation of Fiume.

"As for China, she ought to be grateful to Japan, as her territory will be returned to her, although she has done nothing toward securing it.

Covert Threat of War.

"But we find a statesman of Mr. Lodge's standing accusing Japan of treading in Germany's footsteps and saying that America is asked to be an accomplice of the wresting of Shantung from China and giving it to Japan. Does not this show the ignorance of the senator?

"A still more remarkable statement is made by Mr. Borah: 'If America should be compelled to take part in the partition or China be compelled to forego her territorial integrity, America would challenge the country which has created such conditions.'

"We do not know what country this may be, but if ever there were such a country, Japan would surely not hesitate to go to war with such a country before it was necessary for America to challenge it.

Japan's Monroe Doctrine.

"The territorial integrity of China is more necessary to Japan than to any other country. The stand taken by Japan as regards Shantung should be praised by all the people who respect the principle of justice and humanity; there is nothing in it which deserves condemnation.

"We believe that in the new world of justice and equity no country should attack or bespatter another on the strength of false statements, as such action is calculated to destroy the peace of the world.

"Is it not wrong, in view of the Monroe doctrine, for America to meddle in a local question between Japan and China? We think Mr. Lodge and all thinking men on both sides of the Pacific should study diligently to maintain peaceful and friendly relations."

Senate "Slanders Us."

In its issue of July 28 the same paper says:

"The United States senate is in a fit of political convulsions. If the Republican senators were taken seriously it would mean that Japan was a pirate and unpunished; that Germany was in the orient. The abuse and aspersions of Mr. Lodge, Mr. Norris, and Mr. Borah could be made with far greater propriety in Petrograd and Moscow than in Washington.

Views of Another Paper.

The Kokumin on July 25 reviews the senate debate; repeats that Kiau-Chau will be returned to China after Japan recoups her heavy losses; warns the Republicans that they may endanger friendly relations between America and Japan, and says President Wilson is endeavoring to put down the senate opposition and get the treaty ratified as it stands, as "otherwise he will be placed in an awkward position."

On July 26 the same paper decides that the situation in the senate is a direct challenge to Japan, "to outrageous and extravagant is the attitude of the senate and Republican newspapers regarding Shantung."

"Why do they indulge in such fulminations?" asks the writer. "We are nonplussed at their lack of reason. Their attacks on Mr. Wilson surely are out of place in international morality."

"How Inexplicable."

The Hochi on July 25 declares that "the senate, especially Mr. Lodge, Mr. Norris, and Mr. Borah, are indulging in wild and wanton accusations . . . while some declare America will go to war to carry her point (in regard to divorcing the treaty from the covenant). They speak as if Shantung belonged to America and Japan had invaded that province. They disregard all Japan's pledges to return the Chinese territory. How absurd, how inexplicable, their attitude!"

The article states outright that American corporations are backing the Chinese and Corean dissatisfaction and are seeking to oust Japan from commercial leadership in the orient; the editor assumes the senators are fighting for the interests of their wealthier constituents.

Denies Berlin-Tokio Treaty.

On July 24 the Osaka Ashahi wonders at the interest of the Republican senators as to a secret treaty between Berlin and Tokio. After emphatically denying the existence of such a treaty the article recalls that it makes no difference when or whether America ratifies the treaty because ratification by Great Britain, France, and Italy will make it effective.

The same paper, on July 27, refers to the trouble at Tampico over the attack on an American gunboat, and says, referring to an assault by Chinese students on a Japanese lieutenant:

"Mexican questions are as vexatious to America as are Chinese questions to Japan; and we sympathize with America on this point. If, however, there were the shadow of Japan behind the American-Mexican troubles, how would the public opinion of America become excited!

"But the shadow of America is often to be seen behind the troubles between Japan and China. Every time troubles occur between America and Mexico, we wonder whether amends can not in some way be made for us in this respect."

"Senate Twaddle," Jiji Says.

The well known and often quoted Jiji of July 26 reviews the articles in the league covenant "concerning which the senate is talking a great deal of twaddle," and points out that only by a unanimous vote can article X (the sending of troops to preserve territorial integrity) be enforced; that the other nations were satisfied with Japan's claims in China and her promises to make restitution; that talk of a secret Japanese-German treaty is absurd; that politics and a desire to dominate in China are behind the Republican tactics.

The Tokio Asahi, the widely read Nichi Nichi, and the Chugai Shogyo contain similar articles. They indicate careful scrutinizing of American and world affairs; draw "Japanese" conclusions from every item of news; manifest a powerful intention to retain dominance on the western shores of the Pacific ocean; profess astonishment at the senate's attitude; repeat that Japan has never broken her word, and predict that the future will vindicate Japanese culture and Japanese methods of fulfilling her promises.

REV. WM. M. HOLDERBY.

A novel method of advertising religious services was adopted yesterday by the North Shore Baptist church, Racine and Leland avenues, when an airplane ascended gracefully from an open space near the church and soared over Rogers Park, scattering star shaped "messages from heaven."

Open air meetings every night at 8 are being held on the church lawn by the Rev. William Matthew Holderby, who is starting a vigorous campaign to bring the church to the attention of every resident in the neighborhood, and the falling stars were used as one means of letting people know that the church is alive to modern methods in advertising.

"We do not wish to appear to be sensationalists," said the Rev. Mr. Holderby, "but we do want to reach as many of the people of our community as possible and to let them know that we are here and that we have a message and a mission. We have chosen this method of advertising so that 'he who runs may read' and come to these services of worship."

The Rev. W. H. Jones is pastor of the church.

TEXAS GOVERNOR BLAMES SHILLADY FOR RACE FIGHT

Austin, Tex., Aug. 23.—Gov. W. P. Hobby, in a telegram today to officials of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said John R. Shillady, the organization's secretary, who was beaten and ordered out of Austin yesterday, was "the only offender in connection with the matter."

The telegram sent by the governor was in reply to an inquiry from the chairman of the organization, asking what efforts were being made to punish those who attacked Shillady.

The governor's reply was: "Shillady was the only offender in connection with the matter referred to in your telegram and he was punished before your inquiry came."

HAMMOND STRIKE TO END MONDAY, FEICK PREDICTS

Hammond, Ind., Aug. 23.—[Special.]—It is expected the differences between the Standard Steel Car company and its employés will be settled tomorrow and that the strike, which has lasted a month, will be called off by Monday. Federal Commissioner Fred Feick held conferences all day with both sides and will hold another conference tomorrow following the return of P. C. Jenks, assistant to President J. P. Hansen, who is on his way back from Pittsburgh with full power to act.

"Both sides have made concessions," said Mr. Feick last night, "and it loks hopeful for a settlement by Monday."

The three basic demands of the strikers are for the eight hour day, a wage suited to the American standard of living, and recognition of the general committees representing the allied crafts. The eight hour day has been conceded by the company. It has also promised an increase in wages for the laborers, and to make such other adjustments as are found necessary after the plant is in operation once more.

There has been no disorder in the strike zone today.

Mebbe It Will Help Us to Recall Where We Left 'Em

New York, Aug. 23.—"Umbrellas to match the gloves"—that's the latest Fifth avenue fad, and a great vogue is predicted in view of unprecedented demands for color in everything women will wear this fall and winter.

"Novelty gauntlets in two or three tone combinations, with strap wrists, and also slip-ons, are all the rage now," said one prominent dealer.

"With the novelty gloves are umbrellas to match. Stub sport umbrellas in contrasting colors, with plum, myrtle, and navy the most popular shades, are the most fashionable now."

SPEEDWAY PARK HOSPITAL SITE SOLD FOR TAXES

Gibbons Orders Sale to Collect $14,274.42; Notices Ignored.

Fresh complications have beset Speedway park, the $4,500,000 army reconstruction hospital at Maywood, erected by Edward Hines, the lumberman. The site has been sold for taxes due Cook county—$14,274.42. The nominal purchaser is E. A. Deans, who is said to represent his father-in-law, C. J. Marhoefer, listed in the city directory as a tax agent, 105 North Clark street and living at 7512 Rogers avenue.

The sale was decided upon yesterday when Harry R. Gibbons, county treasurer, in his daily examination of tax warrant books, ran across the delinquency.

"See here," said Treasurer Gibbons, addressing Frank E. Nibbe, who is in charge of delinquent tax sales, "is there any reason why this Speedway park property should not be sold to meet the tax? Who paid the tax last year?"

Mr. Nibbe turned up the record and showed that the last tax was paid by E. H. Thomas, treasurer of the Edward Hines Lumber company.

"Put the property under the hammer and at once," was Mr. Gibbons' order, so Mr. Nibbe went to room 1123 in the county building and called for bids. A dozen or more professional tax buyers were there and there was spirited bidding. No representative of the Speedway was present.

"OUT OF MISCHIEF"

They're Part of the Cast of "Little Miss Muffet," Children's Operetta to Be Given at the Municipal Pier.

The children's hour on the Municipal pier, which for the last three seasons has drawn crowds to the water's edge playground, will be over for this year with next Wednesday's production of the juvenile classic, "Little Miss Muffet," an operetta to be given by the Junior Drama League players at 2 o'clock under the direction of Mrs. Grace Norbeck.

A nature festival in which Pan, the four winds, Neptune, Clytie, goldfish, nightingales and creatures of the elements were impersonated by the children was given last Wednesday at the pier before a large and admiring audience of parents and others.

"Give children something in which they can use their imagination as well as their arms and legs. Keep them occupied with something like play and they won't roam the streets and get into trouble"—such is the theory upon which the Junior Drama league has worked, and the success of the children's hour under the direction of Miss Bertha Iles demonstrates the soundness of the doctrine. Thousands of Chicago children have been kept out of mischief in the entertaining fashion sponsored by the league. Each week there have been meetings regularly on Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons, and the average attendance has been about 250 little ones, to say nothing of the audience.

The Drama league proper also has sponsored plays for grown people every Friday night at the pier.

The pier season closes tonight.

MAYOR TO START FIGHT UPON 7-8C FARES SEPT. 9

Summons Meeting to Receive Plan Now Kept Secret.

Mayor Thompson will begin his "Last ditch fight" against the new 7 and 8 cent traction fares Sept. 9.

The mayor yesterday directed the city clerk to call a special council meeting for the second Tuesday in September "to receive, consider and act upon a message from me, as mayor, concerning the local transportation situation, and a proposed solution of the traction problems confronting us contained therein."

Announcement Causes Stir.

The mayor's announcement that his traction plan, which he says will make Chicago's traction system "a model for the world," caused a buzz of comment among aldermen.

Some said the mayor intends to ask that the $25,000,000 traction fund be used to bring about some form of municipal operation. Others guessed legal action to revoke the charters of elevated and surface lines is to be recommended.

Meanwhile the mayor is keeping quiet.

Hints at Public Rule.

The only official hint as to the nature of the plan is contained in the mayor's recent signed statement, in which he said his plan will be to "place the management (of the traction systems) in the hands of men responsible to the people, who can be directed by the people, and who will be concerned in the people's rights."

STAGE STRIKERS DIGGING IN FOR LONG, HARD WAR

They're Not "Broke" and Will Have Own Play on Boards Soon.

Striking members of the Actors' Equity association in Chicago yesterday took off their coats, rolled up their sleeves, and settled down to what they believe will be a long, hard holdout.

Following a meeting yesterday afternoon of the executive committee of the association, the entire Chicago membership met last night in the headquarters in the Masonic temple. New members were admitted, benefit shows were planned, and dues were collected.

Benefit Is Planned.

A monster benefit show will be staged next Tuesday night for the association. Thursday night there will be a gigantic dance, which all the striking stars will attend. By next Saturday the association hopes to open a theater in the loop and install a permanent production composed of Equity members.

All funds derived from these shows will be turned in to the association's already (according to Grant Mitchell) overflowing coffers.

Money Is Rolling In.

Reports the association is broke and that several noted stars are trading overcoats for pawn tickets have aroused the entire clan.

"Outrageous," cried Mr. Mitchell last night. "Why, the money is rolling in. Every member is paying dues promptly and new members are coming in at the rate of twenty-five a day. We have had no call for help from any one of the association yet. That's not the half of it—we don't expect any."

Reports the international president of the motion picture operators had called out all men unwinding films which were produced by the "hated" managers circulated wildly about the loop last night.

The report, credited to Thomas Reynolds and Thomas E. Maloy, president and business agent of the operators' local; was apparently without truth. Both Reynolds and Maloy were said to be out of town, and investigation of several movie houses failed to show any strike.

2 MORE NEW YORK THEATERS CLOSED BY STAGE HANDS

New York, Aug. 23.—[Special.]—The actors' strike closed two more theaters tonight, when the stage hands and musicians at the Casino and Liberty theaters were called out in a sympathetic strike for the enforcement of the demands of the Actors' Equity association for the so-called equity contract and recognition of their union.

The audience was filing into the Casino when it was announced that the stage hands had not reported for work, which would make it impossible for the managers to present Lew Fields in "A Lonely Romeo." Contracts with the cast contained the features demanded by the Equity association. The second play closed was "The Scandals of 1919." Neither of the producers had taken part in the organization of the Producing Managers' association.

The Equity association is directing its efforts to nullify the effects of the new actors' association organized on Friday by Louis Mann and about 500 other members of the profession. It is the contention of the Equity association that the new organization is fostered by the producing managers and those in sympathy with them to defeat the strike.

Mr. Mann announced that more than 100 new members had been enrolled during the day.

MEDIATORS HOPE FOR PEACE IN BUILDING TIEUP

Find Contractors and the Unions on Friendly Terms.

H. J. Skeffington and P. J. Gill, the two government mediators who are trying to settle Chicago's building tieup, were optimistic as to the possibility of an early end of the strike when their meeting with contractors and strikers closed yesterday afternoon.

"Because the records of the past negotiations were not before us, we did not get far today," said Mr. Skeffington. "We will continue our negotiations Monday morning. This is the most peaceful strike I ever was called upon to handle. Both sides are friendly toward each other. There are no recriminations or hard words. I'm extremely hopeful."

"I'm optimistic," said Mr. Gill. "As long as we can keep the two sides together there is a good chance of a settlement. It may come Monday, maybe much later, but it is not far away."

Monday's meeting will be held in the mayor's office, as was yesterday's. That is believed to be the best neutral ground available.

Eleven contractors, six business agents for the laborers, carpenters, bricklayers, plasterers, electricians, and gas fitters, attended the meeting yesterday.

BRYAN TALKS OF RAILROADS AT BIBLE SESSION

Warsaw, Ind., Aug. 23.—[Special.]—The twenty-fifth annual session of the Winona Bible conference opened today with between 6,000 and 7,000 ministers and church workers present.

W. J. Bryan, former president of the Winona assembly, said:

"I believe that a plan of government operation of railroads, telegraph and telephone systems, with the federal government owning the big trunk lines and the state owning the smaller systems within their boundaries, would solve the problem."

Bishop Thomas Nicholson, John McNeill, and Gipsy Smith were on the program.

CLEARED OF AUTO DEATH.

A coroner's jury yesterday cleared Charles B. Appleby, 923 Lafayette parkway, of blame in connection with the death of Wilhelm Meinecke, 70 years old, a street cleaner, who was struck and killed by Appleby's automobile at Sheridan road and Foster avenue. Appleby, who was driving the machine, was released.

An amendment to the food control act defining "unjust and unreasonable prices" was tentatively agreed upon today by the senate agricultural subcommittee appointed to consider the anti-profiteering amendments suggested by Attorney General Palmer.

Under the committee amendment federal district attorneys would be authorized to appoint fair price committees and all prices in excess of those fixed by the committee would be regarded as unreasonable.

Two Profiteers Fined $500.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 23.—Joseph N. Nash, secretary-treasurer of the Cleveland Provision companq, today was fined $500 and costs for violating the state law covering holding of food in cold storage by Municipal Judge Silbert. On a similar charge, William F. Fletcher, Cleveland manager for Swift & Co., Chicago packers, was given the same fine late yesterday.

SEIZE FISH YEAR AND 5 MONTHS IN DULUTH STORAGE

Duluth, Minn., Aug. 23.—Federal agents this afternoon seized 189,440 pounds of frozen fish held in local cold storage. The seizure was made by Deputy United States marshals under authority of District Attorney Alfred Jaques.

Most of the fish, it is asserted, have been in cold storage since March, 1918, although a portion were stored in August, 1918. The following quantities were taken from three firms:

C. C. Bobins, Chicago, 50,035 pounds.

Johns Fish company, Duluth, 66,218 pounds.

Northern Fish company, Duluth, 73,157 pounds.

Final disposition of the fish as well as of the poultry seized on Thursday probably will be determined at hearings early next month, when the owners will be given an opportunity to present their side of the case.

HOUSEWIVES PAY $176,000 FOR 2,200,000 CANS

Spot Cash Sale of Army Goods Brings Near-Riot.

Housewives had their first opportunity yesterday to carry home a share of the United States army food for spot cash—and they took full advantage of it.

By means of a plan evolved by the Fair, four branch stores were placed in operation at 9:30 o'clock, the "cash and carry" system was employed, and purchasers were allowed to take home as many cans of corn, peas, and baked beans as they wished.

The sale at one branch delivery station, 5238 North Clark street threatened for a time to become a stampede. Bargain seekers from all over the north side flocked to the scene and before 10 o'clock the sidewalks for nearly a block around were supporting eager shoppers.

Baskets and Baby Carriages.

They came with baskets, boxes of all sizes and shapes, automobiles, baby carriages, toy wagons, and, in fact, every kind of an improvised carrier that could be used for the purpose.

Almost every kind of known vehicle was pressed into service. Some came on bicycles with huge baskets attached. Motorcycles with side car attachments seemed to be as popular as the autos. Machines of all sizes and makes lined the curbs for more than three blocks.

Trading in retail grocery stores in the vicinity was at a standstill. The white aproned proprietors and clerks stood outside their emporiums and watched with envy as the business rushed past their doors.

Fair Makes Speed Record.

The Fair officials had prepared for the emergency and the system in force enabled the shoppers to make their purchases and exit in fast time. One hundred clerks were employed to handle the rush. The customers were allowed to pass in five at a time and after they had transacted their business were let out into the alley. Policemen succeeded in keeping the lines moving, and there was little confusion after the sale got under way.

At the other three warehouses, including one at Forty-fifth avenue and Irving Park boulevard, at which the bargain sale was being held the customers were nearly as numerous as on the north side.

Supplies in all four of the stations were exhausted between 2:30 and 3 p. m. by the rush of the buying army which spent exactly $176,000 for the 2,200,000 cans of government food which made up the Fair store's quota. All of the stock went at 8 cents a can, including baked beans, sweet corn, and green peas, a cent less than that charged individual buyers by the government.

Officers of the American Legion, pursuing their food inquiry in Oak Park, announced their belief yesterday that the extravagance of customers undoubtedly, has advanced the cost of food supplies.

Chicago Invests $100,000.

A final check of the U. S. army food sales, made yesterday, showed Chicago had paid approximately $100,000 for 37,208 cases of food during the three day rush of orders through the postoffice. Purchasers will receive the food by Wednesday, it was stated.

Orders placed with the government for foods by Mayor Thompson's agents will be filled as fast as the foods arrive in Chicago, Acting Corporation Counsel Edward J. Smejkal said yesterday after a conference with Lieut. Col J. P. Castleman, zone supply officer.

Ninety carloads are in transit, according to Lieut. Col. Castleman. Because Chicago's allowance is entirely mortgaged by the orders of the mayor's agents no further authorities for the sale of government food will be issued for the present by the mayor.

Photograph of Liquid Carbonic Co. truck equipped with Goodyear Pneumatic Cord Truck Tires which are giving thorough satisfaction

Goodyear Solids vs. Goodyear Pneumatics—on Liquid Carbonic Company Fleet

---

"The final entire adoption of Goodyear Pneumatic Cord Truck Tires, on most of the trucks in our fleet is plainly indicated by our experience with them. We have strong evidence that they are not only correct in principle for our hauling conditions and, therefore, a source of all-around advantage and economy, but also are extremely well built and durable—real truck tires."—Robert S. Muir, General Supervisor of Motor Trucks, Liquid Carbonic Company, Chicago

---

FIRST, it was a test of Goodyear Solid Tires against other makes of solid tires on the 14-truck fleet of the Liquid Carbonic Company of this city, but the Goodyears averaged 3,000 to 4,000 more miles per tire.

Then when the consideration of pneumatics came up, it was a question of Goodyear Cords versus others, but the Goodyears again demonstrated greater toughness in this type.

So the company's tire question recently resolved itself to Goodyears versus Goodyears, solid and pneumatic, and we set down here the main results so that all Chicago and surrounding truckdom may read.

Briefly, it is another case in which pneumatics have increased truck-ability to get over the miles and haul more loads per day, have decreased truck repairs and load breakage (in this instance, marble soda fountains), and have enabled a more efficient dispatching system.

Note particularly the gasoline saving as shown by a comparison of two trucks of the same capacity: the solid-tired truck averaged 5 gallons to 45 miles per day while the pneumatic-equipped truck averaged 3¾ gallons to 45 miles per day.

Figure the saving, at 23 cents per gallon—which is 29 cents per truck per day, or about $87.00 per truck per year; therefore, it would amount approximately to $1,218 per annum on 14 trucks.

Of course, conditions vary and it is not possible frequently to run 14 miles to the gallon of gasoline with a motor truck, but this Liquid Carbonic Company test indicates the relative fuel economy of a solid-tired truck and a pneumatic-shod truck working under this concern's particular hauling conditions.

It is not strange to see Goodyears pitted against Goodyears, as in this test; for it is the continual endeavor of Goodyear Truck Tire Service Stations to assist truck owners to select the type of truck tire best suited to separate and distinct requirements.

This is the first step in a complete, continuous program of tire care offered by the Goodyear Truck Tire Service Stations listed below, to local truck owners—and strongly recommended by many of these owners.

SENATE BILL PLANS RETURN OF RAILROADS

Employes on Board of Directors by One of Its Provisions.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 23.—[Special.]—Rejecting the soviet government principle of the Plumb plan to turn the railroads over to the employés, Senator Cummins of Iowa, chairman of the senate committee on interstate commerce, is about to propose a solution of the railroad problem which will include representation of the workers on the railroad boards of directors.

The senator will urge this proposal upon his committee, and is confident that in the end it will be incorporated in the legislation for the disposition of the railroads, which will be considered by congress during the fall.

Retains Private Ownership.

The bill being framed by the committee, Senator Cummins said today, will contain these major features:

"Private ownership and operation are preserved.

"Consolidations are promoted so that systems can compete on even terms.

"The relationship of employer and employé is preserved for development in the direction which promises most good for those two classes, and for the nation as a whole."

Chairman Cummins and the other members of the committee are a unit in rejecting the Plumb plan, but are in favor of the principle of the democratization of industry.

Could Settle Problems.

"My personal opinion is that the wage earner should be represented on the boards of directors of the railroad," said Mr. Cummins. "Every member of this committee believes that the classified personnel should participate in the management of the railroads. By including their spokesmen among the directors their peculiar problems could be worked out by those most concerned and best informed. If this were done I believe most of their controversies would be adjusted before they reached the point of publicity.

"Our committee has approached the railroad problem from an obvious angle. The country must have rail transportation; how can the government arrange this transportation so that it will offer the greatest possible service at the lowest possible cost?

"The Plumb plan is the soviet principle, with very little concealment. The soviet society is one in which the wage earning class of a given industry or community exercise complete control over that industry or community. The program of the railroad brotherhoods looks to the control of the transportation industry by its wage earning personnel. The comparison is plain enough.

"Our industrial civilization is founded on the relationship between employer and employé, and I do not believe it can be succeeded by any other. The plan of the brotherhoods would destroy that relationship so far as the railroads are concerned, and we cannot assume that it would be attempted only in that industry."

Against Revolutionary Move.

"I have stood with the labor unions during many years of their hard struggle for recognition and justice," Senator Cummins continued. "I always have believed, and still believe, that the average manual worker does not receive a just share of the wealth he helps to create. He should receive more and I am anxious to help him get more. But on the demand for what amounts to a revolutionary change in the industrial system I must part company with the organized workmen, as I was compelled to do in the case o fthe Adamson law of 1916."

Senator Cummins proposes group consolidation of railway systems which will preserve and stimulate competition and eliminate the inequalities of freight rates.

Mrs. E. Rosinger, a widow living at 418 Menomonee street, yesterday appealed to THE TRIBUNE for aid in finding her son, Joseph, who disappeared from home Christmas day. He was 17, dark, and of medium weight. His approximate height was 5 feet 9 inches. During the war Joseph made several attempts to join the army, and it is possible he has been accepted.

FARWELL ASKS TRANSFER OF JUDGE STEWART

Replies to Charge of Being Bum with Accusations.

In reply to Municipal Judge Hugh R. Stewart's accusation that he was a bum, Mr. Arthur Burrage Farwell of the Chicago Law and Order league waded right through Mr. Shakespeare's several classifications of a lie yesterday, starting with the retort courteous and the quip modest and ending by giving the jurist the lie direct. Farwell yesterday requested Chief Justice Olson to reassign Judge Stewart.

In substance Mr. Farwell said he was not a bum, and that for thirty-seven years he had been successful in the sale of shoes. He added he would still be engaged in this vocation had not the liquor dealers threatened his firm with boycott back in 1907 unless he was discharged. This took place six months later, and Mr. Farwell became the St. George of the drys.

"Can't Hurt Me."

"But let him call me a bum," he added. "The people of Chicago know me. He can't hurt me, because they know I ain't one."

Continuing in his arraignment of the processes of law, Mr. Farwell said that Mr. Hoyne had been lax in several instances and that liquor dealers were not being prosecuted as they should.

"We have cases against saloon keepers that have been pending in the courts for more than a year," he said. "Every time we appear to prosecute the defendants are granted continuances. But we are keeping after the offenders in spite of the delays. We stand for enforcement of the law, and every one including judges, must learn that laws are made to be enforced. The liquor situation today is far worse than before prohibition went into effect. There are at least 1,000 saloons in Chicago that are cheating and getting away with it."

Will Push Silver Case.

Mr. Farwell declared that the case against Wolf Silver, dismissed by Judge Stewart on the grounds that Mr. Farwell's investigators had insufficient evidence, will be carried to the United States district attorney. New warrants against Silver, he said, would be asked for when analysis of the liquor confiscation is made.

Mr. Farwell quoted several decisions favoring the entrapment act, and referred to statements of Lincoln and Senator Hoar along the same line.

WILSON TO TILT LID ON LIQUOR OCT. 1, RUMOR

Banks with Money Tied Up in Stored Stocks Bring Pressure.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 23.—[Special.]—Washington is alive with rumors that the president plans to lift wartime prohibition on Oct. 1.

The report is that pressure by banks has been exerted and that the president will permit, for business reasons chiefly, the sale of liquors for the three months remaining before constitutional prohibition becomes effective in January.

Since July 1, it is said, government receipts from internal revenue have fallen greatly, with the result that the ways and means committee now is seriously considering the necessity of enacting additional revenue raisers to make up for the losses from whisky and beer taxes.

Banks' Money Tied Up.

But the serious aspect which is influencing the president to act, aside from his known desire to play fair with a semi-legalized industry, is the great amount of money loaned to distillers and brokers on whisky in storage. In many sections banks find themselves seriously hampered by the inability of the whisky men to lift the loans.

By Oct. 1, it was estimated today by a war department official, the army will be demobilized to all intents and purposes. President Wilson indicated in his statement issued when he left Brest, refusing to lift the ban at that time, that he could not act until demobilization had ended, but intimated strongly that he would act then.

Wet Bait for Solons.

In anticipation of such action, dealers are now sending letters to members of congress offering to sell them wines and liquors at greatly reduced prices on Oct. 1. These letters say that the wet stuff cannot be sent to them in Washington, but will be delivered to them in Baltimore or in outlying districts.

Leaders in the Anti-Saloon league have started a campaign to keep the lid down until Jan. 17, when national prohibition becomes effective.

ROB NORTH DAKOTA BANK.

Edinburg, N. D., Aug. 23.—The State Bank of Edinburg was broken into and robbed last night of between $400 and $500 in cash and securities in safety deposit boxes, the amount of which has not been determined.

It is within forty minutes of the Loop and easy access of all the great South Side industries.

Westwood Has Great Natural and Economic Home Advantages

During the last few years there has been a tremendous increase in this section in the value of both acreage and improved property. This tremendous increase is due first to the improvement and development of the South Side, and next to the natural and logical utility of this property to the people of Chicago. The gain in population of the Southwest Side in the last ten years has been greater than the combined gains of the North, West and South Sides. This ratio will continue as long as the Southwest Side continues to be the home of the greatest industries of the Middle West.

Westwood Beautiful in Physical Appearance

It is restricted home property, possessing excellent values for investors as well as home builders. Two blocks away is beautiful Marquette Park, and the northern boundary of the property is Marquette Boulevard. It is densely wooded property, developed and restricted for home building purposes.

Over 350 People Have Purchased Lots in Westwood

No amount of expert salesmanship could have disposed of this property so rapidly if it were not "up to sample" in quality and appearance. The more a property is advertised the greater is the necessity for absolute fairness with the public, the more essential it is that the plain truth be told about the property. Therefore when we say to you that Westwood is restricted home property, possessing excellent values for investors as well as home builders, we must be sure we are telling you the truth.

Make Up Your Mind to Come Out to Westwood Today and Telephone Randolph 7400

A trip to Westwood is easy to make and is as pleasant a trip as you can desire. If you should decide to see this property today just telephone our sales manager at Randolph 7400, who will send an automobile to take you to see the property and will also return you to your home in the same manner. While you are there we will show you how easy it is to get a home after your lot is purchased. The same amount that you pay monthly for rent, plus a small addition from your weekly savings, will enable you to own your home in from five to seven years. This is the only sensible solution of your high rent cost problem. By purchasing a lot in this district today you can save from 15 to 50 per cent on what you will be forced to pay for property in this section a short time hence.

Westwood Has Big Lots, Fine Air, Good Schools and Neighborhood Facilities

Residence lots at Westwood are all 30 feet wide by 125 feet deep. Here you have fertile soil and plenty of shade. In the neighborhood are public and denominational schools and churches, stores, shops, banks, garages and every requirement of the man who desires to build his home at once in this beautiful restricted neighborhood, with every city advantage. Westwood fulfills a great demand by the people who work on the Southwest Side for a home district with good neighbors that will be built up by their kind of people. In Westwood you will be near your work and can bring up your family in a neighborhood of open spaces, parks with playgrounds, tennis courts and golf links, a district with good transportation, schools, stores and other institutions necessary or advantageous to community life.

ON THE BRIDGE AT MIDNIGHT; A DIVORCE DRAMA

Or, How Girl Served Writ on Man Who Dodged 'Em All Six Months.

Dixie Lane made her debut Friday night as Chicago's demon process server. She succeeded where sheriff's deputies and lawyers' assistants had failed for nearly six months. The scenario reads about as follows:

Phillip J. Sommers Jr., who lives with his parents at 9756 Avenue H, is accused of being cruel to his wife. Now and then he beats her, it is charged, and sometimes even shies something in the general direction of her person. She objects and seeks a lawyer.

SUBTITLE: Fix me up with a divorce quick, before I join the angels.

The court grants her $15 a week while the divorce suit is pending, and she takes her baby daughter, Loretta, and goes to 10455 Calhoun avenue to live. Phillip gets tired of paying the fifteen per and quits. The sheriff sends a deputy with a writ, but Phillip always eludes him. This goes on for six months

SUBTITLE: It's no use trying to find that bird. He ain't visible.

Dixie Lane, who has blue eyes—'n' that ain't all—is sitting in the office of her lawyer friend, Leonora Z. Meyer. She overhears the remark.

SUBTITLE: Here, give me your writ. I'll serve it on him.

With her chum, Clara Castle, she goes to One Hundred and Sixth street, where Phillip is a bridge tender. It is late at night and there are no houses for blocks around. But Dixie is not afraid, because she has been "leading lady" in a wild west picture (produced on the west side) and knows how to handle "bad eggs." As usual, there is no one on the bridge. She seeks a railroad man.

SUBTITLE: Yes, lady, the bridge will swing at 11:30. A boat goes through at that time.

Half an hour before midnight a boat whistle is heard. As if by magic three men appear upon the bridge and begin to turn the capstan. Dixie and Clara hurry up and help them. When the bridge is back in place, Dixie suddenly pokes her finger at one of the men.

SUBTITLE: Well, well, if it isn't Phillip!

Phillip, feeling coquettish, pulls her toward a lamp. He regards her with astonishment.

SUBTITLE: You've got me! I don't know who you are!

Dixie reaches into a closed umbrella and draws forth the writ. With a Thedabara leer she hands it to him.

SUBTITLE: You bet I've got you! Sign here, old dear.

ROOSEVELT TO TELL CHICAGO OF LEGION PLANS

Over in the American Legion bailiwick in the Marquette building all attention is directed to the visit of Theodore Roosevelt, and a committee from national headquarters of the legion in New York, to Illinois on Friday and Saturday of next week. Col. Roosevelt arrives in Indianapolis on Thursday, moves to Springfield Friday and comes into Chicago Saturday morning. His trip is in the interests of the legion and he will make a number of speeches during his stay here.

A committee composed of heads of the local posts of the legion and the members of the state committee will meet him in the morning. There will be a luncheon at the Khaki and Blue club at noon, and two other addresses in the afternoon and evening. He will go into the hopes and fears of the legion men, and tell something of the plans for action at the national convention in Minneapolis Nov. 9, 10 and 11.

It became known yesterday that a grand federation of all the veterans of patriotic organizations of the country has been advocated by the Grand Army of the Republic, the "daddy of them all" in patriotic organization circles. A letter made public in New York yesterday, addressed to Henry D. Lindsley, chairman of the national executive council of the American Legion, and signed by C. E. Adams of Omaha, commander-in-chief of the G. A. R., contains the proposal.

This Is Great for Tired, Wilted, Wrinkled Faces

An effective warm weather treatment —best tending to cause wrinkles and flabbiness—is a skin-tightener made by dissolving one ounce of powdered Saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel. Bathe the face in the solution and remarkable improvement will be observed immediately. The lines and sags disappear in a hurry. You feel and look much refreshed and the face has a more youthful appearance.

As there is a beneficial tonic action the results are more than temporary. [illegible] noticed particularly in the [illegible] the relaxed facial muscles. The saxolite and witch hazel, which can be purchased at any drug store, are quite harmless, of course. [illegible] SUPPLY CO., Chicago, Ill.

APPLY BIBLE TO LABOR QUESTIONS, CHURCHES' PLEA

Leaders Arrange for Workers' Sunday on Aug. 31.

BY THE REV. F. L. GRATIOT.

Greater coöperation between employers and employed is the subject of a call issued by the Chicago Church federation, the Rev. Herbert L. Willett, president, in connection with the observance of Labor Sunday, Aug. 31. A similar "Appeal to American Labor" was issued by the New York headquarters of the New Era movement of the Presbyterian church in the United States, of which Dr. William Hiram Foulkes is general secretary.

Urge Greater Production.

The principles which need emphasis at this time are given by the federation, through its commission on the church and industry, as follows:

> The moral character of all human relations, industrial as well as others. There is constant need for recognition of the great ethical and religious messages of the Bible as they apply to questions of the hour.
> The necessity of fuller mutual understanding of economic laws and obligations on the part of all classes—the employers and the employed alike.
> The necessity of greater production.

Foulkes Assails Bolshevism.

"Jesus was a carpenter," said Dr. Foulkes in his appeal, "and most of the men he organized into the fellowship of service toiled with their hands.

"Labor stands at the fork of the roads. On the one hand is selfish, sordid, and satanic bolshevism, caring neither for justice nor for brotherhood. On the other hand is Christian democracy, with the mutualization of all human interests."

COLLEGE SOWERS OF DRAGON TEETH WORRY ALUMNI

Poor Pay Stirs Unrest of Professors, Cornell Man Says.

Prominent college men of Chicago expressed yesterday great interest in the report that the department of justice had before it material for an inquiry into the teaching of bolshevism and "revolution" in some of the universities and colleges of the country. This was one of the results of the publication yesterday of a letter which was written by a university professor and which had been submitted to Mr. Clyne for his consideration.

"This subject has been discussed at alumni meetings of our Chicago chapter for the last six or seven months," said John P. Dods, 1125 Davis street, Evanston, former president of the Cornell Alumni Association of Chicago. The Cornell organization was the one which protested against the alleged disloyal speech of Prof. Nathaniel Schmidt in Chicago in March, 1917.

Reason for Radicalism.

"Every member of the chapter feels it is a question of vital import and one which we must meet immediately," Mr. Dods continued.

"The base of the trouble is the poor pay given our teachers. It is natural for any professor trying to live, possibly to educate his family, on $1,500 a year, to rebel consciously or unconsciously against a society which permits branches of civic and corporate existence to wax and grow fat upon exorbitant profits. The first thing we must do to raise the standard of our teachers is to raise wages.

"Bolshevism in any angle cannot and must not be taught in our universities and colleges to the young minds of America. That, of course, is understood."

District Attorney Says Nothing.

United States Attorney Clyne continued his attitude of "nothing to say" on the subject of a governmental investigation. One report, emanating from semi-official quarters, said upward of a score of professors and teachers, including several of prominence, were slated for investigation. Among them are understood to be some who were reported to congress during the war by the army intelligence bureau as having more or less "direct action" leanings, it is understood.

Prof. Arthur W. Calhoun, whose letter to Prof. William E. Zeuch at Minneapolis was published in THE TRIBUNE yesterday, has left Columbus, O. During the summer he had taught sociology in the summer school of the Ohio State university. He is on his way to a Pennsylvania town.

While he has accepted a position as professor of sociology at De Pauw university, Greencastle, Ind., he also is said to be considering an offer from Bryn Mawr.

Freedom Due to Professors.

University professors have a greater freedom of challenging accepted beliefs in the classroom than outside, according to Dean Roy C. Slickinger of the college of liberal arts at Northwestern university. Dean Slickinger said:

"The thing which differentiates the university from institutions of lower grade in our educational system is that its members seek to discover new truths, while the others lay more stress on the inculcation of received truths.

"Therefore, it not only is a privilege of universities, but also their first duty, to examine the foundation upon which received truths rest, and to learn whether corrections and restatements are in order.

"This process is constantly being carried out in every department of the university, but generally escapes public notice except in certain fields."

Must Weigh Words.

"A professor is entitled to greater freedom of challenging accepted beliefs in the classroom than outside. The difference is due to the fact that in one case he is dealing with those trained to weigh evidence and examine all sides of a question, while in the other case one isolated statement or phrase is likely to be seized upon and regarded as embracing the whole truth.

"University professors have the same rights to conduct propaganda as have other citizens, no more and no less, but they must be careful in every possible way to disassociate their universities from their private activities and propaganda.

Evolution, Not Revolution.

"Universities believe in evolution, but not in revolution; in following wherever the truth may lead, but not in adopting the latest hypothesis before it can be established.

"The sociologists in our university are in no danger of being stampeded."

SOLDIERS' FAMILIES MAKE CAMP GRANT REAL MILITARY CITY

CAMP GRANT, Ill., Aug. 23.—[Special.]—Camp Grant became a real military city today. The soldiers have moved their families into the cantonment, and the grocery store and meat shop is provided "around the corner."

The families are quartered in a certain area of camp, and the colony is growing. A great social season is promised during the coming winter.

Having sent 238,000 officers and men on their way home from the army, the Camp Grant discharge mill has begun to grind itself to pieces. Only a few men have been retained to take care of 3d division troops, scheduled to arrive here late next week, and with the demobilization of these troops the work of the discharge mill will be about over.

REPRODUCE OLD BUILDINGS FOR U. S. EXPOSITION

In preparation for the marriage of a Chicago couple within its quaint portals at the All-American exposition, a Kentucky courthouse—typical in architecture of hundreds of others in Dixieland—is being erected at the Coliseum. It is not a painted affair, but a structure of wood, colonial style, waiting for the "jedge" to enter and hold court.

It will house the exhibit of the Illinois Americanization committee. and will also be a rendezvous of southerners now living in Chicago.

A score of Chicago couples already have volunteered for the wedding, and each mail brings new candidates, it is stated.

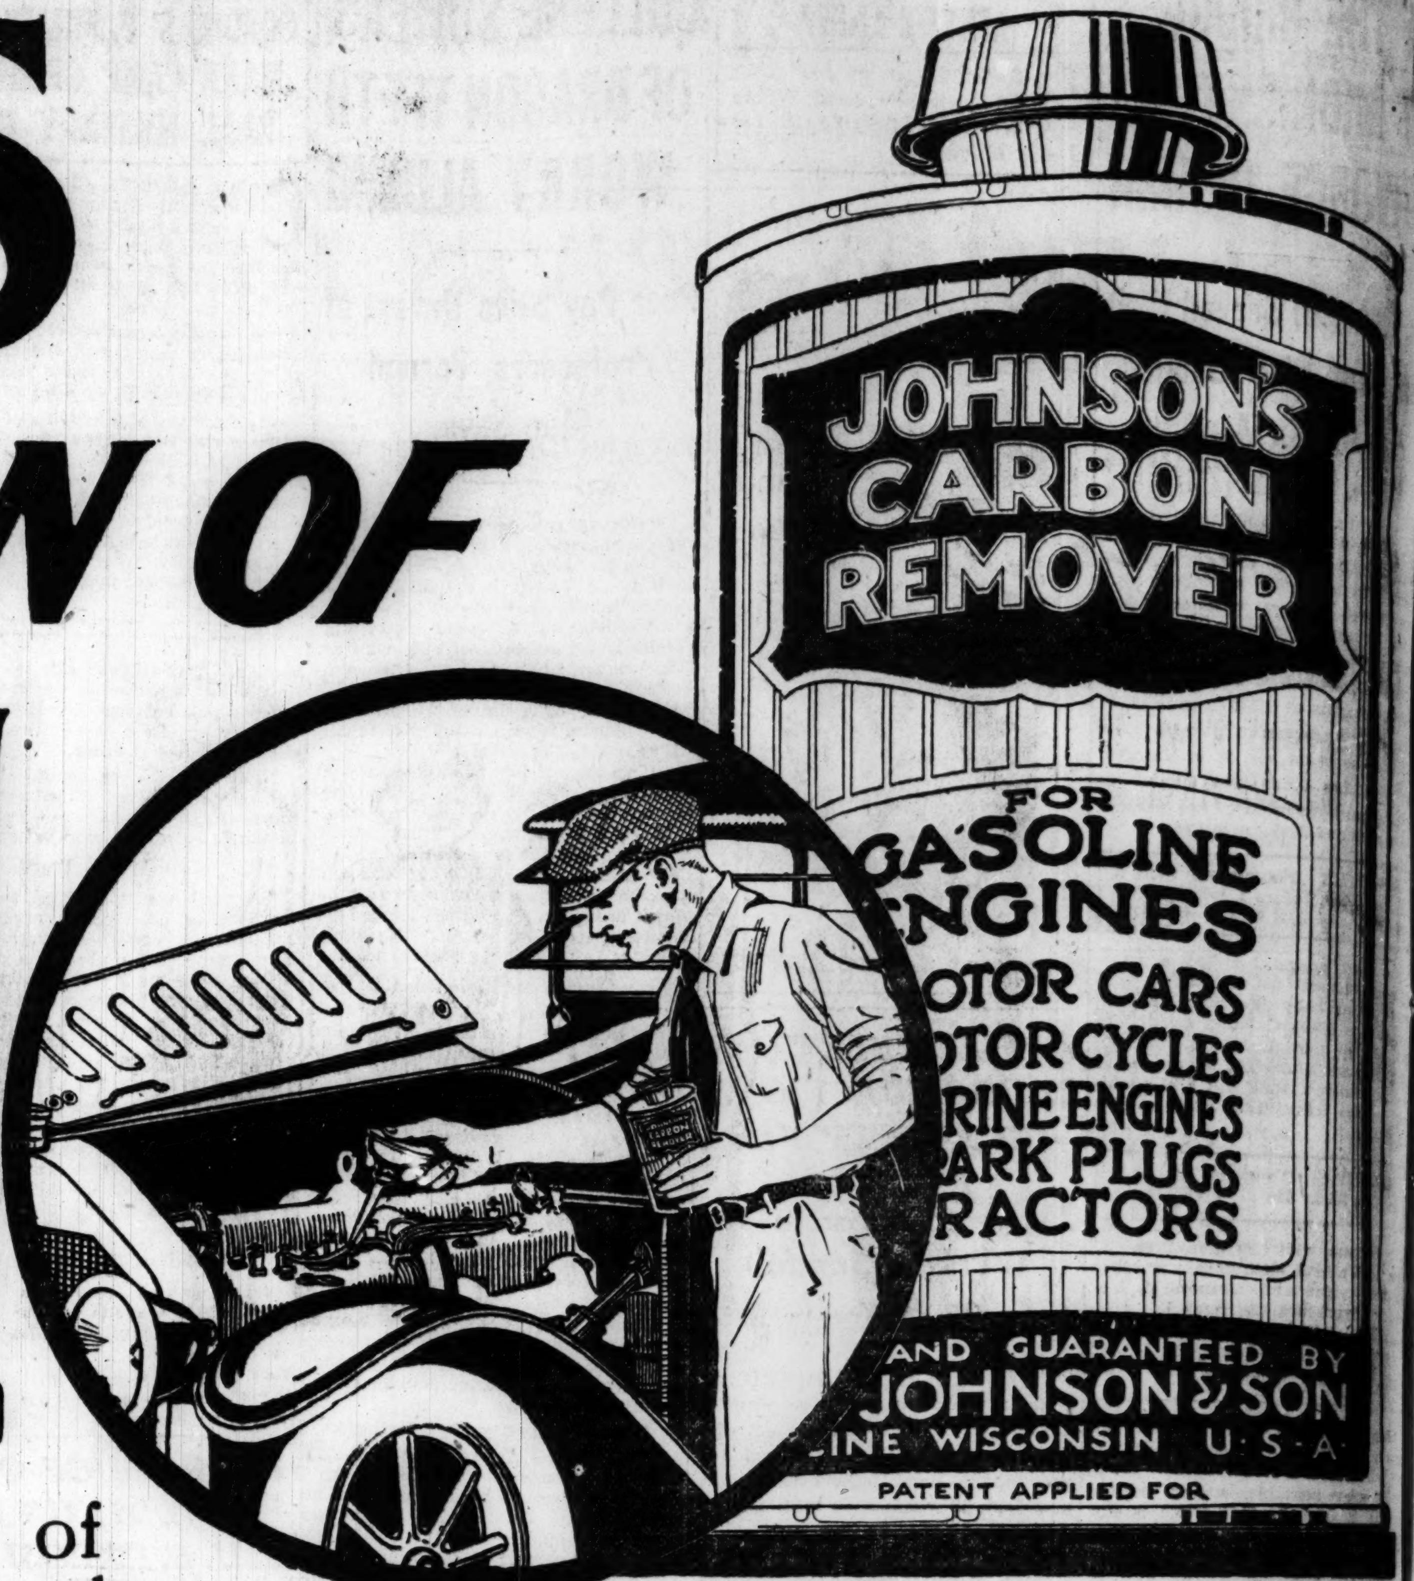
PREVENTS ACCUMULATION OF CARBON



YOU can keep your motor snappy and full of "pep" by preventing the accumulation of carbon. Don't wait until your engine is choked and caked with it. Use Johnson's Carbon Remover every 500 miles, then the carbon is removed while it is soft and powdery, eliminating the frequent grinding of valves and keeping the motor always clean. No experience or labor required—you can easily do it yourself in ten minutes—and the cost is trifling.

JOHNSON'S CARBON REMOVER

Johnson's Carbon Remover is a perfectly harmless liquid to be poured or squirted into the cylinders. Millions of cans have been used with satisfaction. It simply softens the carbon, then the heat from the engine pulverizes it and it is blown out the exhaust. Johnson's Carbon Remover contains no acids and does not affect lubrication.

It is the easiest, cleanest, safest and most satisfactory remedy for carbon. It will save you from $3.00 to $5.00 over any other method without laying up your car. A dose of Johnson's Carbon Remover—the engine laxative—will stop that knock—quiet the motor, and give the maximum power with the minimum amount of fuel.

KEEP YOUR CAR YOUNG

Johnson's Radiator Cement

will stop leaks immediately without laying up the car—no mechanical experience required. It contains nothing which can clog or coat the cooling system and is absolutely harmless in every respect. It isn't a make-shift—it's a permanent repair. It will ordinarily seal a leak in from two to ten minutes. A half pint is sufficient for a Ford or other small radiator.

More Mileage
for Tubes and Casings

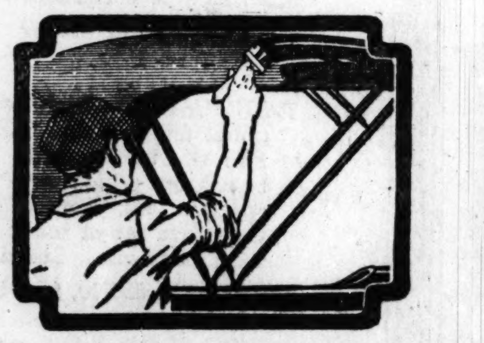
Johnson's Hastee Patch

This is the ideal repair for tubes, casings and rubber goods of all kinds. No time, labor or heat required. A Patch can be applied in three minutes and it's so simple a child can use it. Gives equally good results on a pin hole, puncture or on a large blowout. Conveniently put up in strips.

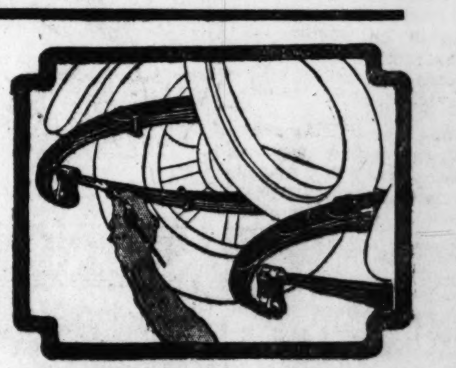
Johnson's Black-Lac

Here is a preparation with which you can make your gray, dusty top and side curtains look like new. Johnson's Black-Lac is unequalled for blackening fenders, rims, hoods, lamps—and in fact, all worn metal parts. Prevents rust and keeps your car in a high state of repair.



Johnson's Valve Grinding Compound

Best by test for grinding all kinds of valves. Contains no glass, emery or grit. Gives a velvet seat. Made in two grades—the coarse for roughing and the fine for finishing. Put up in lithographed Duplex cans containing 2 oz. each of the fine and coarse. Use Johnson's Valve Grinding Compound for all kinds of surfacing and polishing.



Johnson's Stop-Squeak Oil

It is easy to use—simply squirt on with oil can or paint on with brush—it immediately penetrates between the spring leaves, thoroughly lubricating them. Prevents spring breakage—makes your car ride easier and eliminates squeaks. No tools required—it isn't even necessary to jack up the car.

Johnson's Cleaner

Renew that dirty grimy hood with Johnson's Cleaner. It removes spots, stains, tar, alkali, etc. Contains no grit or acid. After cleaning body, hood and fenders with Johnson's Cleaner polish them with Johnson's Prepared Wax Liquid. Imparts a hard dry glass-like polish. Sheds water and dust and makes a "wash" last twice as long. Adds years to the life of automobile varnish. You can go over a good sized car in an hour.

Drive around to our service station at 113 E. Superior Street (Chicago) and get an estimate on having the finish of your car put in perfect condition without revarnishing—simply with the use of Johnson's Cleaner and Johnson's Prepared Wax. Phone Superior 6516.

BY JOE DAVIS.

Oakmont Golf Course, Pa., Aug. 23.—[Special.]—Davidson Herron, the sturdy son of Pittsburgh, today crowned himself king of the amateur golfers, defeating young Bobby Jones, the 17 year old Atlanta player, 5 and 4, in a brilliantly fought final at the Oakmont Country club.

It was a distinctly home triumph for the ruddy faced victor, as he was born within a stone's throw of the course and grew up with the game. He is the third player from the Smoky City to win the national classic, his predecessors being Eben M. Byers in 1906 and William C. Fownes Jr. in 1910.

Herron Shows Class.

Herron's play throughout the tournament stamps him as one of the leading players of the country. Today he would have given Chick Evans, Francis Ouimet, or Jerome Travers quite as good a battle as he gave Jones and probably would have beaten any of this trio.

The Oakmont player, it will be recalled, was one of the three men to tie in the qualifying round. Then in turn he defeated W. H. Gardner, 2 and 1; J. N. Stearns, 6 and 5; W. J. Thompson, 8 and 7, and J. W. Pratt, 7 and 6.

The first evidence of his great ability came when he scored a 73 against Thompson under horrible weather conditions. Jones had defeated J. Marion 3 and 2; Robert A. Gardner, 5 and 4; Rudy Knepper, 3 and 2, and W. C. Fownes Jr., 5 and 3.

Kid Has Tough Foes.

Jones' opponents had been harder than those of Herron, but this was not calculated to make any great difference in his play in the final, and by the critics outside of Pittsburgh, he generally was picked to win. Although young in years Jones has had expert coaching and perhaps more play in big matches than any one of his age.

Until the closing stages, when Bobby slipped a little, it was a nerve trying battle marked by golf well worthy of a championship final. Starting under perfect weather conditions, the best of the whole week, the finalists played great golf. Herron reached the turn in 36, one under par, Jones being only two more. Herron was leading, 2 up, and playing so well that it was evident the Georgia player would have to uncork some fine golf to beat him.

Oakmonter's Play Grows Loose.

Then the big Oakmonter grew a bit loose and his incoming round of 44 as against 40 by the Georgia boy made it look dubious for the home player. Jones had several chances, but could not profit by them, and they finished the round on even terms.

A gallery estimated at between 3,500 and 4,000 crowded around the first tee, lined both fairways, and fringed the first green 482 yards from the tee. Seldom has the national final had a more picturesque setting, the orange colored banners carried by 100 marshals blending with the many colored costumes in the gallery.

Jones cracked out two good shots in the afternoon, but Herron sliced to a trap on his second. He chipped out to within eight feet from the cup and a great shout went up when he holed for a birdie four and was 1 up. Jones was short of the green on his third and took 5.

Gallery Grows Excited.

The next eight holes kept the gallery, or such of it as crowded around each green, in a state of excitement. Jones was really the attacking force and most of the time Herron was on the defensive. It was only by consummate nerve shown on the greens that he was able to keep ahead of the Georgia boy.

At the second hole, after Jones had sunk a six foot putt, Herron duplicated the trick. Jones squared at the third hole, where he holed a ten foot putt, and Herron missed a five footer. Again having the worst of the play to the fourth green, Herron sunk a 25 foot putt and this upset Jones so that he blew a five footer.

One swallow does not make a summer, nor does one topped drive mar one's game, but Bob topped from the fifth tee, and it cost him the hole, 5 to 4, putting him two down. Jones was again the attacking party on the short sixth, Herron pulling off the green down hill. Herron now was only 1 up, and he kept this lead at the eighth, where Jones missed a five foot putt for a win.

Turning Point at Ninth.

If there was any turning point in the nerve trying struggle it came at the ninth hole, 462 yards, where Herron's great brassey was 20 feet to the left of the pin, and netted him a win,

Avalanche of Hits by Cubs Beats Braves Twice, 6-0; 7-6

BY I. E. SANBORN

Boston, Mass., Aug. 23.—[Special.]—From an exceedingly close finish the Cubs emerged with two scalps dangling from their belts as a result of today's double-header with the Braves. Mitchell's tribe won the first battle by the easy margin of 6 to 0, but had a fight for the second, which ended 7 to 6.

Hippo Vaughn pitched the first game and with perfect support shut out his opponents, while the Cubs slammed the offerings of Causey and McQuillan all over the big pasture on which the Braves cavort.

Martin started the second game against Fillingim, and was put in the hole in the very first round by a costly error by Deal, which contributed three runs to the enemy.

Cubs Score Five Runs.

The Cubs came from behind and jumped into the lead in the fourth when they combined a trio of hits with a pass and a boot by Maranville for five tallies. That cluster and a run that was handed them in the seventh seemingly put the Cubs on Soft avenue, as Martin was going steadily and blanking the Braves regularly.

A home run by Powell in the eighth was a danger signal that was disregarded, but in the ninth Martin weakened so fast that he could not finish. Four consecutive hits were made off him after one was out in the final round. These scored two runs, leaving the Cubs a margin of only one.

Nick Carter was sent to "Speed's" rescue with the tying tally on third base, the winning run on first, and two men to get out. Carter was equal to the task. He fanned Cruise in the crucial spot when even a long fly would have knotted the count.

Deal Offsets His Error.

Then Deal retrieved his first inning boot by a play that saved the game. Holke rapped a little roller toward third. It started foul, and everybody except Holke slowed up. Then the ball rolled fair. Deal tore in and got it too late to throw out Holke, but Rawlings started for the home plate again and Deal tossed the ball to Daly, getting a close verdict from Umpire Harrison.

The Cubs fattened their batting averages with twenty-four swats, making fifteen in the first game. The reason they scored only half a dozen runs was because they played the slam-bang style all the way and hit into three double plays, each of which squelched a rally.

Vaughn allowed seven hits in the first game, but was airtight in the pinch spots. Twice the Braves grouped two hits on him and had men on third and second, with only one out each time, but he stopped them there.

Bad for Martin at Start.

Martin's bad start in the second game looked ominous. Pick and Rawlings singled, but Martin pounced on Powell's bunt in time to force Pick at third. Cruise forced Powell at second, and when they tried the double steal Daly worked the bluff throw successfully, trapping Rawlings half way between third and home for the third out. But Deal muffed Daly's peg and let Rawlings home. A single by Holke and a triple by Mann scored two more tallies.

Magee's single and Flack's double scored one Cub in the third. They batted around in the fourth. Herzog started with a walk and Merkle forced him. Barber and Deal singled, Magee was safe on an attempt to throw out a runner at the pan which failed. Daly singled and Martin worked the squeeze play, then Maranville booted a swift roller from Flack, and the combination was good for five runs.

A two base wild heave by Rawlings and a couple of bunts scored the final Cub tally in the seventh.

Notes

Boston, Mass., Aug. 23.—[Special.]—Two more games here Monday and Tuesday wind up the last eastern trip of the Cubs.

Ensign Joe Newkirk went to Lynn this afternoon to pitch for a local team and see if it would help him get control.

Manager Mitchell will pilot part of his squad to New Haven tomorrow morning for an exhibition game that is to be played in advance of the league game there.

Daly ought to have made a three bagger in the ninth of the second game but forgot to touch second on his way and the umpires noticed it, so allowed the claim when the Braves made it. That cost a run which would have been very valuable in that frantic last half.

The Cubs batting order was announced incorrectly with Deal batting ahead of Magee in the first game but the Cubs did not follow it. The error was never discovered. When the announced made the same mistake in the second game Manager Mitchell switched his order and batted Deal ahead of Magee to avoid possible wrangling.

SOX ON RAMPAGE SWAT NEW YORK IN 10 TO 2 GAME

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

With 2,000 fighting marines watching them and having more fun than they've had since July, 1918, the White Sox romped away with the first game of the series against the once threatening New York Yankees yesterday at Comiskey park, 10 to 2, and still hold onto their lead of five laps in the mad pennant fight.

Eddie Cicotte was on the slab, so that is half the explanation. He didn't let the enemy get their two runs until the Sox were far ahead. Bob Shawkey, supposed to be the ace of the New York pitching staff, opposed Eddie, and the Sox knocked him flat in the first inning for a cluster of four runs. It doesn't seem to make any difference these days whether it's an ace or a deuce who is pitching to Gleason's men. They are in a mood to knock anybody flat.

And Then Four More Runs.

Shawkey stuck to the ship until the fifth inning was over, but in that round he was knocked down again for four runs and retired in favor of a buxom left hander named O'Doul. The Sox nicked him for a couple more, one in the sixth and one in the seventh, just to make it known to him that he was pitching in the big league.

The south siders slammed out fourteen hits, four of which were two baggers, and they finished pulled up. Cicotte went along without a sign of distress until the seventh inning, when it was reasonable to let up a bit, and Pipp poled a homer over the right field fence just south of the end of the bleacher. Then after Pratt had gone out Duffy Lewis poled a long high drive to left center and the ball hit the sun baked field and bounded over the screen into the left bleacher for another homer.

Pratt Caught at the Plate.

In the ninth Pratt lammed one out of reach in right center and attempted to make a home run of it, but was relayed out at the home plate. Besides the two homers and the triple, the Yanks made three harmless singles.

After the Sox hopped away in front with a lead of four runs in the first inning the big Saturday crowd of nearly 20,000 was content to watch the score board to see what Detroit was doing or to listen to Mr. Weil's band play. There wasn't any doubt about the final outcome of the game, and every day the White Sox win a game more fellows send applications in for world's series seats.

Yanks Help Sox Score.

There was a little help from New York in obtaining those four runs in the first inning, but the Sox would have made one or two anyway, and one might have been enough for Cicotte if he had been called upon to exert himself. He was in prime shape for a fight.

Liebold started that first with a walk and Eddie Collins singled, Liebold going to third. Weaver slapped one to Peckinpaugh. There was a sure force play in sight and a possible double play, but "Peck" fumbled the ball, and E. Collins was safe at second, with Weaver safe at first, and Liebold counted. Jackson then laid down a perfect bunt for a hit, filling the bags, and Felsch produced a sacrifice fly that let E. Collins get home. Weaver scooted to third and Jackson to second after the catch, and both came home on Gandil's single to right.

Shawkey tightened up after that, but in the fifth, with one out, E. Collins walked and Weaver singled. Jackson poled a two bagger, driving them both home, then Felsch walked. A double steal was attempted, but Jackson was nipped at third. Gandil singled and Felsch got home, and Risberg doubled, sending Gandil in.

A bad heave by Baker let John Collins get on in the sixth, and E. Collins' walk and Weaver's single sent him home. Gandil's double and Schalk's single produced the other run in the seventh.

KRUGER CRACKS SWIMMING MARK

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 23.—Harold Kruger of Oakland, Cal., set a middle Atlantic A. A. U. record today when he won the 100 yard Sackett cup race in the Schuylkill river at Lafayette, Pa., in 59 3-5 seconds.

Kruger, an added starter, recognized as the world's backstroke champion, using the famous crawl, beat Raymond Uhl, the 1919 title holder, to the slip by two and one-half yards. He also won the 220 yard handicap race.

Carl Urban of the Philadelphia Turngemeinde captured the 880 yard middle Atlantic championship event in 13:34.

FOSS VAULTS TO WORLD'S RECORD HEIGHT IN MEET

C. A. A. Star Sets Mark of 13 Feet 3 9-16 Inches in Sears Events.

Table of Points

Cubs	41	Athletics	34
Orioles	39	Shippers	3

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Securing an excellent pull-up and perfect fling away, Frank Foss, former Cornell university athlete, now competing under colors of the Chicago Athletic association, yesterday established a world's record of 13 feet 3 9-16 inches in the pole vault in one of the invitation events held in connection with the tenth annual track and field games of Sears, Roebuck & Co. on Homan Athletic field.

Foss' record performance was easily the feature of the games, which were witnessed by 20,000. First team prize in the big west side firm's events was won by the Cubs with 41 points, after a hard struggle with the Orioles, who counted 39 points. The Athletics made an uphill fight all the way and landed third, with 34 points. The Shippers were not as strong as in former years, and registered only three markers.

Foss' Record Hard Earned.

When Foss cleared the bar at 12 feet 9 inches in the Central A. A. U. championships, held Aug. 16, it was freely predicted he would shatter the mark. He had reached the point of his athletic career where he was right for a record breaking performance.

The athlete was to leave on his vacation yesterday, but Director Martin Delaney of the C. A. A. urged him to stay over and take a crack at the record. The easy manner in which the Cherry Circle athlete cleared the bar at every succeeding height over 11 feet showed he was fit for the attempt.

After he had cleared 13 feet by fully 6 inches, the bar was placed 4 inches higher. On his first attempt at this height the wind blew the bar off. On his second trial, Foss cleared nicely with as pretty a vault as one would care to see.

Former Mark 13 Feet 2¼.

The former record was 13 feet 2¼ inches, made by Mark Wright of Dartmouth in the eastern intercollegiate, held at Cambridge in 1912.

Individual honors in the interesting Sears-Roebuck games were won by Franz Marceau, a C. A. A. athlete, who is an employé of the firm. Marceau scored 13 points by taking the half mile, one mile, and finishing second in the 220 yard dash. Marceau ran for the Orioles. J. G. Stind of the Athletics and Samuel Rosen of the Orioles scored 10 points each.

Although the athletic events attracted most interest, the drills given by girl employés drew rounds of applause. The girls took part in wand and tennis drills, and a Maypole dance.

Julius Rosenwald Spectator.

The meet, recognized as one of the best held in the west, if not in the country, was conducted by Physical Instructor Martin Delaney of the C. A. A. Julius Rosenwald, head of Sears, Roebuck & Co., pulled the rope to unfurl the flag at the opening of the games, while A. H. Loeb and O. C. Doering were honorary referees.

Other well known men who either were guests of the firm or acted as officials were W. B. Simpson, president of the C. A. A., and R. J. Collins, vice presdient of the Cherry Circle club; Everett C. Brown, president of the South Shore Country club; J. L. Barchard, chairman of the athletic committee at the C. A. A.; W. J. Mohr; Charles A. Dean, president of the Central A. A. U.; L. J. Rosenwald, and a host of others.

PENNANT DOPE SHOWS SOX AND REDS CLOSE TO COVETED TITLES

CHICAGO'S baseball fans are beginning to count the White Sox sure things in the pennant race. The Hose have thirty games left to play. Detroit, the only rival, has thirty-two. Suppose the Sox go along at an easy pace and win eighteen of their thirty games, which would give them a final standing of 89 games won and 51 lost. In order to beat that Detroit would have to cop twenty-five of thirty-two games. If the Sox only split even in thirty games Detroit would have to win twenty-two out of thirty-two in order to nose out the Sox.

In the National league Cincinnati fans have good cause to enthuse. The Reds have twenty-eight remaining games and New York has thirty-four. If the Reds go along at anywhere near their regular season's pace they should win eighteen of the twenty-eight and if they do that the Giants would have to win thirty out of thirty-four in order to take the pennant. If the Reds only break even on the remaining twenty-eight games the Giants would have to win twenty-six out of thirty-two to cop.

'TOUCH' VICTORY FOR MISS BOYLE IN SENIOR SWIM

Using a trudgeon crawl and swimming in the face of a strong west wind, Miss Charlotte Boyle of the New York Women's Swimming association defeated her teammate, Miss Ethelda Bleibtrey, by a touch and won the National A. A. U. women's senior long distance swim at the South Shore Country club yesterday. Miss Boyle swam from the Sixty-eighth street crib to the beach, a distance of about two and one-half miles, in 32:30 3-5.

The easterners were easily the class of the field of eight starters. Shortly after the start Miss Thelma Darby of Indianapolis, the only entrant who had a chance with the New Yorkers, fell behind, and interest in the result centered around the fight betwen the eastern stars.

Miss Darby Finishes Fourth.

Miss Darby swam her usual game race and finished eight minutes behind the winner. Mrs. C. L. Brown of the I. A. C., considered one of the best long distance women swimmers in the west a few years back, was fourth.

Miss Margaret Eulass, a graduate of Hyde Park High school, competed in an A. A. U. race for her first time and made a creditable showing. Her inexperience cost her a lot of ground, as she had trouble keeping her course.

Miss Helen Roche, unattached, was compelled to quit the race at the half way mark. She was taken with cramps and taken from the water before she was in danger.

BY JOHN SPELLMAN.

Elgin, Ill., Aug. 23.—[Special.]—Tom Milton, driving a Duesenberg Special, romped off with the 301 mile Elgin road race today. He averaged 73.5 miles per hour, considerably slower than the course record. Milton's elapsed time was 4:05:17.

Roscoe Sarles, in a Roamer Special, was second, covering the course at an average speed of 72.9 miles an hour.

Kurt Hitke, in another Roamer Special, was third. Ralph Mulford, who borrowed a Philbrin Special when his own Duesenberg was put out of business, was fourth.

Seven Cars Finish.

Of the thirteen cars which started, seven finished, lubrication trouble, burned out bearings, and other mechanical trouble forcing most of these cars to quit.

Cliff Durant, in a Chevrolet Special, furnished the only accident of the day. In making his first trip around the course he attempted to pass another machine on the back stretch. A stone flew up, struck him on the forehead, and stunned him. His machine left the road, knocked over four telegraph poles, and turned completely over three times, finally being stopped by a barbed wire fence.

Durant and his mechanician, E. C. Comer, suffered painful bruises, but both were able to be about within an hour. Comer drove the machine to the pits.

Mulford Is Unlucky.

Mulford had an unfortunate mechanical accident. He led the field for the first twenty-two laps, setting a new course record for the first eighteen laps. He averaged 78 6-10 miles an hour for this distance. In the twenty-second lap he pulled up at the pits, his machine suffering with lubrication trouble. Despite the efforts of a small army of helpers, including Barney Oldfield, the machine could not be restarted in time to make up the lost time.

The lead then went to Arthur Kline in a Puegoet Special. In the twenty-fourth lap Kline was leading Milton by two minutes. A burned out bearing put Kline's machine out of commission in the thirty-first lap.

Milton then assumed the lead, being being about one-half an hour ahead of any one else, and simply had a joy ride for the balance of the thirty-six laps.

Tom Alley Quits Race.

Tom Alley in a Bender Special was a contender for one-half of the race. Only a few minutes separated Mulford, Milton, and himself in the first dozen laps, but Alley drove off the course without explaining his trouble.

Mulford reëntered the race this way. Ira Vail, who entered the Philbrin, gave way to John Longchamp, who permitted Mulford to drive the last few laps.

After Durant's car had met with its accident, other cars began to drop out. Joe Thomas in a Mercer, quit in the third lap with a burnt out bearing. Al Cotey in an Ogren went out in the fifth with a broken connecting rod.

The crowd did not come up to the expectations of the promotors. They estimated about 30,000 would attend, but it was asserted that despite the fine weather, less than one-half this number attended. The race from a spectacular stand point, did not seem to bring many trills from the crowd. There were few close brushes.

Weird Work by Timers.

The timers did some weird work. At times they had the wrong men in the lead, but the mistakes soon were straightened out. E. Waldo Stein, driver of an Oldfield Special, complained after the race that the timers had made a mistake in his scoring and that he finished fourth. He filed a written protest with the judges.

Several of the racers complained of vandalism. Tires were cut, they said, and before the race it was discovered that the course had been liberally sprinkled with large tacks.

I. A. C. RELAYERS WIN A. A. U. TITLE IN LAKE CONTEST

Last Events Give Squad Bulk of Honors in the Year's Swims.

SENIOR TABLE OF POINTS
I. A. C.	35	Hamilton club	4
Great Lakes	4	Minneapolis A. C.	3

Illinois Athletic club won the largest lump of senior points in the Central A. A. U. swimming and diving championships, the last chapter of which was completed at Edgewater beach yesterday. No record was kept of the table of points in the junior events.

The championships, twenty-two in all, comprised the largest collection ever held by one organization at one time. Yesterday's program consisted of three events, the men's senior 400 yard relay and fancy diving and junior 440 yard swim, free style.

I. A. C. Takes Relay.

The feature of the day's batch of events was the relay, copped in 4:07 by the quartet from the Illinois Athletic club—Siegel, Towne, Buddy Wallen, and Perry McGillivray. The other two competitors, teams from Great Lakes, came second and third.

Besides Wallen, who took the national mile championship two weeks ago at Portland, Ore., another recent limelight actor in the race was E. T. Bolden of the second gob outfit, who won the national ten mile swim in the Delaware river last Saturday.

Duluth Man Wins Race.

The junior 440 performance was annexed by Don Nixon, Duluth, in 6:01; Leonard Draper of the Duluth Boat club, and John Norton, Hamilton club, trailed twenty-five and fifty yards behind respectively. Of a field of five starters, only these three finished.

Arthur W. Hartung, I. A. C., the national ten foot board champ in 1918, rolled together the largest total of points in the diving. Sidney Ruben of the Minneapolis A. C. came second, and Gordon J. Carveth, Hamilton club, third.

Event to Miss Gaither.

Between the regular acts there was presented a fifty yard girls' swim. Miss Florence Gaither, I. A. C., won in :34 2-5, followed by Misses Mary Mattis and Lillian Miller, both of the I. A. C.

The championships have been staged at Edgewater beach for six consecutive Saturdays, under the direction of Chauncey A. Hyatt. Gold, silver, and bronze medals were given the winners of the respective first three places in each event. The high diving will be put on Sept. 5 at Lake Calhoun, Minneapolis, having been switched to that place because of the meager depth of the north shore stand. Summaries:

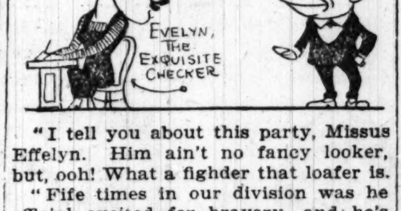
GUS THE BUS MEETS PETE.

"I'M meeting a guy to day on the street," said Gus the Bus to Evelyn the Exquisite Checker, "and he's come up by me and say 'Hello, sergeant.' I'm look him two or three times before I recognize him, and then I hit him on the shoulder blade and I say to him 'Pete, if it don't what it is—I'm meaning if was now reg'lar instead it's pro'bition—you are seeing one bird what would take you to a nearest bar and buy you so drunk what you couldn't stand.'



"I tell you about this party, Missus Effelyn. Him ain't no fancy looker, but, ooh! What a fighder that loafer is.

"Fife times in our division was he official excited for bravery, and he's the kind of a rummy what he carries in his insides pocket his medals. I see here on the street the internal expeditionary forcers what fought the war in camptonments. By some of 'em, of course, it wasn't their fault—a good soljer he goes where he's told to goes, just like a good bus he comes where he's told to arrive. But what I mean is some of these eggs—eggscuse the army slangings—they got maybe a tin medal what they won for range shootings or for having the cleanest plate after mess or something, and they wear them like they was a crow de gore.

"But this Pete, he's got five excitements and a hatful from weird kind o' medals what means he slain hunners and carried in gewounded buddies under machines guns fires, and he snipped barbish wirings and all that such kind nonsentz. Does he have his decomarations all shinied up and jingling on his bosoom? Say—to look at him you think he's a panhandler what would run from a old lady if she lifts her parasol at him.

"And from all things, get this: Pete was a deserter until a couple days ago. The intellagents officers they are grabbing him and they are dragging him up by the cheneral. The cheneral he's look on Pete very stern and he's say what did him mean by he walks out on the army—was he sour on the war, or what?

"Pete looks up at him and he says, 'Cheneral, it was like these way; when the war needs me, I'm come a-running. When I gots to fight I'm fight like some hell. When I gots to wade in between bullets, that's me. So, when they're sign them armisticings, that lets me out. So I chust vamped.'

"The cheneral he looks him, and he says that's all right—but armies ain't being runned like that this season. A soljer goes in when he's asked and he gets out when he's discharged. But Pete smiles him one, and he says:

"'I may have this here all wrong, but what I thought I went in the damn war for in the firstest place was to scrap. I'm got in this burg a very fine jobs, what I slit hogs' necks in the slaughter house. This is it a useful occupation, chen'ral, as you will admit if you care for pork, ham and spareribs. For these I'm getting ten bucks each day. If I want be a policeman in Chermany, or a snowbird in Siberia, I let the army know. But my tastes are running diff'rent—see?'

"The cheneral he says what kind recoord you had in the army, Pete, and Pete he says well it wasn't such a rotten record up until he deserts. He digs down and he shows the cheneral a few medals and documentations from his excitations, and the cheneral, what he put in the war in Ioway or somewheres, his eyes stick out and he says, 'Pete—you get your hon'rable discharges.' And Pete says 'Thanks, chen'ral. The last discharges what I got was out of Hunnish machine guns, any they wasn't hon'rable—coming out from behind phoney trees what is called in the sweet language from war by some French word—I think the word is called camelfluge.'"

Famed British Runner Is Claimed by Death

Death recently claimed another famous old-time athlete, William Cummings, the professional runner, always remembered as the opponent of W. G. George when he ran the mile in 4:12¾, which stood as the professional record for thirty-three years. Norman Taber of Brown university, an amateur, did the distance in 4:12 3-5 five years ago, alone, beating the figures. Cummings was 60 years of age and died in Glasgow, Scotland. The memorable race between Cummings and George was run in the fall of 1880 at Lillir Bridge, London, when Cummings led until the homestretch, where he collapsed and George won easing up.

HERRON CROWNED GOLF CHAMPION; BEATS JONES, 5-4

Pittsburgh Lad Plays Brilliantly to Down Southerner.

4—5. He was out in 35 to a par 37 by Jones. With a lead of two up at the twenty-seventh hole and playing under par golf, it did not look as if Herron could be beaten by a Georgia or any other wonder.

Long Putt Aids Herron.

Still two holes is a slim margin. Jones looked like a winner at the eleventh hole, but Herron and his trusty putter notched a half with a twelve foot putt. It proved a valuable punch, and then at the next hole the goddess of luck aided Herron. Both men were trapped, but Herron's chip shot out hit the cup and was slowed up in its passage. He stopped ten feet from the pin and holed this putt. He was now 3 up and 7 to play.

The end practically came at the long twelfth hole. Jones was about to make a brassy shot when one of the marshals shouted through his megaphone. Bobby topped his ball badly into a trap, and after taking two to get out, conceded the hole, 7—5. He was trapped at the short sixteenth and Herron won when he halved the fourteenth in four.

New Champ Steel Worker.

The new champion is a player of great stability. He has just entered the steel business, and, beginning from the ground up, he is working in a mill, arising each morning at 5 a. m. This month he took a vacation to prepare for the tournament. He competed at Detroit in 1915 and did not qualify at Merion.

His victory is immensely popular in Pittsburgh, and the local fans in remembering him did not forget to cheer Bobby Jones. No player of his age ever got as far as the final in the amateur championship, although Bob Gardner and Chandler Egan, won the title at 19, and Jerome Travers was not much over that age.

The playoff of the triple tie for the low score medal is set for tomorrow, although J. Manion of St. Louis has gone home.

DONALDSON ARRIVES IN U. S.

Jack Donaldson, the Australian sprinting champion of the professional class, is a recent arrival in this country. He may assist Coach Pooch Donovan at Harvard. Donaldson is 33 years of age and has been competing fourteen years. He has run the 100 yards in 9 3-5 seconds; 220 in 21 1-5, and 300 yards in 29¾, all professional records.

PURPLE ELEVEN PLAYS RUTGERS IN FINAL GAME

Director Lee Announces Contest to Be Held at Newark Nov. 22.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

James L. Lee, newly appointed athletic director at Northwestern university, yesterday announced that a football game has been scheduled with Rutgers. The struggle will take place in Newark, N. J., Nov. 22.

With the announcement of this game the clash will rank in importance with any of the intersectional games thus far arranged. Other important games call for Indiana to meet Syracuse at Indianapolis and Notre Dame to play the Army at West Point. Michigan, which in former years has met Cornell and Pennsylvania, will confine its gridiron battles to the west.

Many Plans for Purple.

The scheduling of the Rutgers game is only one of many plans Director Lee is working on to put Northwestern back on the athletic map. In some former years the Purple was not considered strong enough to secure a good date on the schedules of its natural rivals. At last winter's schedule meeting Northwestern again was left with an open date on the closing Saturday of the conference season.

Arrangements are being made to make the intersectional clash of as much interest as any of the eastern games. Newark is only a short distance from New York City, and a big banquet and reunion of Purple alumni will be held in the eastern metropolis on the night before the struggle.

New Prexy to Attend.

President Hough of Northwestern already has signified his intention of being present, while George C. Stewart, president of the General Alumni Association of Northwestern, who lives in Chicago, also will go. Efforts also will be made to have Gov. Lowden, who is a graduate of Northwestern's Law school, attend.

The game will be played in the old Federal league baseball park, capable of seating 20,000 persons. The Purple team will be sent east in time to get plenty of practice before the game.

REDS LICK PHILS IN TWO CLASHES; RECORD THRONG

Eight Runs in Ninth Win Opening Game, 8 to 3; Second, 6 to 3.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 23.—The largest crowd ever inside the local National league park, even at a world's series game, today saw the Cincinnati Reds win two games from Philadelphia, 8 to 3 and 6 to 1.

In the first game Meadows blanked the visitors with three hits until the ninth, when they tied the score on doubles by Groh and Rousch, a pass to Neale and Meadows' wild throw on Kopf's safe bunt, which allowed Rousch and Neale to score. Subsequently two bases on balls and three hits ran the total to eight.

Cincinnati bunched hits off Cheney in the fourth inning of the second game, following a muff by Luderus, scoring four runs and driving Cheney from the slab. Paulette's double, Kopf's fumble and Adams' sacrifice fly saved Philadelphia a shutout. Scores:

NOTES

New York again today. Claude Williams is almost sure to be on the slab for the Sox.

There was joy in the stand when the score board showed that Boston had scored four runs on Detroit, but sorrow when an instant later the boy chalked up six for Detroit.

After his capture by the Chateau Thierry fighters, Eddie Collins had quite a day at bat. He poled a single and a double, walked twice, and scored two runs in five trips to the plate.

The band played all the popular stuff and had the marines and most of the fans singing a lot of the time between innings. When they played "Blowing Bubbles," all the old timers felt like getting up and waltzing.

Ping Bodie almost got a hit in that seventh inning when Pipp and Lewis got home runs. Ping's was a terrific drive to left, but Jackson dashed in a few yards and caught the ball off his knees.

Baker robbed "Shano" Collins of a swat in the sixth with a one handed stop, but then let "shano" get to first because of a low throw into the dirt. One of the New York scribes yelled because the error was given to Baker instead of Pipp.

Before the game a scouting squad of marines leaped over the wall and went to the Sox bench, where they saw Eddie Collins, and took him prisoner. He was hoisted upon broad shoulders and carried back of the marine lines in the grand stand, but was released in time to start the game. Eddie enlisted in the marines at the close of the season last year.

NAVY BOMBARDS ARMY TO DEFEAT IN 12 TO 2 GAME

Gobs Hammer the Ball Fiercely as 3 Pitchers Hold Enemy.

A big crowd saw the Navy win a decisive victory over the Army yesterday at Cub park, the Great Lakes Naval Training station triumphing over Fort Sheridan, 12 to 2, in a benefit game for the Chicago babies' free milk fund.

Rear Admiral Frederick B. Bassett, commandant of the Great Lakes station, tossed a drop to Lieut. Commander Carpender and the game was on, while a band from the station put a lot of pep into the crowd and kept the game lively by playing the latest airs.

The Navy team outclassed the Army in every department and after the third inning it was simply a matter of how lopsided the score would be. Rothfus, who had a trial in the majors, went to the mound for the Army, while Sibley, formerly with Portland of the Pacific Coast league, eased them over for the Navy.

Navy Scores at Start.

The gobs got busy in the first inning and slipped over one run on three hits and a pass. In the second the parade around the bases started when Rothfus grew wild and passed two, which, with two hits and an error, netted the Navy four. Before Rothfus was finally yanked in the fifth the Great Lakes club bombarded him for six more solid walops, which, with his wildness and some ragged work in the field, netted six more counters.

Sibley, twirling for the Navy, had the soldiers at his mercy at all times. He held them to one scratch hit in the four innings he worked, after which Hardy, a full blooded Indian, took his place on the slab. The redskin got a poor start, two singles and Hozle's triple netting the doughboys the only two runs they scored. Hardy held them without a hit in the next four innings.

Hall Poles Four Bingles.

Hall, first sacker for the Navy, cleaned up four clean hits, two of them going for doubles, while Keenan, center fielder, slammed out three, one going for two sacks.

Lieut. J. K. Gordon of the medical department, Great Lakes Naval Training station, is manager of the Navy team and is desirous of playing his strong club against any of Chicago's semi-pro clubs. The team is open for any day in the week. Score:

A High Grade Automobile in Every Sense —Yet a Car of Surprisingly Low Cost

The sum of the many advantages of the Oakland Sensible Six is simply this: that it is designed to be good looking, sturdy, able and thrifty, and that it has all these virtues in a remarkably effective combination.

The decidedly unusual features of the Oakland are that it is so powerful, so reliable, so comfortable and yet so extremely economical at the same time—for it does all that a good car can do and does it at minimum cost of ownership, operation and maintenance.

The high-speed, overhead-valve, six-cylinder engine of the Oakland Sensible Six delivers 1 full horsepower to every 48 pounds of the weight of the touring model. Only one other automobile, a $4,000 car, has an equal proportion of power to weight.

Such construction in the Oakland is the basis of its wide popularity; owners report exceptional performing ability and also state they get 18 to 25 miles to the gallon of gasoline and 8,000 to 12,000 miles from tires.

The New Oakland Four-Door Sedan

This attractive model, in common with the Oakland Sensible Six Coupe, has a roomy body in which rigid construction has been attained without the customary weight; consequently it is powerful and economical to practically the same degree as the open Oaklands.

An examination of this sedan discovers features of comfort and convenience which give it a strong appeal to buyers who ordinarily consider only the very expensive motor carriages.

ENGLISH PAPER CRITICIZES U. S. FIGHT REFEREES

Calls American Arbiters Too Lax About Ruling Out 'Bad' Boxers.

BY RAY PEARSON.

Since Joe Lynch was handed the "hot" end of a decision in a bout with the British flyweight champion, Jimmy Wilde, and since the later decision, which favored Wilde over Pal Moore, both bouts being held in London, there has been a lot of hot shot fired at the referees in Great Britain by Americans.

It seems Americans are unwilling to give the British ring officials credit for fair play, but whether or not this is justified cannot be stated, because to be a judge one must be on the ground where a battle is fought to determine the merits of a pair of boxers. However, it is only natural that Americans should spring some sort of a comeback at the Britons, inasmuch as they have taken occasion to "roast" American referees. For instance, not long ago a British publication had a few words on this subject.

Pans U. S. Referees.

A paragraph or two of reprint is worth while. Here is what it said:

"Courage is the first thing required of a referee; without it he can never be the conscience of the game, as the white robed umpire has been for so many years in the cricket field. On the whole, British referees are more courageous than the American officials, and that is why professional boxing has always been a cleaner and more wholesome business with us than with our trans-Atlantic rivals.

"American referees have always been too lenient to rough-house tactics and also too ready to prefer the interests of the box office to those of boxing—they seldom disqualify a boxer for fear of offending a public which would thereby lose its money's worth. Indeed, their unwillingness to deal drastically with the brutal and unfair glove fighter is largely responsible for the hostile attitude of many state governments."

Tip on the English System.

Just what system the referee in Great Britain employs in deciding the winner of a contest is explained by Eugene Corri, considered the most capable referee in England. He explains that in a book he wrote entitled "Thirty Years a Referee" he gives the following account of his method:

My system of awardnng points is to make five the highest possible for any one round. It often happens that the difference in the total of points scored by two men is very slight, and I have not infrequently declared a draw when this happens. For example, if a champion were fractionally beaten by a challenger, I might decide, having regard to all that was at stake for the champion, to make the fight a draw until he should be more decisively defeated.

My marking card is for my own exclusive guidance, and in the case of a long, closely contested fight, decisions are not so easily given as may seem to the uninitiated. It is not generally known that one of these [N. S. C.] rules empowers the referee to give the verdict in favor of a man although he may be actually counted out. The National Sporting club takes no official cognizance of the knockout, though, of course, we are all aware that a knockout blow is deemed to be conclusive. Still, suppose a case like this:

One man has been winning handsomely all along the line to the twentieth round, in a specified twenty round contest. In the last round, let it be argued that the man who has figured so splendidly is suddenly knocked down by a chance blow and counted out. The rules of the National Sporting club would, in such a case as that, justify a referee in giving the fight to the man who had so conspicuously proved his superiority on points.

Courage a Requisite.

The view taken of a competent referee in England may be gleaned from the following paragraphs printed there:

"The referee, like the poet, is born, not made. He has to have a good deal in common with the men whose work he is watching, whose conduct he is to a certain extent controlling. He must live in the game—and, for all that, never forget the truth expressed in Mr. Kipling's line: 'The game is greater than the player of the game.'

Courage is as necessary a part of his physical equipment as the understanding eye which can grasp every passing detail of the swiftest and most perplexing form of athletics—there is no sport in which so much happens, and happens so quickly, as in modern boxing.

Unaffected by Demonstrations.

Courage is a vital necessity for two reasons: In the first place, the referee must so impress the boxers with the force of his character that they will hesitate to do anything contrary to the rules or challenge his decision when it is rendered; secondly, he must not allow himself to be influenced in the slightest degree by the attitude of the spectators.

The average ring side crowd, it must be admitted, knows very little about the game, and is most unsportsmanlike in moments of excitement. It is the old story—a crowd is invariably inferior in intelligence and morality to its average human component. Here and there, it is true, we find a ring side assemblage which knows almost as much about boxing as the crowd at Old Trafford knows about cricket.

In Wales, where boxing is as much a national pastime as Rugby football, it is surprising how quick the spectators are to appreciate the nuances of a contest between highly skilled performers. Yet in Wales—and even at the National Sporting club, the headquarters of professional boxing in this country—there are always many critics present who are much too excitable to keep the sportsmanlike rule of silence during the rounds.

Chip Shot Has Place in Bag of the Finished Golf Player

Jack Croke in chip shot follow through

BY GEORGE A. O'NEIL.

APPROACH SHOTS.

NO. 3: THE CHIP SHOT.

When the condition of the ground renders the backspin shot impossible, and the situation makes it necessary or desirable to play a shot with very little run, the chip shot can be used. This shot will be found easier to master than the backspin shot and more satisfactory as a rule than the pitch and run shot.

The essential features of the chip shot are that the ball is thrown high into the air in a sharply curved arc and that it is entirely free from forward spin. The run at the end of the flight is therefore very short, and as it will usually be made on the putting green is not subject to incalculable interference.

The stance for this shot is the same as for the pitch and run shot and the swing is made exactly in the line of direction—not across it, as in the shot with back spin. The fundamental differences from the swing of the pitch and run shot are:

1. The club is carried back in a more vertical arc.
2. The throw of the club head is snappier and faster.
3. The reverse turn of the wrists ceases as the club head reaches the ball, and the club face after passing the ball is kept perpendicular to the line of flight.
4. As a result, the club face passes rapidly under the ball and, instead of giving it a direct lift and imparting forward spin, causes it to roll backward and upward on the blade of the club, thus throwing it sharply into the air.

The effect of this shot is not to impart back spin to the ball, but rather to cause it to float in the air without a tendency to spin either forward or backward. This, together with the vertical character of its flight, and the exhaustion of the original force of the stroke, causes the run to be very short indeed. In skillful hands the shot is almost as effective as the shot with back spin.

It is hardly necessary to add that, although the shot can be played with a mashie that is broad and well laid back, the proper club for it is the mashie niblick or pitcher.

Woods and Waters By LARRY ST. JOHN

BASSING AS IS.

DURING the latter part of August and the first few days of September, fishing in the lakes is likely to be somewhat disappointing, and it is well to remember that during this period the rivers usually yield well to industrious anglers.

The fly man casting his feathered frauds in the swift stretches around overhanging trees, half submerged logs, wing dams and other obstructions to the river's flow should, by all the rules of the game, be rewarded with fish. Sometimes though the dope doesn't work, and then it is well to take to bait fishing in the deep holes and big eddies where there are tangles of sunken logs and other debris.

Good bait for river fishing is not much of a problem now. This is the time of the year when the crawfish is leaving his safe retreat to scout around for winter quarters, a fact well known to bass, or at least soon discovered by them. The crawfish is the natural food of the river bass—usually of the small mouthed variety—and one that he craves now that he must store up some fat to carry him through the long winter sleep.

Fished in the ordinary way with ordinary tackle, both black and rock bass sometimes take the craw with great willingness, but we believe that river still fishers would have good days oftener if they used gut leaders when "crawing" for bass; that three feet of invisibility on the end of one's line often saves the day. This applies to even the bait caster.

A good rig for the short rod artist to use when fishing the holes with craws is the following: Use the regular bait casting tackle, but let the line be of smaller caliber than is usually employed, say a ten-pound test, and preferably of a light color. To the end of this line tie a dipsey sinker of the desired casting weight. About three feet above the sinker tie on a three-foot gut leader, to the end of which tie the hook—a No. 1-0 with a long shank would be our choice. Now put on the craw, lashing him firmly to the shank and bend of the hook with thread or a rubber band, so that his head rests in the bend of the hook, keeping in mind that a craw travels backwards.

Cast it up stream with a slow, easy "side swipe"; let the sinker strike bottom, and then reel in slowly, so you can feel the sinker bumping along on the stream's bed.

When you get a strike set the hook immediately, as your bait is fastened to the hook so that you do not have to wait for the fish to run and turn it in his mouth for swallowing. On several occasions this rig has brought home the smoked side meat for us when the bass suddenly ceased rising to the feathers. If you are unable to get crawfish, a night crawler used in the same way is excellent.

When still fishing with craws we have sometimes found the bass a little bit leary about eating the hard shells; if you run across this condition simply peel the shell from the craw's tail and use the meat therefrom—werry, werry delicatessen to bass with appetites that need something extra fauncy dauncha-know.

Still another substitute is the salt water shrimp [unboiled of course] which can be bought in the larger fish markets. Then don't forget the l'il old grasshopper, the feller that spits tobacco juice; those hoppers with bright "yaller" bellies are bully bait for black and rock basses as well as blue gills.

Coming back to the question of getting fish in the lakes at this time of the year: One often sees casters industriously pegging away, with indifferent results, along the edges of the weeds where they "allus got 'em" a few weeks ago. Love's labor lost; the bass are not there.

Instead of patrolling the weed line and the shallows your lake bass is now inclined to seek the cool deep places and loaf during the day, coming into the shallows at night for a little snack. Sometimes, however, water kept cool and clear by a thick growth of lily pads shields bass that can be tempted to strike.

We have found that a twin spinner, with a red, weedless fly or bucktail and pork strip dragging over, or rather "jumping" from pad to pad by fast reeling, in water of this kind often induces a bass or two to take a wallop at it—especially so on cloudy days or toward evening. Bass taken from the lily pads now are usually big lunkers.

HARRY GREB WINS GO WITH BRENNAN

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 23.—[Special.]—Harry Greb of Pittsburgh easily defeated Bill Brennan in a ten round bout at Forbes field this afternoon. The Pittsburgh boy gave away about 20 pounds in weight, but had everything his way. Brennan was bleeding at the nose in every round, and his left eye was cut in the tenth. Greb won every round except the ninth, when he slowed up and got to swinging wildly. Brennan was game and took a bad beating.

MAN O' WAR COPS $10,000 STAKE; EASED UP AT END

Sturdy Colt Not Extended to Beat Upset in Saratoga Feature.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 23.—[Special.]—Man o' War, the sturdy 2 year old chestnut colt by Fair Play-Mahubah, never was extended to win the Grand Union Hotel stakes of $10,000 this afternoon, before one of the largest crowds this track has ever held.

Loftus held his mount close up to Upset until about a quarter of the distance had been covered, then gave Man o' War his head and the colt jumped ahead and stayed there, finishing eased up one and a half lengths ahead of H. P. Whitney's Upset.

Knapp on Upset made a great ride down the stretch, but could not get up within striking distance. Ral Parr's Blazes was third, five lengths behind Upset. There were ten starters, Wildair, Sandy Beal, and Neddam having been scratched.

POLISH SEA HERO TO BUILD FLEET FOR NEW NATION

Rear Admiral Porembsky Has Fine Sailors to Man Ships.

BY THOMAS STEWART RYAN.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

WARSAW, Aug. 14, via Paris, Aug. 23.—In an unpretentious office in Nowo Miodowa sits a man who intends to build the young Polish navy. He is Casimir Porembsky, once a rear admiral in the Russian navy with a splendid record of sea fighting in two of old Russia's wars.

For since Poland now has a seacoast front against bolshevik Russia and possibly bolshevik Germany, it must sooner or later have control of the Baltic. It must prevent the union of Russian and German forces by sea, as it is ably fitted to do by land.

Good Personnel for Navy.

Like our navy of Paul Jones' time the Polish navy will have no traditions but those of foreign powers. But its officers have been well schooled, two of them in the German navy, forty in the Austrian, and a hundred in the Russian. Its enlisted men, too, numbering only 2,000 at present, have followed the sea.

But training of the new force will have nothing to do with Hamburg, Triest, or Petrograd. The young officers will do the naval schools of England and some of them may even come for instruction across the Atlantic.

Must Be Modest at First.

Now for the ships. The navy must have a modest beginning, for it will appear, first, as a coast guard and patrol for the rivers Vistula, Pripet, and Bug. At the present moment it has but six converted merchantmen in the Vistula. Since Poland's principal purchases abroad must be merchant ships just now it is bidding for its share of the Russian, German, and Austrian war fleets. These it does not claim as war prizes or indemnities. The ships were paid for by the Poles in taxes when the Poles still were subject to Prussia, Russia, and Austria. The claims are founded on the proportion of Poles in the three empires.

So as 10 per cent of the German empire was Poles they maintain they should have 75,650 tons of the German battle fleet. As 10 per cent of Austria-Hungary they want to receive 36,500 tons of the Austrian fleet. As 16 per cent of Russia they ask 83,000 tons of that fleet.

There Are Obstacles.

There are reasons why they may not get all this ship for ship. I would say their chances of getting the Austrian units are rather small, since what Italy has not grabbed the Pola-Jugo Slavs are holding. Further, it is hard to conceive of the bolsheviks as disgorging ships to their enemy, Poland. But Poland is willing to take the warships from Germany and money, merchant vessels and port material from the other oppressors.

Since Danzig is to have a Polish customs and consular service, Rear Admiral Porembsky believes Poland will make it a naval base. There is also an inferior port—puck or putzig—which will be used by Poland. Porembsky, strange to say, is an admiral in the army, since there is as yet no navy department.

Hero of War on Japs.

Porembsky is a graduate of the Russian naval academy, a veteran of the Russo-Japanese war. As first officer of the cruiser Novik, he distinguished himself in the battle of Pechili gulf in the Yellow sea, later sank his damaged command in the Laperouse strait, and walked overland 400 miles to Vladivostok. When the world war started with Germany he commanded the dreadnought Empress Marie and the battleship Rostislaw in the Black sea, where he blockaded Anatolia and the Dardenelles, coöperating with the British, who approached from the Ægean, and covering Russian transport to the Caucasus.

200,000 GREEKS BEG U.S. TO FOIL BULGAR CLAIMS

Every Nation in World but America Wants Us to Have Thrace, Plea.

ATHENS, Aug. 21.—Delayed.—[By the Associated Press.]—In a vigorously worded telegram addressed to the American people and press, Greek refugees from Thrace, said to number nearly 200,000, "protest indignantly against the attempts to frustrate our legitimate claim to freedom for our native land." The telegram continues:

"We hereby appeal to the conscience and justice of the people and press of the United States, asking them to assert once more the great principle of liberty and self-determination, now apparently ignored by the American delegates at Paris, and declare their will that the Thracians shall not be handed over again to Bulgarian tyranny and misrule."

Odds in Populations.

The protest points out that Turks and Greeks form 85 per cent of the population of Bulgarian Thrace and Turkish Thrace and that the Bulgarians form only 6 per cent.

"Nevertheless," the telegram says, "The American delegats are obstinately insisting against the unanimous opinion of all the other members of the supreme council in putting this absurd minority in control of the country against the avowed will of an overwhelming majority on the plea that Bulgaria needs an outlet to the Aegean sea."

The protest asserts that an outlet can be provided without giving Bulgaria political control of any Thracian territory, inasmuch as Greece offers facilities for Bulgarian commerce not only at Thracian but also at Macedonian ports.

U. S. Position "Monstrous."

It declares it monstrous that Bulgaria, who fought for three years on the side of absolutism, should now be championed by America, while Greece, which placed all her resources at the service of the allies, should see her children robbed of the right of self-determination through American opposition.

"The artificial and unjust solutions proposed by the American delegation will only create immediate trouble and lead to future wars," the telegram concludes. It is signed "The Union of Thracian Refugees of Greece, by Kyriakides, president."

U. S. BLOCKADE ATTACKED

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

PARIS, Aug. 23.—Suppose the American commission to negotiate peace had refused to permit the restitution of Alsace Lorraine to France because it were feared Germany would go to war again as soon as it will be able to retake the lost provinces.

Suppose Americans dared not agree to restore to the Italians their "irredenta," fearing the Austrians would commence hostilities at the first opportunity to regain the Trentino and Trieste. Suppose the Americans opposed liberating the Czecho-Slovaks and Roumanians from Hungary through terror that the Hungarians might fight when they were able to win back their lost territories. Suppose the Americans refused to protect the Armenians through nervousness that the Turks might give battle to reorganize the Ottoman empire when they get to their feet again.

What Americans Do.

And yet Frank Polk and Henry White—representing the administration as the American peace commissioners—refuse to acquiesce with other powers in granting Thrace to Greece through the fear that the Bulgarians will declare war and will try to reoccupy West Thrace in the near future.

And this despite the fact the peace conference commission, composed of Frenchmen, Englishmen, Italians, and Prof. Mezes, president of the City college of New York and representing America, after three months' investigation on the ground, reported unanimously last April to the big five in favor of granting all the Greek demands in Thrace.

The Greek Position.

In the absence of the Greek premier, Venizelos, who is resting up in the country a few days, his secretary, Mr. Tsolainos, post-graduate of Columbia in 1918, explained to me the Greek position regarding Thrace and the Greek premier's views.

"American opposition to an award of Thrace to Greece is based on two points," Mr. Tsolanios said. "Firstly, the Bulgarians have a legal right through the 1913 treaty after the Balkan war; secondly, cutting off the Bulgars from the Ægan sea will result in another war as soon as the Bulgars are in a position to strike and to try to reconquer the province.

"That is not close reasoning. Firstly, the Bulgarians themselves nullified the 1913 treaty when they deliberately went to war against the allies and attacked the Serbs in 1915 as Greece consented to give West Thrace to the Bulgarians in 1913 to keep peace in the Balkans."

Thrace contains a million inhabitants and measures 24,000 square miles, being about the size of West Virginia.

HOURLY PAY AT YARDS UP 132.9% IN THREE YEARS

U. S. Packer Survey Shows Labor Changes Wrought by the War.

Changes in packing industry labor conditions that have been caused by the war are shown in a report issued yesterday by the institute of meat packers. Figures show an army of 51,895 workers is employed by sixteen of the concerns in the industry, as compared with 30,278 in 1912.

The increase in wages per hour paid Jan. 1, 1919, as compared with what was paid Jan. 1, 1916, is 132.9 per cent. This, according to the packers, shows what demands were made for speeding up the industry during the war.

Top $100 a Week Mark.

Some of the highly skilled workers in the packing plants, such as calf skinners, are credited with making more than $100 a week during the rush periods. Other skilled men, among them the meat boners, make from $70 to $80 a week with a reasonable degree of steadiness. In Chicago common labor is now paid 46 cents an hour. Prior to the war from 19 to 21 cents was paid.

The figures included in the survey just finished by the institute came from plants in all parts of the United States, both the large and the small.

The survey shows $61,351,903 was paid in wages to packing house workers during 1918. During 1912 the payrolls totaled $18,499,637, an increase of $42,852,866 during six years.

The demand for unusual production during the war caused an increase of 71.4 per cent, or 21,617 men, in the sixteen plants covered by this portion of the survey.

Average Wage $1,163.

The actual average wage per annum in 1912 was $603.60. In 1918 it was $1,163.44.

The following table gives figures obtained from widely distributed companies of various sizes:

71.4 per cent increase in average number of laborers employed, 1918 over 1912.

93.6 per cent increase in average annual wage, 1918 over 1912.

132.9 per cent increase in rate per hour, Jan. 1, 1919, over Jan. 1, 1916.

PLANS FOR NEW STATE HOSPITAL NEARLY READY

Architectural plans have about been emoplteed, it was announced yesterday, for the new state hospital to be located on the site of the old National league baseball park at Lincoln, Wood, Polk and Taylor streets.

Director of Public Welfare Charles Thorne estimates that the hospital will cost about $5,000,000, of which the state legislature has already appropriated $1,000,000. This will enable the immediate beginning of construction of buildings for an eye, ear, and nose infirmary, a children's surgical institute, a psychopathic research laboratory, and a medical ward for the University of Illinois.

State Architect Edgar D. Martin is designing the buildings, which are to combine aesthetic lines with a maximum of utilitarian provision. The treatment will be that of the central group idea. The grounds are to be suitably landscaped.

TRADE DELEGATIONS FROM EUROPE TO PAY CHICAGO A VISIT

Trade delegations from several foreign countries are to visit Chicago in the near future. Missions of five men each, including cabinet members and trade experts, are to be sent by England, France, Belgium, and Italy to the international trade conference which is to take place at Atlantic City during the week of Sept. 29. After the conference the visitors from abroad will visit various trade centers, including Chicago.

Walter Parker, secretary of the Mississippi Valley association, arrived in Chicago yesterday from Europe, where he went to rouse interest in the world's cotton conference, scheduled to take place in New Orleans, Oct. 13 to 16. Mr. Parker said that 250 representative business men would attend from England, France, Belgium, Holland, the Scandinavian countries, Switzerland, Italy, Egypt, and India.

The problem before the Atlantic conference will be that of getting the commerce of the world back into its regular channels from which it was diverted by the war. Conditions in the European countries will be explained by their missions. The personnel of the missions is to be announced by cable.

PICK FLAWS IN REGULATION OF THE BIG PACKERS

Retailers, Producers and Others Defend Car Operations.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 23.—Refrigerator car operations of the five big packers were defended today before the senate agricultural committee, which is considering the Kenyon and Kendrick bills for regulating the packing industry and the separation from it of the operation of such cars.

C. B. Heineman, representing the national live stock exchange, said the "Big Five" were not the source of discrimination against wholesale grocers and other packer competitors. He characterized the denunciation by the federal trade commission and others of the effects of packer ownership of the cars as "willful misrepresentation or demonstrations of blissful ignorance."

Many Object to Bills.

Mr. Heineman was preceded on the stand by a series of retailers, producers, and others, who all had objections to make to the regulating bills.

"Packers would just as soon have the railroads own these cars," he said, "if it were possible for them to get cars when they were needed. It is absolutely false to say that they secure freight rate discrimination in favor of the packers."

The witness went into the details of methods of organizing "peddler car" routes, by which small lots of packer products are distributed to smaller points throughout the United States.

"The only thing that could be accomplished by abolishing those would be shortening the supply of numberless places," he said.

Want No Licenses.

James A. Henderson, a Morgan, Utah, canner, and J. M. Baker, a Tampa, Fla., retailer, both objected to the regulation, which would require all business to be licensed.

Ross Bowles, for the East Side Employés' Association of East St. Louis, Ill., and N. B. McLean, for the Chamber of Commerce in the same city, said that business sentiment was not in favor of the regulating bills. J. Thurman, a Boston wholesale grocer, also objected on general grounds.

"A healthy man does not need medicine," Mr. Thurman said, "and though I am a grocer, I know that business conditions are all right in the country, that license restrictions during the war, though necessary, were restrictive, and that the situation can be safely left alone. There is plenty of competition and no monopoly."

FAHERTY POWERLESS TO CURE 'EYESORE' ON NEW BOULEVARD LINK

Complaints that the water tower on the top of the building at the northeast corner of East Randolph street and Michigan avenue, is an eyesore, and that it will mar the beauty of the boulevard link, were received by M. J. Faherty, president of the board of local improvements yesterday.

Mr. Faherty immediately hopped in his automobile and went to see for himself. He agreed with the complainants and appealed to Building Commissioner Charles Bostrom. Mr. Bostrom's inspectors, however, found that the tower violates no building laws.

"I shall appeal to the owners of the building to be public spirited and remove the tower," said Mr. Faherty. "The tower supplies water to a fire sprinkling system and there is a nearby tower which I believe can be used for this purpose."

The building is the property of the Lemoyne estate.

Constipation Results When Hot Weather Stops Exercise

WHEN the system has become accustomed to a certain daily routine of exercise and food, health is quick to suffer if that routine is interfered with. The bowels are first to notice the change.

Different water is enough to constipate. Changes of food when traveling, much sitting by those accustomed to long walks will do it. It is especially true that when elderly people change their routine they quickly become constipated. Yet elderly people should be particularly careful to keep their bowels open, especially during the hot months.

A better remedy for the purpose cannot be found on a druggist's shelf than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin which trains the stomach-muscles to do their work naturally so that medicines can be dispensed with. Only a small dose is needed, and unlike harsh physics and cathartics, it acts gently and without griping.

A bottle of Syrup Pepsin can be bought at any drug store for 50c and $1, the latter the family size, or a free trial bottle will be sent on receipt of your address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 480 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

ESSEX MOTOR CARS

Why This Mighty

Thousands Know, but Do Not Appreciate the Extent of Its Leadership

Respect For Essex

It is like reminding the average reader of something he already knows to speak of Essex leadership.

Its position as a popular car filling a heretofore unoccupied field, is accepted as a matter of fact. By word and attitude all motordom acknowledges its position.

But let us consider the reasons for Essex prestige.

You will probably say it is because of its performance. You compare its general appearance and performance with the admirable qualities of other cars. You place no price limit on those cars to which you compare the Essex.

It is because the Essex so nearly matches the standards you hold as your ideal that it is a leader.

Essex Matches All Requirements

There is ample evidence in every locality to account for what people are saying for the Essex.

It has spoken for itself, just as we announced it would have to do at the time it was put on the market.

It isn't necessary for us to say how fast an Essex can be driven. We don't need to speak of its performance on hills or its comfort and riding qualities. The car has proved itself.

And 10,000 owners are daily giving their cars opportunities to prove Essex worth. Added to that are close to half a million motorists who voice their admiration. The most conservative and critical person having knowledge of the Essex is its sponsor.

Time Is Revealing Another Quality

It is showing that the Essex stands up under hard service. It retains the qualities which have created the respect with which it is held.

Squeaks and rattles are not so common. It is rigid and powerful. Little attention is required to keep the Essex in smooth running condition. Every day's use adds to the regard owners have for the Essex.

So Be Guided by What People Say

The best place to find out about the Essex is among those who have had their cars for some time and from the thousands who know Essex performance.

Come and see what the Essex can do. If you don't know the Essex, ask your neighbor or come to us and take a ride.

Judge Essex qualities for yourself and remember that sales are so large it will be well for you to place your order as far in advance of the time you will require delivery as it will be possible for you to do.

"Get there" Tires

Over any Road— through any weather

The ability to deliver most miles without trouble is a trait peculiar to Kokomo tires and tubes. You will find that the best guarantees for mileage are these tires themselves. When, after 10,000 miles, Kokomo tires will continue to prove their value in miles, you will appreciate that Kokomo quality needs no indorsement other than the satisfaction it guarantees.

LONG-LIFE Kokomo TIRES AND TUBES
5000 MILE GUARANTEE

It is impossible to build better fabric tires than Kokomos. It is impossible to get more miles than from Kokomos.

We know, from facts and figures, that it is equally impossible to build tires of equivalent value, even in larger numbers, to sell for less. In the face of these plain statements, a lower-priced tire, no matter what its guaranteed mileage, will give less miles and, in the end, will cost more than Kokomos.

Impure Water More Dangerous Than Bad Air

Much has been written about the dangers to health of bad air. While less has been said about it, scientific investigators have shown that impure water is a more prolific source of disease. It is all the more dangerous because water seldom gives warning of its infectious contents.

I. A. C. TO AID TRIBUNE'S FREE ICE CAMPAIGN

Lacrosse Match and Field Day Are Expected to Raise $8,000.

Ten thousand weary mothers in Chicago tenements and many more restless babies know that THE TRIBUNE Free Ice and Algonquin Hospital funds total little more than $3,500.

They know, too, that it takes real money these days to buy the precious ice that makes life a little more bearable in the wooden cliffs. They cannot buy it and must wait patiently until the big free ice wagons stop in their street. They know the cost of summer vacations and are praying that the funds, donated by those more lucky than themselves, can be stretched to take them, too, into the country and make vacation dreams come true.

Help Gladly Needed.

Yesterday a group of Chicago men who believe in kids and mothers, began talking facts and figures while enjoying a little luncheon.

"It can't be done," declared one: "Ice and diamonds are about on a par and vacations are clear out of the market. The poor kids and those mothers, out there in the heat, will just about lose out unless somebody comes under the wire to help them."

Five minutes later, Charles J. Donnelly, veteran lacrosse exponent and manager, called THE TRIBUNE to announce that the Illinois Athletic association lacrosse team is prepared this year to run its one big championship game and association field day for the sole benefit of the two TRIBUNE charities.

Raised $8,000 Last Year.

"Last year we made it possible to send about $8,000 worth of tobacco overseas, and the year before added about the same amount to the Red Cross tobacco fund," he declared. This is better than all the nicotine made by the old lady."

Preparations are already going forward to bring the amateur champions of Canada to Chicago when the lacrosse championship is decided up there this fall, and match them against the I. A. C. "Buccaneers" in the season's one and biggest contest. A complete slate of field day athletic events, bringing into play the talents of national and world headliners, many of whom have just returned from overseas, is also to be included, and, with the coöperation of every athletic organization in Chicago, the I. A. C. players hope to break all records in the sports carnival.

It is planned to stage the field day the first week in October, probably in Stagg field.

Governor Favors Plan.

Gov. Frank O. Lowden was first to indorse the plan following its announcement yesterday. His name will lead the list of patrons for the field day.

"Now, of all times, we should think of Chicago's people, who need aid even in normal conditions," said Gen. Leonard Wood. "It is possible that in the rush of after-war reconstruction Chicago has forgotten a little of her duty toward her sisters of the tenements. Lacrosse is a clean, splendid game, although perhaps little followed here, and is worthy of the cause it will be put to."

The central department commander will lead the city list of patrons for the field day. Other men who have lent their names to the new TRIBUNE fund enterprise include Col. E. H. Humphries, chief of staff of the central department, and Adjt. Gen. Frank Dickson.

Mr. Donnelly announced that he will begin work at once upon the field day organization, enlisting the interest not only of Chicago athletes but the general public as well in the charity event.

In the meantime both TRIBUNE funds are open for individual donations.

MODESTY OF SON FORCES MOTHER TO BARE HONORS

LIEUT. JOHN W GLEASON

Lieut. John W. Gleason, winner of the Croix de Guerre and D. S. C., is so modest that not not one of his associates at Montgomery Ward & Co. knows that he has been decorated. His proud mother, all unbeknownst to him, slipped down town yesterday to bring his picture to THE TRIBUNE.

Gleason, who is 25 years old, received his commission at Fort Sheridan soon after war was declared. During the action at Cheppy he debarked from his tank and led his platoon on foot through a mine field under heavy fire. Two days later he cleared away a nest of machine guns for the purpose of giving a battalion of infantry a safe place to camp.

Then on Oct. 4, after being twice wounded and ordered to the rear, he continued to fight. This persistant young man lives with his parents at 331 North Austin avenue.

SEIZE SALESMAN AT LOOP HOTEL.

Samuel Bronstine, a salesman for the Tulsa Oil Refining company, was arrested yesterday afternoon at the Great Northern hotel, where he was a guest, on a warrant sworn out by his wife, who accuses him of infidelity. Mrs. Gussie Bronstine, the wife, testified in the Morals court her husband had been guilty of indiscretions with a woman of the name of Ethel Hedrick, address unknown. The case was continued until Sept. 15.

CHICAGO LAGS IN CONSTRUCTION AS OTHERS SET PACE

Cleveland, Detroit, Buffalo, and Philadelphia in Building Furore.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

Chicago is falling behind other large cities in construction this year. Up to June 1 it led in percentage of increase, according to Building Commissioner Bostrom. In June the building permits called for an expenditure of $11,415,600. Last month they fell to $7,714,700, and to date this month the amount is only $4,236,500.

The strike of the building trades of more than five weeks has blemished the construction record of the city. Cleveland, Detroit, Buffalo, Philadelphia, and Baltimore, which I have visited in the last fifteen days, have made a larger percentage gain in building than Chicago.

Philadelphia is building on a pre-war basis, while Chicago is running about 60 per cent of its pre-war record.

Baltimore is building on a much larger scale than ever before.

Cleveland had the largest July in its record, while Chicago in two years of the last five had more construction in July than in this.

Buffalo Surpasses Chicago.

Buffalo's construction in the first seven months of this year is larger than last year, so also is Chicago's. But Buffalo's percentage of increase is much larger than Chicago's.

Last year Chicago issued permits for construction of an estimated cost of $34,792,000. In the seven months of this year the figure is $42,255,000.

Compare these figures with Baltimore. Last year its permits provided for building of an estimated cost of $3,529,000, while in the first seven months of this year the estimated cost of construction is $9,460,000.

Cleveland Shows Big Gain.

Or make the contrast with Cleveland. In the whole of 1918 the permits for new construction totals $8,694,000, while the corresponding figure for the seven months of this year is $17,776,000.

Philadelphia has made even a better showing than Cleveland. Last year its building permits called for an estimated expenditure of $9,129,000, and in the first seven months of this year $21,982,000.

The last week in July and the first week in August the applications for permits in Chicago were slowing up. The commissioner attributed the cause to the strike and lockout of the building trades unions.

The head of the building department in Cleveland, Detroit, Buffalo, Philadelphia, and here in Baltimore said that the applications for the same period have been increasing.

Fail to Double Sum Here.

The permits of July in Chicago this year call for an expense of $7,714,000 in building, as against $4,885,000 in July, 1918. It will be noted that the investment did not double. In Baltimore July of this year was about three times as large as the same month of last year. In Cleveland the jump was from $1,108,000 to $4,694,000. In Philadelphia the increase was from $1,141,000 to $6,623,000.

Building Commissioner C. H. Osborne of Baltimore said there is no scarcity of living places here. He explained:

"The war activities are over, and you can see an occasional 'for rent' sign, although the rents remain up. Permits have been issued this year for 1,818 dwellings of two stories for two families. In the whole of last year the number was 288. Permits for three story dwellings last year totaled 38; this year to date, 118. Frame dwellings last year totaled 52, this year 360."

Fourteen Apartments Go Up.

Cleveland erected fourteen apartment houses last year and fifty-one to date this year. Its new frame dwellings last year totaled 777 and this year 1,724. A like showing was made by other cities, except Buffalo.

Building statistics are not so complete in Chicago as in these other cities, and the basis of grouping is not the same. But rough comparisons can be made. Chicago last year issued permits for 326 apartment buildings, the number of flats and cost not being designated. The number of permits for apartment buildings this year is 303. On residences, however, Chicago increased from 1,082 last year to 2,751 to date this year.

Detroit's Housing Drive.

This lack of apartment construction is largely responsible for the increase in rents. Detroit, in order to greatly increase the construction of living places, has formed a House Financing corporation, with $3,000,000 capitalization, which started business last week. It is the outcome of a movement started by Mayor Cousens.

Any one who owns a lot can obtain a loan not to exceed $6,000, but in no event more than 75 per cent of the value of the completed improvement. A man with a steady savings account may obtain a loan under prescribed conditions without a lot.

The directors of the corporation, which include representatives of the largest commercial and industrial institutions in the city, have announced they desire a man who has made a habit of saving to one of a much larger salary who has been living to the limit of his income.

It is planned to build the houses on the wholesale plan, and it is hoped thereby to save from $1,000 to $1,500 on each house. Mayor Cousens said there is a scarcity of flats and houses, but denied emphatically the common estimate of 5,000 to 15,000.

There's a Touch of Tomorrow in All That Cole Does Today

The Vital Importance of What is to Be

THE Delphian oracle exercised its mighty influence over the ancient Greeks, not because it interpreted what had happened—but because it prophesied what was to come.

In this day and age, there's nothing more obsolete than yesterday's newspaper, but there's always a crowd around a bulletin board!

The world moves irresistibly forward—onward. There's no standing still. Those who do not progress fall behind.

What is to be—not what has been—commands our attention. Interest centers in the future—not in the past.

For ten years the career of the Cole has been characterized by big undertakings.

It was one of the first two American-built eight-cylinder cars. It was the first automobile to which the principles of aerotype construction were applied.

But, if the Cole company had stopped there—if it had not built a structure for future achievement on this foundation of past accomplishment, it could not have progressed.

Cole's Latest Creations Herald Future Progress

COLE contributions have been significant. Season after season, year after year, they have given the motoring world things that were new, original and a bit in advance of the times.

The Aero-EIGHT was the sponsor of a new fashion in motor cars. The open models came as a complete innovation in body designing and performance efficiency.

The new Aero-EIGHT all-season cars, which have just appeared, are, likewise, exclusively new and advanced conceptions. Their flush panel construction is an advantageous and pleasing departure in coach building.

Their restful comfort, their easy riding qualities, their wide range of performance is not to be compared with any previous attainment in the development of enclosed equipages.

The vacuum, full-vision windshield of the Tourosine and Toursedan, is a significant improvement.

The care and taste evidenced in the exterior finish, the selection of the velvety fabrics within, and the completeness and dignity of the minor refinements with which the Aero-EIGHT all-season cars are adorned, bespeak the fine workmanship they embody.

Inspired by a single aim—to anticipate the trend of the future and be the first to give it tangible expression—Cole is now universally recognized as the creator of advanced motor cars.

That is why—when a distinctively new type of car appears—the public anticipates finding the Cole nameplate on it.

REAL ESTATE SHOWS STRONG FINISH IN SPITE OF EARLY WEAKNESS

SPURT AT CLOSE OF WEEK BOOMS REALTY MARKET

Total Shows Falling Off in Big Deals; Cheap Property Active.

Thanks to an active spurt at the close of the week, the real estate market made a fairly good showing, considering the many handicaps against which it is contending. The week's business, however, did not fully measure up to that of the previous week. There was the usual large run of the cheaper outside property, which has been the one oustanding feature of the market for several months.

Business property made a good showing, with noteworthy transactions both in the downtown district as well as outside, while residence property was represented by a fairly large run of good sized transactions.

Flat Transactions Slump.

Flat property was hardly up to its usual standard, while manufacturing property fell a long way short of the activity of the previous week.

There was not much doing of an important character in leases of building space, particularly in the downtown district.

But if manufacturing property did not make much of a showing it has something coming, if fairly well authenticated report is true.

It predicts the location of a mammoth automobile plant here which will employ 25,000 persons. It is said that three sites are under consideration by the company, which will require about forty acres for its plant. They are said to be fairly central in respect to location and will command a steep price if sold. By those claiming to be wise as to what is going on it is said the purchase of one of them will be closed within thirty days, when announcement of the company's plans will be made public.

Market Marking Time.

It probably is not much wide of the mark to say that the market has in a way been marking time, waiting on a settlement of the trouble in the building trades. According to report, many deals have been held in abeyance for this reason, with the general belief that the contractors and carpenters would settle their differences in time to permit of much building during the remainder of the year, but as week followed week with little prospect of a settlement many prospective buyers and builders are said to have abandoned their plans for this season.

Some also are said to be influenced by the great and seemingly growing industrial unrest and deem it the part of wisdom to keep out of the market for a few months, waiting the coming of more healthy and settled conditions.

One of the most interesting transactions of the week was the sale of the property at the northeast corner of North Clark street and Chicago avenue, which was purchased by Walter J. Rinn of the Philip J. Rinn company, sash and door manufacturers, from the Henderson and Webster families for a stated consideration of $110,000.

Buys on Speculation.

The property has a frontage of 50 feet on Clark street and 150 on Chicago avenue, and is improved with old two story frame buildings, given no value in the transaction, making the sale at at the rate of $2,200 a front foot and about $14.66 a square foot. Mr. Rinn stated he has no plans looking to any immediate improvement of the property, which he purchased because he considered it a good buy at the price.

There were six interests conveyed, the largest covering the corner holding with a frontage of 50 feet on Clark street and 66 on Chicago avenue, which was conveyed by Alexander Henderson et al. for a stated consideration of $74,000, which is at the rate of about $22.45 a square foot. Three other interests on Chicago avenue, each 21x50 feet, were conveyed for a stated consideration of $12,000 in each instance, being at the rate of $11.42 a square foot.

The transaction is of unusual interest, both by reason of the fact it is the first sale of Clark street property in that immediate vicinity for a considerable time, and also by reason of the seemingly strong price received. This is thought to be due to the fact it is an unusually good corner, and also to the stimulating effect of the marked activity and big advance in values in the new North Michigan avenue extension district. It certainly indicated confidence on the part of the buyer, and is likely to have a stimulating effect on Clark street values in that vicinity.

MANY DEALS IN RESIDENCES ARE LISTED FOR WEEK

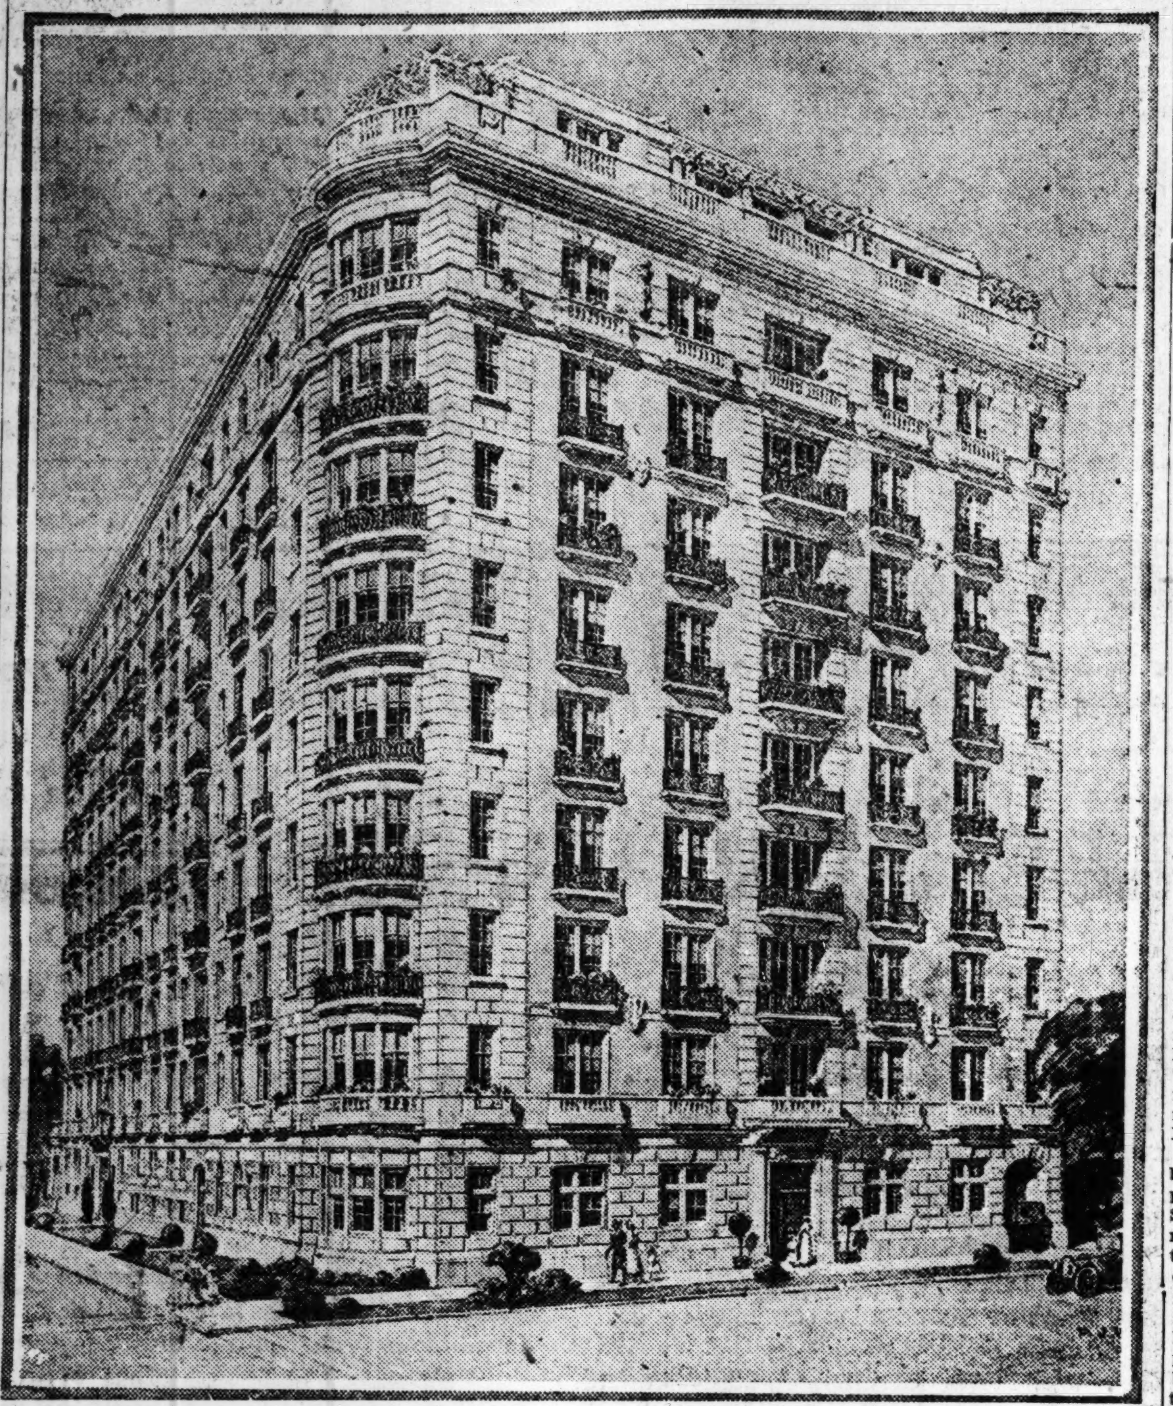
Residence property was fairly well represented in the week's business, although there were fewer large transactions reported than during the previous week.

One interesting transaction in the exclusive district just south of Lincoln park was the purchase by Albert D. Lasker, president of Lord & Thomas, from the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, of the attractive residence property at the southeast corner of North Dearborn street and Burton place for an indicated cash consideration of $53,000, according to the revenue stamps on the deed. The lot is 25x132 feet and is improved with a fine three story brick residence containing fifteen rooms. Mr. Lasker has been occupying the property for some time under a lease. It is known as the Stanley residence and has a two story garage in the rear.

A noteworthy deal in high grade Glencoe residence property was reported in the sale by James A. Davis to William F. Whitman, president of the Excelsior Printing company, of the property at 540 Washington avenue, for an indicated consideration of $30,000, subject to an incumbrance of $12,500. The house is a ten room stucco structure on about an acre and a half of ground overlooking the Skokie Country club. The house was erected by Mr. Davis about six years ago. Frederick B. Thomas represented both parties.

SHERIDAN ROAD APARTMENT

A Nine Story Building, to Cost with the Land, $1,500,000, Will Be Erected at Roscoe Street by Hugo L. Goetz.



Contracts are being awarded for the construction for Hugo L. Goetz, president of the Para Auto Tire company, of the extra high grade apartment building at the northwest corner of Sheridan road and Roscoe street, to be known as 3400 Sheridan road. It will be nine stories high, will cover an area of 107x268 feet, and, together with the ground, will represent an investment of about $1,500,000.

The eight apartment floors will contain twenty-four apartments, one of sixteen rooms fronting on Sheridan road and two twelve room apartments, facing Roscoe street, on each floor. P. J. Weber is the architect. The apartments are expected to rent for a total annual rental of about $180,000, the sixteen room one for $10,000 to $12,000 and the twelves for $4,800 to $6,000.

Chauffeurs and butlers' rooms and baths will be installed on the first floor mezzanine, while additional quarters for help will be provided in a roof story which will be added at the west end of the building.

E. Sumner Walker of 1535 Jarvis avenue will be in charge of the leasing of the apartments.

MOTOR CONCERNS BUY 33 ACRE FACTORY SITE

Walker Vehicle and Federal Electric Pay $114,000

As indicated elsewhere, there was little doing of an important character in manufacturing property, two transactions comprising about all of any real importance.

One covered a tract of a little over thirty-eight acres at the southwest corner of Eighty-seventh and State streets, on the Indiana Belt line, which has been acquired by the Walker Vehicle company and the Federal Electric company for an indicated consideration of $114,000. Title was taken by Louis A. Seeberger from the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, Mr. Seeberger giving back a trust deed to the trust company securing $74,000 of the purchase money five years at 6 per cent. It is announced that neither company plans any immediate improvements, the property being acquired for probably future requirements.

The Walker company is now located at Thirty-ninth and Wallace streets and is a large manufacturer of automobile trucks, while the Federal Electric company is located at Lake and Desplaines streets.

Record also was made of the purchase by the Armstrong Paint and Varnish company from W. A. Jones Foundry and Machine company of the vacant property at the northwest corner of Kilbourn avenue and Fourteenth street, 460x330 feet, for a stated consideration of $33,340.

The company, which is now at 2502 South Paulina street, will improve the property acquired with a large plant, which is expected to cost in the neighborhood of $250,000. It is stated the work of construction will begin as soon as building conditions are more favorable.

Control of Hartford Building Changes Hands

It is said that the controlling interest in the Hartford Safe Deposit company, which owns the building and the leasehold in the 92½x100 feet on which it stands at the southwest corner of Dearborn and Madison streets, has been acquired by parties whose names are withheld. It is a fourteen story and basement building and together with the leasehold interest is valued at about $1,000,000, each being valued at about $500,000. The corner fifty feet on Madison belongs to the estate of Edward S. Gillett, and is under lease for ninety-nine years from 1892 at an annual rental of $23,000 to $27,000, the latter being for the last ninety-five years.

The annex adjoining on the west, 45x100 feet, belonging to Mrs. Elizabeth A. Ware, is under lease for ninety-nine years and ten months from Jan. 1, 1901, at an annual rental of $12,000.

CONGRESS HOTEL COMPANY BUYS 2 PARCELS ON SITE

The Congress Hotel company has purchased from the trustees for Mary V. McCormick, the fees at 510 and 524 Michigan boulevard, for a stated consideration of $262,500, both being under the hotel. The first is 26x110 feet, being 87 feet south of Congress street, and was under lease for ninety-nine years from 1902 at an annual rental of $4,500, while the latter, 26x172 feet, was under lease for 100 years from 1905 at an annual rental of $6,000. The sale is on a 4 per cent basis. The transaction was negotiated by David S. Simon and B. W. Eisendrath, representing the purchasers. Simeon and Ira E. Straus acted for the purchaser in a legal way, while W. B. McIlvaine represented the McCormicks.

The acquiring of these properties was in accordance with the plans of the Hoffmans, who now own 188 feet in fee simple, out of a total of 369 feet in Michigan boulevard under the hotel, which they operate, and of which they are the principal stockholders.

DULL WEEK IN LEASES, EXCEPT OUTSIDE LOOP

Congoleum Company Rents Fletcher St. Warehouse.

It was a dull week in a leasing way, particularly in the downtown district, where nothing of any importance was reported. The only business reported had to do with outside property.

The Mears-Slayton Lumber company has leased to the Congoleum company, Inc., the property at 1232-52 Fletcher street, with one story warehouse, with Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul switch, for a term rental of $50,000. The lessee company, which heretofore has used public warehouses in Chicago, will in the future maintain their own storage department on a much enlarged scale. E. N. Duerlein & Co. and Louis B. Beardslee were the brokers.

South Side Transaction.

There was filed for record the lease by Charles F. Ogren to the Samuel C. Osborn Manufacturing company of the three story building at 2952-60 West Chicago avenue for a term from Sept. 1, 1919, to Aug. 31, 1934, for a term rental of $180,000, to be used for the manufacture of musical instruments, salesrooms, and offices.

Mary Levy & Bro. have leased to Melvin Mahin, warehouseman, the building at 2510-18 Cottage Grove avenue and 2515-21 Calumet avenue, a mill constructed building containing about 70,000 square feet of floor space, for a term rental of $49,500. This formerly was partly occupied by the Woods Electric Motor company. Mr. Mahin will take possession Oct. 1 and use the building for general warehouse purposes. The lessors, James F. and Ruth W. Porter, were represented by A. J. Prassel.

West Side Garage Sold.

The garage property at 5323-25 West Madison street, lot 55x155 feet, has been sold by Max E. Kunkel and Frank R. Kunkel to Carolyn S. Rothschild for a reported consideration of $18,000. The purchaser has rented the property for ten years for a reported term rental of $22,500. Kurt Rosenthal and Sidney L. Stein were the brokers.

The United Cigar Stores company has leased from Harry R. Curran and Mandel Lowenstine the store at the southeast corner of Clark street and Diversey avenue for a term of ten years for a term rental of $32,700. Kurt Rosenthal & Co. were the brokers.

The Chicago Title and Trust company is trustee in a loan of $275,000, due July 1, 1926, at 6 per cent, secured by the property at 536-38 South Dearborn street, 50x66 feet, improved with twelve story office building.

GLOBE REPORT DENIED.

New York, Aug. 24.—The report emanating from Pittsburgh that the Globe Oil company has sold its Louisiana holdings to the Sinclair interests was officially denied at the offices of the Sinclair company.

BANK PURCHASES $125,000 CORNER FOR NEW HOME

Will Spend $100,000 to Fit Up New Banking Room.

In addition to the sale of the property at the northeast corner of North Clark street and Chicago avenue, noted elsewhere, outside business property was represented by another important transaction, the purchase by the Reliance State bank of the property at the northwest corner of West Madison street and Ogden avenue as a new home. The property, which is known as the Illinois Hall building, was acquired from the estate of Jeannette Webster for a stated consideration of $125,000, subject to an incumbrance of $30,000. The building is a three story and basement structure on an irregular shaped lot, with a frontage of 50 feet on Madison street, 165 feet on Ogden avenue, and 150 feet on the north line.

The bank will occupy the entire first floor and will expend about $100,000 in converting it into a thoroughly modern banking room. Something of a departure from the general rule with reference to safety deposit quarters will be the location of this branch of the bank's business on the first floor.

The Reliance is the latest in the "Morris chain of banks" and is one of the largest on the west side, its deposits being reported at $3,250,000. It is now located in the triangular shaped corner of Madison street, Ogden avenue, and Ashland avenue. Alex Friend & Co. represented the bank and Robert T. Benson the sellers.

A sale on Wabash avenue involving a $150,000 improvement was reported in the purchase by B. A. Gramm and Max Bernstein from Harold A. Howard and W. A. Wieboldt of the property at 2439-43, being 74x192 feet, for a reported consideration of $38,000. The building, a two story structure, has been leased to the Gramm-Bernstein Motor Truck company of Lima, O., makers of motor trucks, to be used as a salesroom and service station. Sprague Moore was the broker.

The West Englewood-Ashland State bank has acquired from John Bain the property at the northeast corner of Sixty-third street and Marshfield avenue, lot 32x125 feet, improved with a two story business building, for an indicated consideration of $47,000, subject to an incumbrance of $15,000. It is stated the bank, which is now located a half block west of this property, will occupy it with its business. Mr. Bain in turn conveyed to the bank the store and flat property in Sixty-third street, 31 feet west of Justina street, at an indicated consideration of $17,000, subject to $7,000, and property at Fifty-ninth street, 228 feet east of Springfield avenue.

There also was filed for record the purchase by Ernest H. Lyons from Florian B. Wallace the property in Wabash avenue, 335 feet south of Twelfth street, lot 57x145 feet, east front, with old brick residence improvements, for an indicated consideration of $57,000, subject to an incumbrance of $30,000.

Simon Rosenberg has sold to James F. Graham the property in Eighteenth street, 112 feet east of Halsted street, lot 68x113 feet, north front, with business improvements, for an indicated $37,600, subject to $27,500.

The business property in Sixty-third street, at the northwest corner of Langley avenue, lot 55x125 feet, with store improvements, has been conveyed by David Greenspahn to Jennie M. Kaplan, for an indicated $77,000, subject to $17,000.

There was filed for record the transfer by C. Renzino to Francesco Gilliberti of the property at 2520-24 Wentworth avenue, lot 75x100 feet, with store and flat improvements, for an indicated consideration of $51,500, subject to an incumbrance of $16,500, $35,000 being paid for the equity, according to the stamps on the deed.

Record was made of the transfer by M. S. Mishkovsky to Raphael Golde of the property at the southwest corner of Madison street and Parkside avenue, lot 50x145 feet, with store and flat improvements, for an indicated consideration of $35,000, subject to an incumbrance of $24,500.

The property in Roosevelt road, 313 feet west of Independence boulevard, lot 96x112 feet, south front, has been conveyed by A. Smith to Irving Yates for an indicated consideration of $26,000, subject to an incumbrance of $10,000.

FLAT PROPERTY SHOWS DECREASE IN ACTIVITY

Rex Beach Purchases an Apartment Building in Hyde Park.

The market for apartment property failed to develop anything like the activity of the previous week, especially in the way of transactions of any magnitude or importance.

Considerable interest was lent to one transaction by the fact that Rex Beach, the author, was one of the purchasers, according to a deed filed for record. Together with Louis M. Henoch he has purchased from Courtney R. Gleason the twenty-four apartment building of four, five, and six rooms at the northeast corner of University avenue and Fifty-fourth place for an indicated consideration of $100,000, subject to an incumbrance of $50,000, the purchasers paying $50,000 cash, according to the revenue stamps on the deed. The building was erected about seven years ago, and is said to have a gross annual rental of about $15,000.

South Side Transaction.

A large transaction in south side apartment property was the sale by Anna Clemens to Herman and Rebecca Dalberg of the twenty-seven apartment building of four, five, and six rooms, on a lot 175x165 feet, at the northeast corner of Marquette road and Kenwood avenue, for a reported consideration of $95,000, subject to an incumbrance of $60,000. The building is said to have a gross annual rental of about $9,200, and in part payment the purchasers conveyed a farm of 520 acres in Arenac county, Mich. K. R. Beak & Co. and John B. De Voney & Co. were the brokers.

An interesting south side transaction covers the large seven story apartment building at the southeast corner of Wabash avenue and Thirty-fifth street in the heart of the black belt, known as the Angeles, and it occupies a lot 75x151 feet. The property has been leased for a term of ninety-nine years from July 15, 1920, by William Krutz Jr. to Randolph W. Hunter at an annual rental of $8,500. The lessee is to pay $25,000 for the building, and in event he pays $25,000 additional compensation prior to July 4, 1920, then the annual rental is to be reduced to $6,000.

Hyde Park Deal.

John G. Yokum has acquired from Newton B. Lauren the fifteen apartment building of four and five rooms at the southwest corner of Everett avenue and Fifty-fifth street, lot 76x150 feet, with gross annual rental of about $10,000, for an indicated cash consideration of $60,000, according to the revenue stamps on the deed. The property first was conveyed to Rebecca H. and Harry E. Hanson, for a stated cash consideration of $47,500, $48 worth of revenue stamps being on the deed.

The high grade two apartment building, each having seven rooms, which rent for $175 a month, at 5132 Ellis avenue, lot 40x150 feet, east front, has been sold by Leonard J. Stadeker to Minnie A. McLain for an indicated consideration of $30,000, subject to an incumbrance of $15,000. Harley M. Ruffner of the office of I. Whiteson represented both parties.

The extra high grade 6 flat building at 842-44 Galt avenue, lot 60x127 feet, has been sold by A. T. Anderson to Michael Kultgen, for a reported consideration of $52,000, subject to $28,000. It has gross annual rental of $6,976, and the purchaser conveyed in exchange the business property at 440 West Sixty-third street, one store and two flats, at $19,000, subject to $6,000. J. E. Reninger of Whiteside & Wentworth was the broker.

THREE ILLINOIS G. O. P. HAVE EAR TO SENATE PHONE

McKinley, Shurtleff, and Deneen All but Open Candidates.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 23.—[Special.]—Three Illinois Republicans are all but announced candidates for the United States senatorship of 1920. There may be others on the way, but the state fair round-up of party leaders produced the following trio, who are to all intents and purposes now in the running:

Congressman William B. McKinley of Champaign.

Former Gov. Charles S. Deneen of Chicago.

Former Speaker Edward D. Shurtleff of Marengo.

Of these three Congressman McKinley comes the closest to being a declared candidate. His campaign organization has been working busily and his Chicago headquarers are soon to be opened. Representative Shurtleff has made up his mind to go and his legislative friends are now busily working for him in the downstate counties.

Deneen Yet Noncommittal.

Mr. Deneen is noncommittal, but there is every surface indication, politically, that his senatorial announcement will be made in due time.

All three of these men have been in Springfield this week, and there have been many quiet conferences, but not a single definite statement came from any camp. The disposition of each of the three seemed to be to hold back from anything precipitate.

Northing Heard from Thompson.

The absent element has been the city hall crowd from Chicago. Mayor Thompson, who still is Republican national committeeman from Illinois, was not here, and there was no definite word that indicated what the city hall will do on the senatorship. Some of the leaders seemed to think that the hall will support either Congressman Madden or Congressman William E. Mason.

The entrance of Mr. Shurtleff as a candidate, which seems to be assured, tends to remove Congressman Copley of the Aurora-Joliet district from the running, inasmuch as Mr. Shurtleff and Mr. Copley are from the same district, and the presumption is strong that the two will not become senatorial rivals. One man who ought to know made the positive statement that Col. Copley has definitely determined not to be a candidate. The Shurtleff candidacy also tends to indicate that Col. B. M. Chiperfield of Canton is not to be a senatorial starter.

NATIONAL GUARD LEADER AVERSE TO ARMY'S BILL

Washington, D. C., Aug. 23.—[Special.]—The National Guard Association of the United States, Col. John B. Rose, chairman, issued a statement today criticizing the army reorganization bill now pending in congress. One of the association's main objections to the bill is that it will make it practically impossible for the national guard to exist.

In a statement accompanying an analysis of the measure, Chairman Rose pledged the association to universal military training, but against universal military service.

Among the objections to the bill are the following:

The bill is crude, incomplete, and provides no general scheme of a military policy for the United States.

It creates an unnecessarily large regular army, and provides advanced grades for practically every officer in the regular army.

It puts boys of 19 years of age in the regular army for three months.

It provides an overofficered militia bureau for a national guard, while at the same time making no provisions for the national guard, and providing for legislation which will make it practically impossible for the national guard to exist.

It puts the system of reserve officers under "regulations," to be adopted by the general staff.

John L. Lovett Accepts Position in Michigan

John L. Lovett, better known as "Jack" to all old time newspaper men, announced last night that he had accepted a position as secretary of the Michigan Manufacturers' association and expects to leave soon for Detroit. He will be accompanied by his family.

Mr. Lovett was associated with THE TRIBUNE for many years, and at other times worked on other morning and afternoon papers.

Three years ago he retired from active newspaper work to become assistant to John M. Glenn, secretary of the Illinois Manufacturers' association.

NAVY AVIATORS FIGHT UNIFYING OF AIR SERVICE

Oppose Cabinet Member as Flying Chief, Writes Captain.

Navy aviators are against the proposal to concentrate the air service of the army, navy, postoffice and coast and forest fire patrols under a single executive, probably a new cabinet member.

Lieutenant J. R. Frawley, Pay Corps, U. S. navy, on duty aboard the U. S. S. Shawmut, flagship of Captain G. W. Steele Jr., brought the attitude of the navy flyers to the attention of THE TRIBUNE in the form of some manuscript prepared by Captain Steele as commander of the work of the air fleet of the Atlantic squadon, department of navy aeronautics.

"There are reports," said one of the letters of Capt. Steele, in possession of Lieut. Frawley, "that the proposed congressional legislation to consolidate the air services will provide for a separate cabinet officer as head of the department of aviation, and others that say the head of the aviation department will merely be a chief, such as the various bureaus of the army and navy have.

"Navy Should Keep Control."

"Either of these plans, or any other plans which take aviation for the navy out of complete control of the navy department, will mean the service will suffer, and such legislation should be opposed.

"The necessity for keeping the air service of the navy under navy control is easily explained. A navy flier has to know how to navigate, either from the flimsy cockpit of an airship or from the bridge of a vessel. He has to know how to do navy scouting, bombing and torpedoing, coast patrol work, and finally the spotting of shots and regulation of navy fire.

Balks at "Interference."

"The army aviator cannot know the difficulties of the navy flying game and it takes him years to learn his own. It is essential the navy flyers be given permanent details to their work and that they be governed by the navy exclusively, without interference from outside sources."

FEDERAL AGENTS CAPTURE BOAT CARRYING BEER

14,520 Bottles of the "Kicky" Brew in Hold, Charge.

The lighthouse winked and the good ship Mineral City, escorted by smaller craft, staggered silently on with a cargo of beer at the witching hour yesterday morning. The flotilla docked quietly in the Chicago river at the foot of Rush street where motor trucks waited. From the shadows of the wharf sprang agents of the United States government.

Today, United States Attorney Clyne has in his possession a well equipped pleasure boat and 14,520 bottles of nonprohibition beer.

The first arrest made following the seizure was that of Thomas Young, owner of the steamer, whose saloon is at 950 Rush street. Appearing before United States Commissioner Lewis F. Mason, Young gave bonds of $5,000 for his appearance Sept. 10. Meantime the government has his boat and the beer.

Seek to Recover Trucks.

Raids were made by land as well as sea yesterday. United States Deputy Marshal Thomas G. Smith returned to Zion City with a writ of replevin to seize the automobile trucks held by the state because they were used to carry beer.

TUGS HAUL BEER.

Kenosha, Wis., Aug. 23.—The fact that most of the trucks of the Kenosha-Chicago "beer railway" were tied up because they had been seizd by the authorities at Zion City did not entirely stop the traffic of the joy railroad today.

Scores of touring cars and limousines were backed up to the brewery warehouse today and went back to Chicago laden with the amber fluid. Two or three tugs were also loaded with beer to go the "water way."

Auto Owner Held to Jury for Death of Small Boy

Antone Bobata, 1851 West Twenty-first street, was held to the grand jury in $3,000 bonds yesterday by a coroner's jury at an inquest over Ignatius Caldrone, 11 years old, 2310 Princeton avenue. He is charged with having run over the boy Aug. 16 with his automobile. Witnesses said Bobata drove on after hitting the boy. He was arrested Aug. 17, when he returned to the scene of the accident to ascertain whether he killed or injured anyone.

"Buy Firestones"

That's the Word That's Going Round This Year

Wherever you go you hear car owners passing the word—"Buy Firestones. They're the best cords this year." The reasons are many, but the conclusion is the same—Buy Firestone Cords.

Read these spoken advertisements for the New Standard Oversize Firestone Cord with Extra Heavy Non-Skid Tread:

"Beats the 8,000-mile guarantee 50%, 100% and more."

"The best looking tire I ever put on my car and as good as it looks."

"It rides easier. Must be that extra air capacity."

"Firestone certainly knows how to design a Non-Skid. Holds on sharp turns and slippery pavement—yet there's no drag on the engine."

"I bought it on sight because of its extra size and fine appearance and because I know Firestone quality."

"You'll find that it gives you more miles per gallon of gasoline."

"Easy to steer yet grips the road."

With the mouth-to-mouth tire advertising centered on Firestone this year no thinking tire buyer can afford to remain uninfluenced. See your dealer.

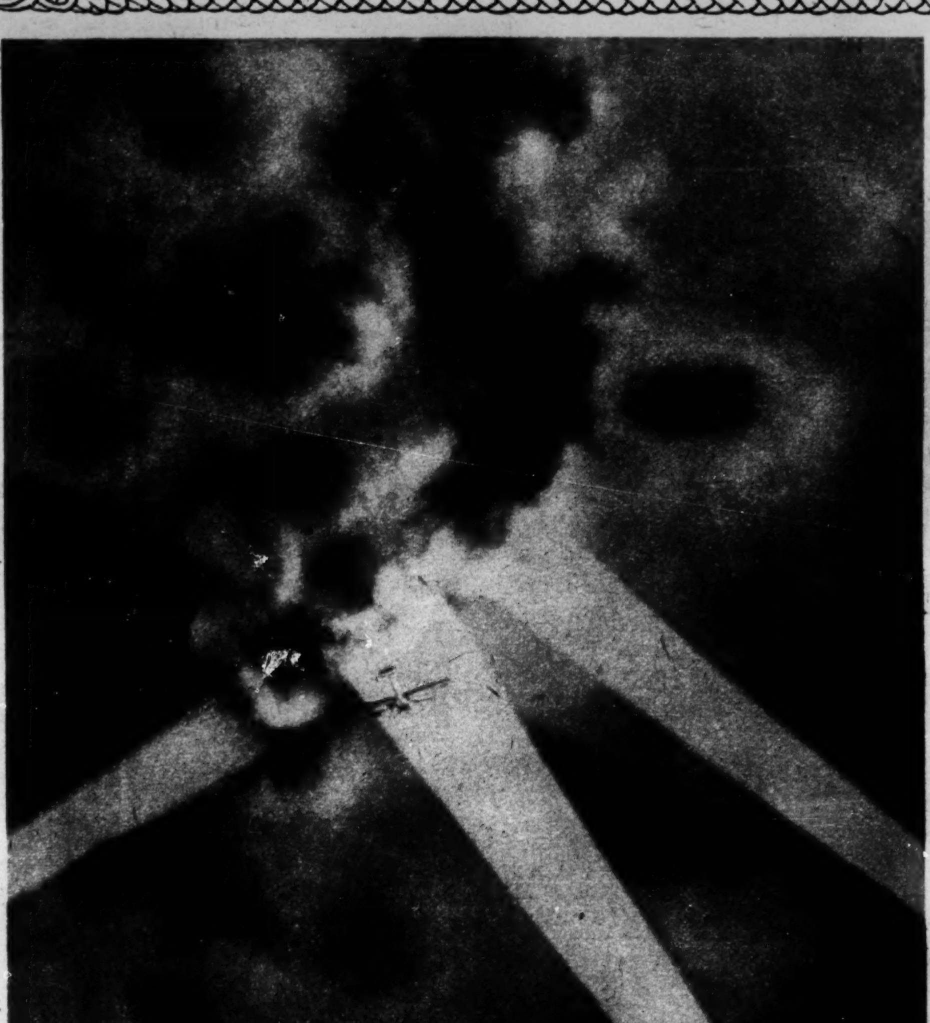
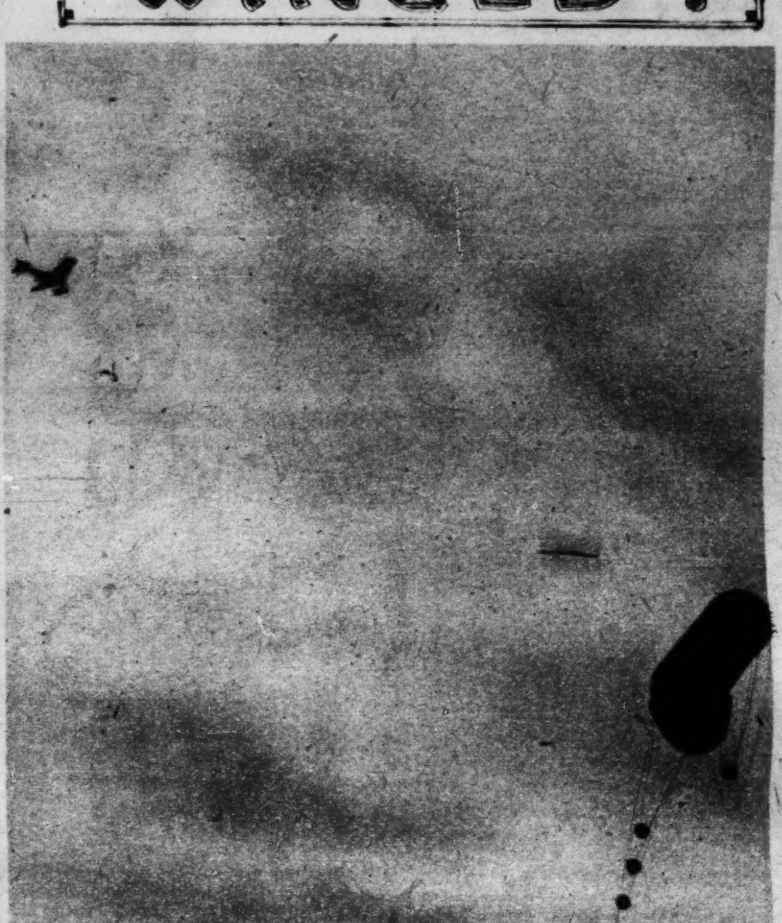
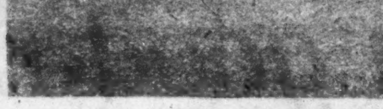
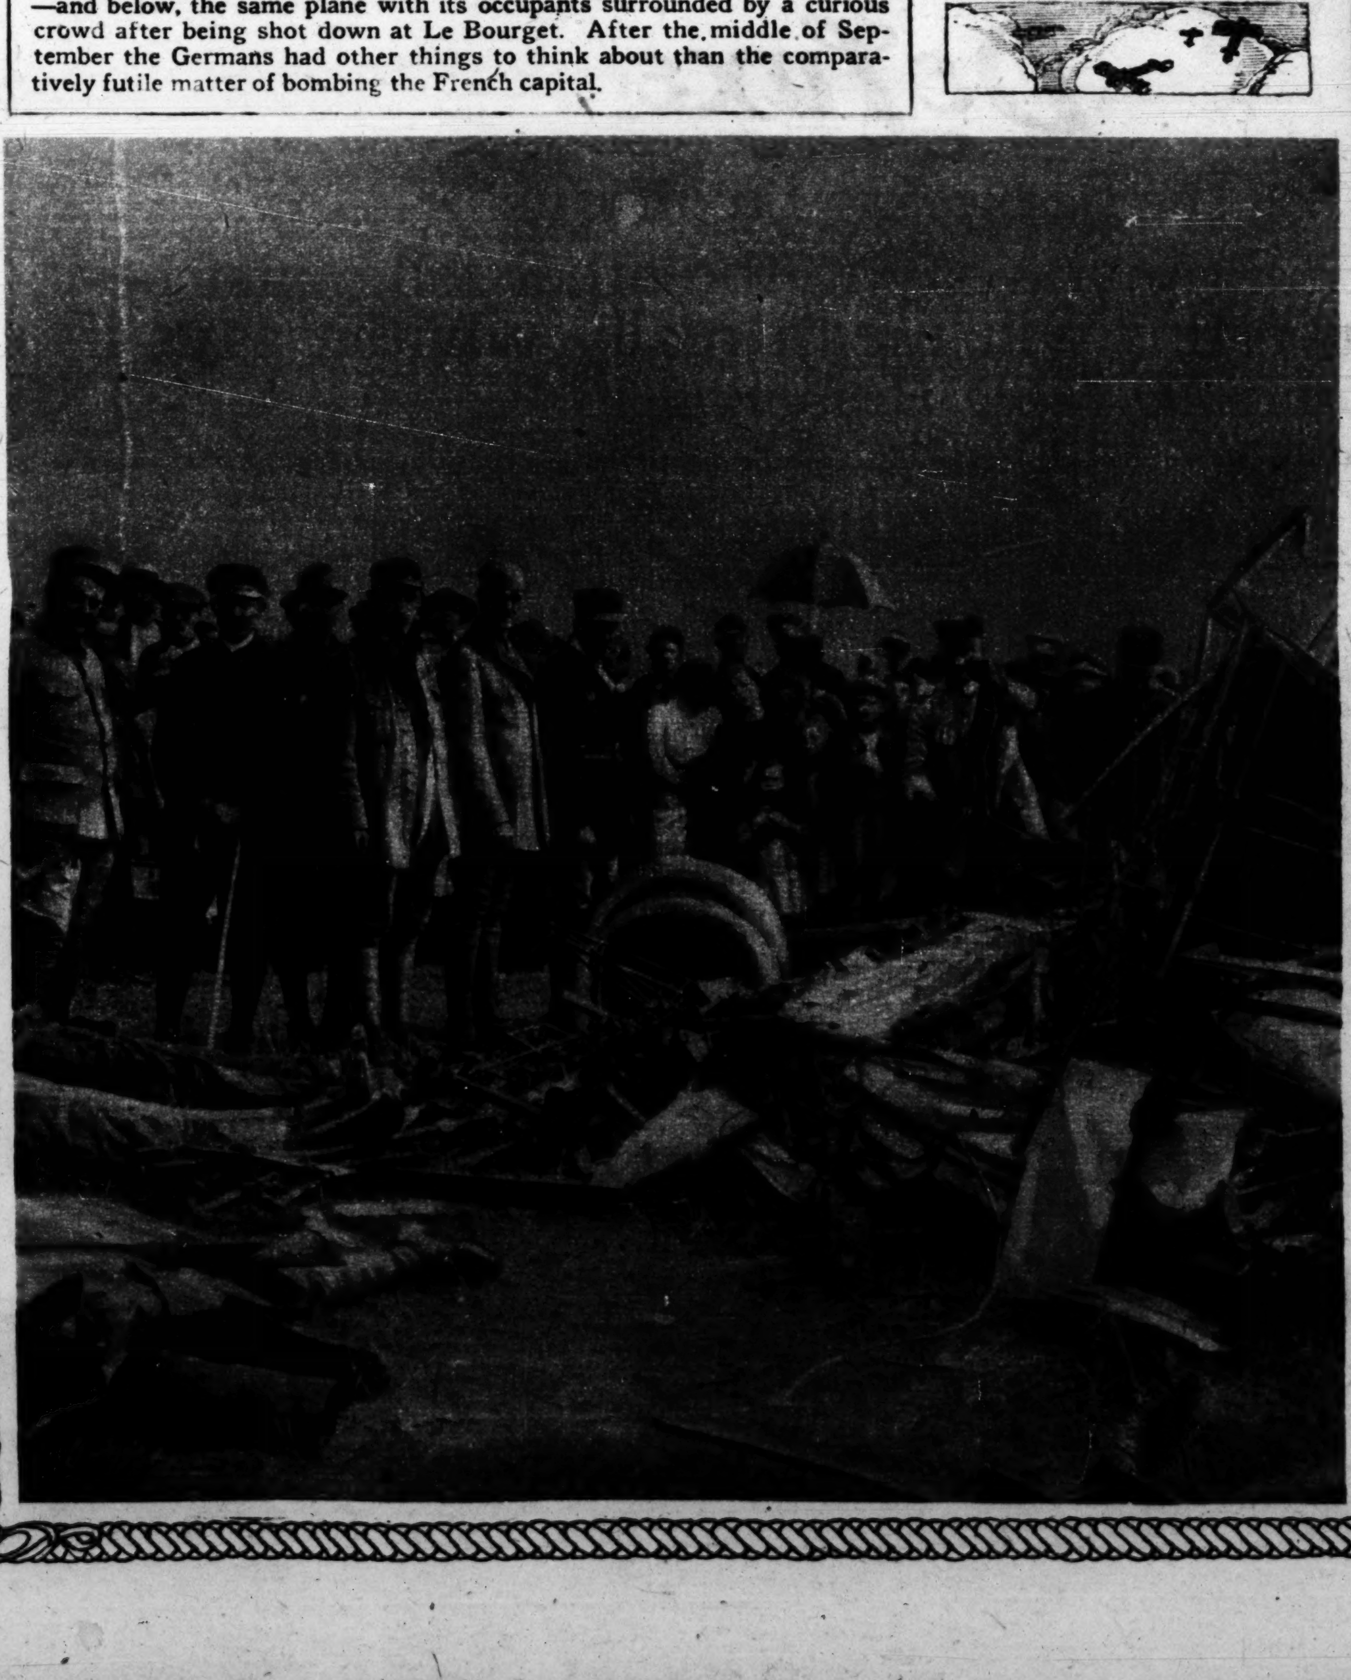
WINGED!



THE LAST GERMAN PLANE OVER PARIS, picked out by rays from the giant projectors before sunrise on the morning of Sept. 16, 1918—and below, the same plane with its occupants surrounded by a curious crowd after being shot down at Le Bourget. After the middle of September the Germans had other things to think about than the comparatively futile matter of bombing the French capital.







AN AMERICAN "SAUSAGE" (observation balloon) attacked by a German Fokker in the Toul sector, and (below) falling in flames a few minutes later. These unusual photographs were unearthed in Paris recently by a member of the American aviation service.

"I was astounded at my new power over men and women. People actually went out of their way to do things for me—they seemed EAGER TO PLEASE ME.

The Secret of Making People Like You

"Getting people to like you is the quick road to success—it's more important than ability," says this man. It surely did wonders for him. How he does it—a simple method which anyone can use instantly.

ALL the office was talking about it, and we were wondering which one of us would be the lucky man.

There was an important job to be filled—as Assistant-to-the-President. According to the general run of salaries in the office, this one would easily pay from $7,000 to $10,000 a year.

The main requisite, as we understood it, was striking personality and the ability to meet even the biggest men in their offices, their clubs and their homes on a basis of absolute equality. This the firm considered of even more importance than knowledge of the business.

YOU know just what happens when news of this sort gets around an office. The boys got to picking the man among themselves. They had the choice all narrowed down to two men—Harrison and myself. That was the way I felt about it, too. Harrison was big enough for the job, and could undoubtedly make a success of it. But, personally, I felt that I had the edge on him in lots of ways. And I was sure that the firm knew it, too.

Never shall I forget my thrill of pleasure when the president's secretary came into my office with a cheery smile, looked at me meaningly, handed me a bulletin and said, "Mr. Frazer, here is the news about the new Assistant-to-the-President." There seemed to be a new note of added respect in her attitude toward me. I smiled my appreciation as she left my desk.

At last I had come into my own! Never did the sun shine so brightly as on that morning, and never did it seem so good to be alive! These were my thoughts as I gazed out of the window, seeing not the hurrying throngs, but vivid pictures of my new position flashing before me. And then for a further joyous thrill I read the bulletin. It said, "Effective January 1, Mr. Henry J. Peters, of our Cleveland office, will assume the duties of Assistant-to-the-President at the home office."

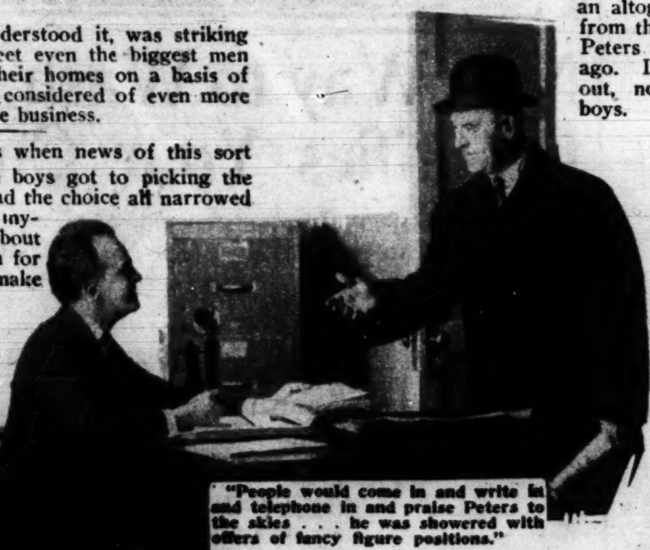
PETERS! Peters!—surely it could not be Peters! Why, this fellow Peters was only a branch-office salesman. ....Personality! Why, he was only five feet four inches high, and had no more personality than a mouse. Stack him up against a big man and he would look and act like an office boy. I knew Peters well and there was nothing to him, nothing at all.

January the first came and Peters assumed his new duties. All the boys were openly hostile to him. Naturally, I felt very keenly about it, and did not exactly go out of my way to make things pleasant for him—not exactly!

But our open opposition did not seem to bother Peters. He went right on with his work and began to make good. Soon I noticed that, despite my feeling against him, I was secretly beginning to admire him. He was winning over the other boys, too. It was not long before we all buried our little hatchets and palled up with Peters.

The funny thing about it was the big hit he made with the people we did business with. I never saw anything like it. They would come in and write in and telephone in to the firm and praise Peters to the skies. They insisted on doing business with him, and gave him orders of a size that made us dizzy to look at. And offers of positions! —why, Peters had almost as many fancy-figure positions offered to him as a dictionary has words.

WHAT I could not get into my mind was how a little, unassuming, ordinary-to-look-at chap like Peters could make such an impression with everyone—especially with influential men. He seemed to have an uncanny influence over people. The masterly Peters of today was an altogether different man from the commonplace Peters I had first met years ago. I could not figure it out, nor could the other boys.



"People would come in and write in and telephone in and praise Peters to the skies . . . he was showered with offers of fancy figure positions."

One day at luncheon I came right out and asked Peters how he did it. I half expected him to evade. But he did not. He let me in on the secret. He said he was not afraid to do it because there was always plenty of room at the top.

What Peters told me acted on my mind in exactly the same way as when you stand on a hill and look through binocular glasses at objects in the far distance. Many things I could not see before suddenly leaped into my mind with startling clearness. A new sense of power surged through me. And I felt the urge to put it into action.

Within a month I was getting remarkable results. I had suddenly become popular. Business men of importance who had formerly given me only a passing nod of acquaintance, suddenly showed a desire for my friendship. I was invited into the most select social circles. People—even strangers—actually went out of their way to do things for me. At first I was astounded at my new power over men and women. Not only could I get them to do what I wanted them to do, but they actually anticipated my wishes and seemed eager to please me. But let me tell you some of my experiences:

One of our biggest customers had a grievance against the firm. He held off payment of a big bill and switched to one of our competitors. I was sent to see him. He met me like a cornered tiger. A few words and I calmed him. Inside of fifteen minutes he was showering me with apologies. He gave me a check in full payment, another big order, and promised to continue giving us all his business.

For certain reasons it became necessary for the firm to obtain a signed letter from a prominent public man. Three of our men had tried, and failed. Then I was given the job. I felt I had been made the "goat." But I got the signed letter, and with it an inside tip which enabled us to land a prize order about which our competitors are still guessing and wondering.

Then trouble sprang up at one of our factories. The men talked strike. Things looked ugly. I was sent to straighten it out. On the eve of a general walkout, I pacified the men and headed off the strike. And not only this, but ever since then this factory has led all our other plants in production.

I could tell you dozens of similar instances, but they all tell the same story—the ability to make people like you, believe what you want them to believe, and to do what you want them to do. I take no personal credit for what I have done. All the credit I give to the method Peters told me about. We have told it to lots of our friends, and it has enabled them to do just as remarkable things as Peters and I have done.

Which reminds me: One of my wife's close friends moved to another town where she was a stranger. My wife, of course, knew of my method. She told it to her friend with the idea that it might be of assistance to her in meeting new people. It helped her so wonderfully that in a very short time she won the close friendship of many of the "best families" in the town. Everyone wonders how she did it. But WE know.

BUT YOU want to know what method I used to do all these remarkable things. It is this: You know that everyone does not think alike. What one likes another dislikes. What pleases one offends another. And what offends one pleases another. Well, there you are. You can make an instant hit with anyone if you say the things they want you to say, and act the way they want you to act. Do this and they will surely like you, and believe in you, and will go miles out of their way to PLEASE YOU.

You can do it easily by knowing certain simple signs. Written on every man, woman and child are signs, as clearly and as distinctly as though they were in letters a foot high, which show you from one quick glance exactly what to say and to do to please them—to get them to believe what you want them to believe—to think as you think—to do exactly what you want them to do.

Knowing these simple signs is the whole secret of getting what you want out of life—of making friends, of business and social advancement. Every great leader uses this method. That is why he IS a leader. Use it yourself and you will quickly become a leader—nothing can stop you. And you will want to use it if for no other reason than to protect yourself against others.

WHAT Peters told me at luncheon that day was this: "Get Dr. Blackford's 'Reading Character at Sight.'" I did so. This is how I learned to do all the remarkable things I have told you about.

You have heard of Dr. Blackford, the Master Character Analyst. Many concerns will not employ a man without first getting Dr. Blackford to pass on him. Concerns such as Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, Baker-Vawter Company, Scott Paper Company and many others pay Dr. Blackford large annual fees for advice on dealing with human nature.

So great was the demand for these services that Dr. Blackford could not even begin to fill all engagements. So. Dr. Blackford has explained the method in a simple seven-lesson course entitled "Reading Character at Sight." Even a half hour's reading of this remarkable course will give you an insight into human nature and a power over people which will surprise you.

Such confidence have the publishers in Dr. Blackford's Course, "Reading Character at Sight," that they will gladly send it to you on approval. Send no money. Merely fill in and mail the coupon. The complete course will go to you instantly, on approval, all charges prepaid. Look it over thoroughly. See if it lives up to the claims made for it. Remember, you take no risk, you assume no obligation. The entire course goes to you on approval. You've everything to gain—nothing to lose. So mail the coupon NOW, while this remarkable offer remains open.

Good Night—

and a good night's rest on a DeLuxe

The Bedspring Luxurious

THE good night you say to the other folks just before you retire will mean really what it says if you sleep on a De Luxe Bedspring.

It will mean for you a GOOD night—of rest, of sleep, of utter relaxation.

For a good night's rest, sleep, and relaxation depend absolutely on the bedspring—not on the mattress or the bed.

The right design of coil bedspring is the only material foundation for that complete rest, deep sleep, and utter relaxation which means renewed energy in the morning.

You can't get that "all-rested up" morning feeling in any other way—unless you happen to be the one-in-a-million who believes he could sleep comfortably, 365 nights a year, on a hard, unyielding mattress or in a twisty hammock.

The De Luxe Bedspring is the only coil bedspring that overcomes all the defects, not only of the ordinary type of coil spring, but also of the sagging, twisty wire-fabric springs and the unyielding box-springs.

The De Luxe is the only bedspring of any type that yields buoyantly to the contours of the body—that permits the sleeper to lie in an utterly relaxed, horizontal, natural position—and that supports the lighter parts of the body equally with the heavier.

Your dealer will be glad to show you the De Luxe—you will see at once just why the De Luxe is the only bedspring on which you can get a good night's rest.

Finished in gray enamel and made to last a lifetime. For wood or metal beds.

Look for this trade mark on the side bar of the spring—
it is your guarantee.

New Way to Wash Your Face Beautifies Your Complexion

Beauty specialists agree that the secret of a perfect complexion is a thoroughly clean skin. A specialist has perfected a new substance, Ara-Mara, which is not only excellent for washing the face, but it cannot injure the most delicate complexion. It will not, cannot grow hair. All you do is to gently massage it into the skin and wash with plain warm water. It not only cleanses thoroughly, but it lightens the complexion much better than lemon juice or face bleach. It is surprising to see how fresh, clear and wholesome the skin becomes, even after only one proper treatment. Those who use it declare it has done more real good than any complexion treatment they ever used. It's a wonderful treatment for enlarged, clogged pores and irritations. It certainly is a great blessing to those who are afraid of wrinkles and who have dull, sallow, lifeless complexions. You can always get Ara-Mara at any big store. If you live out of town and your home dealer has not got it, you can order fifty cents' worth of Ara-Mara by mail of Herbert Roystone, 16 East 18th Street, New York.

The Best Way to Use Rouge

The specialist who created the wonderful La-may Face Powder has invented a new rouge. The rouge is inside the puff. All you do is to rub the puff on your face. It comes through the puff just as you need it. It goes on splendidly and stays on the face until you wash it off. The puff is in a dainty metal box. The box cannot break and the rouge will not crumble like the old-fashioned kind. This newly invented rouge is called La-may (French, Rouge L'Ame). It gives a beautiful color that looks natural under the strongest light. There are two colors—medium and dark. The fifty-cent package will last six months, yet the box is small enough to fit your purse. When you use this pure, harmless rouge and see how much more convenient it is and how much better it stays on, you will understand why thousands of women say it is the best they have ever used. Because La-may Rouge is so new, your dealer may not have it yet, but he can easily get it. If your dealer refuses to get you a package, you may order by mail from Herbert Roystone, 16 E. 18th Street, New York. Save this notice.

WATCHFUL WAITING at the entrance to Fort Bouguen, Brest, France, the largest of all A. E. F. camps for the wives of American soldiers. When this picture was taken last month it had 750 guests, most of them wives of Fifth division men, who were preparing to sail for home. When an outfit is ordered to a port of embarkation the names of all men married in Europe are checked over and the wives brought to the women's camp of the port. Usually the wife arrives a week or ten days ahead of the husband, and there's an interval of suspense. If the head of the family fails to call in due time, however, an M. P. is sent after him, and this particular camp has the record of having never lost a husband.

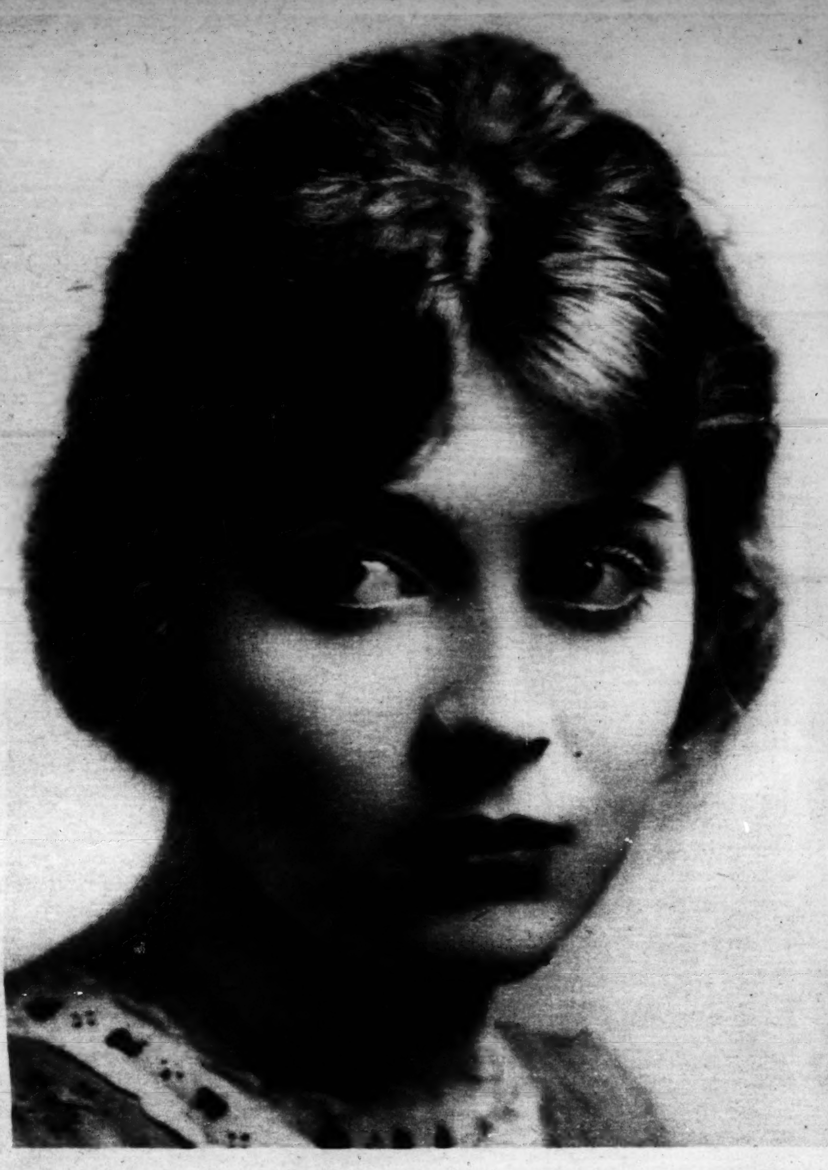
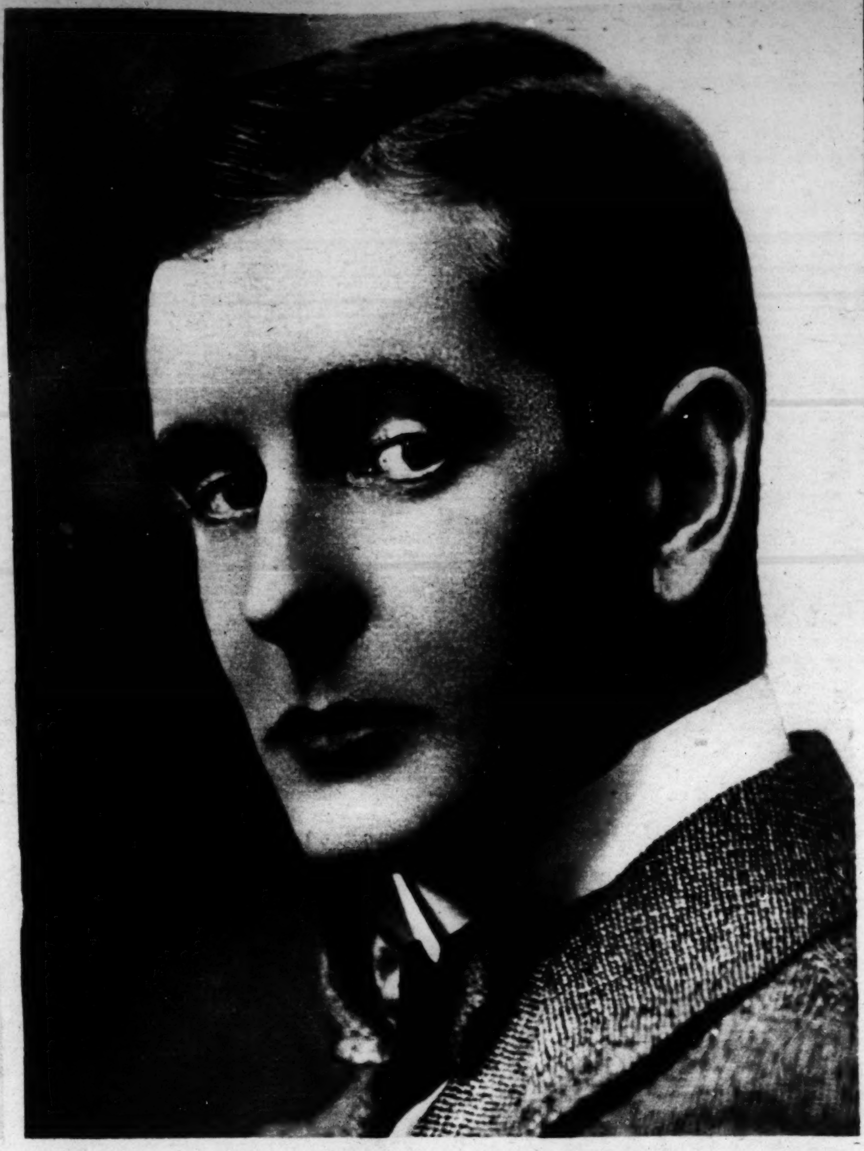
HONEYMOONING AT FORT BOUGUEN—Andrew Bussum, a Fifth division doughboy, takes advantage of the daily visiting hours to call on Mrs. Bussum, whom he married in Luxemburg. The grounds at the camp are unusually beautiful, and much spooning goes on under the judicious supervision of the two Y. M. C. A. women who are in charge. (Photograph by Thomas R. Shaw.)

ALL RETURNING TROOP TRANSPORTS must be equipped with nurseries, and Willard Morris Sault is one of the reasons. His mother is a thorough Parisienne and his father, Earl A. Sault, a member of the 302d motor transport unit. During the first three weeks of July at Fort Bouguen a baby was born every seventy-two hours. (Photograph by Thomas R. Shaw.)





JANE NOVAK is the girl of whom William S. Hart said on a recent visit: "We all love her to death at the studio. She's so sweet. The dearest little mother in the world."

Yes, Miss Novak is married. Her husband is, I understand, a nonprofessional. The baby, quite to the contrary, is a star and has appeared in numerous pictures where all demanded of the actor was to kick and look cunning.

1896 and St. Louis, Mo., were the time and place of Miss Novak's birth. She started her screen career with Artcraft in "Selfish Yates." She has played with Mr. Hart in many productions since, the last being "Wagon Tracks" In appearance this young woman is blonde, with blue eyes. She is 5 feet 7 inches tall and weighs 133 pounds. Mae Tinee.

CREIGHTON HALE was born in Cork, Ireland. Educated in Dublin and London. Coming of a theatrical family, it is not surprising that he adopted the stage as his field of endeavor. From childhood he has been an actor.

He came to this country with Gertrude Elliott in "The Dawn of a Tomorrow." Broadway knew him for a time. Then the cinema chained his interest and he started work for Famous Players. He's been since that time with various other companies, playing leads usually, but supporting sometimes. "The Thirteenth Chair" is the latest feature in which he has been exploited.

Mr. Hale is an athletic chap. He aviates, swims and motors. And he's blonde, girls—blue-eyed, light-haired and all that. He tips the scales at 140. Mae Tinee.

NO, THEY'RE NOT CAMOUFLAGING THE GUNS—This is merely the bedding of the U. S. S. Oklahoma out for its periodical airing. That's the kind of a housekeeper Uncle Sam is. He Was a Good Deal in the Way Until a Way Was Found to Dispose of Him.

THE bell of the telephone on the stand beside Ruth Carrington's bed rang compellingly, and that lady, resentfully aroused from the first restful slumber of the night, stretched forth an unwilling hand and removed the receiver from its hook. As she did so a distant clock struck 12.

"Hello! That you, Ruth? This is Jerry! Sorry to call you up so late," continued Capt. Fitzgerald, "but you'll forgive me when you hear what I've got to say. The truth is," he cleared his throat, "I expect—I hope—that is," he brought out at last—"I'm going to be married tomorrow morning—no, this morning. It's this morning now, isn't it?"

He laughed without gaiety. His hearer frowned. A suspicion that the captain had been dining or supping unwisely died in the moment of its birth. Jerry was not that sort.

"Married! This morning? Jerry Fitzgerald, what are you talking about?" Ruth's tone was almost querulous. She felt aggrieved. "Of course you're joking," she added.

"Joking? Not a bit of it!"

The voice at the other end of the line was gaining assurance, was even taking on a familiar note of masculine complacency.

"It's awfully sudden," Jerry conceded, "and there are a million things to do, so I'm a bit rattled, but there's no nonsense about it. It's the real thing, all right. That is, I hope it's going to be." The speaker stopped. He had become conscious of a lack of response. "Are you listening?" he added anxiously.

"Of course I'm listening, but you're taking my breath away. However, go on."

"Well, you see, Mary came to New York unexpectedly this morning."

"What Mary?"

"Why, Mary Chase, of course. The woman I'm going to marry."

"O!"

Miss Carrington, who for a little matter of ten years had been one of Fitzgerald's best friends, yet who was now hearing of his Mary for the first time, wore a slightly dazed expression. But she slowly nodded to the unresponsive telephone. Mary accounted for lights and shades in the captain's aura which of late had puzzled her.

"Yes?" she prompted.

"As I was saying, Mary came up to New York unexpectedly—you know she lives in North Carolina—and of course when she wrote me that she would be here for a few days of shopping I got leave and came on from the post."

"Of course."

"Well, when I got here I found that her Aunt Josephine was with her——"

"That must have been a blow."

"I persuaded Mary that as long as we were all on the spot, she and I might as well trot to some sacred edifice and be married without delay. Besides, in that way we would be escaping the fuss of a big wedding down home. It isn't as if Mary had a family, you know. There's only aunty!"

For some reason the captain sighed at this point, and his hearer's suspicion that the climax of his narrative was yet to come grew stronger as she listened.

"Then it's all settled?" she asked, convinced that it was not.

"Why—well—yes—I—I guess so. We're to be married at 12 o'clock this morning at Dr. Cosgrove's church; and I've waked you from your innocent slumbers to tell you that we're counting on you to come to the wedding."

Ruth did some rapid thinking. She knew nothing about this unknown Mary, and she did not like in the least Jerry's unexplained reserve. Surely he could have told her long ago about his love affair—or could he? She would find out.

"How long have you known Miss Chase?" she asked.

"Mrs. Chase," corrected the captain. "She's a widow. In the army, too, you know; so we've got a lot of mutual friends. But I've only known her six months—six months, one week, and four days, to be exact," he added fatuously. And now his tone was that of the yearning lover.

"I see." Ruth's voice was forgiving; it was also increasingly cordial as she went on.

"I'd drop most things to be at your wedding, Jerry. I'm sure you know that. But, as it happens, every hour of tomorrow morning is filled with engagements, and I can't get out of them as late as this. I have a committee meeting here at 10, another uptown at half-past 11, and I'm giving a luncheon afterward at the Colonial club. I'm most awfully sorry. If you had given me time to turn 'round——"

"But say—hold on—see here, Ruth! You've got to come! You've just got to!" Fitzgerald's voice was suddenly desperate.

His hearer, who was thinking with longing of her pillows, and indeed was already relaxing into them, straightened under it. "What do you mean?" she demanded.

The captain's answer was very brief, but also very sad. "Mary won't marry me," he announced simply, "unless you make her."

Miss Carrington gazed at the telephone with eyes that goggled. Then a dim light came to her.

"Do you mean that I am to propose for you?" she inquired coldly.

"Great Scott, no! I've proposed to her myself, dozens of times."

"Won't she take you?"

"Yes—I mean—that is——"

"I suppose what you are trying to tell me is that aunty is objecting," Ruth suggested wearily, "and that you need an extra vote to carry the measure. Is that it?"

Jerry's response subtly suggested that the tension of his nerves was tightening. "Something like that," he muttered. "But it isn't aunty. Aunty's all right. She's strong for me."

"Then who is objecting?"

"Well, if you must know—it's Harry!"

Both voices now held definite suggestions of strain.

"Who is Harry?" Ruth tersely demanded.

There was an instant of silence. Then, "Why—er—Harry is—is—the stumbling block," said the captain with a deprecating and unmirthful laugh.

Miss Carrington hung up the receiver. "Good-night," she said as she did so. Ten minutes passed before Fitzgerald could get the connection again. When it was made it was at once clear that he was chastened and sufficiently humbled.

"Listen one minute, Ruth," he begged. "I know I'm acting like a lunatic. I feel like one. But I can't explain over the telephone. It's such an—an impossible situation. I'll tell you the whole yarn tomorrow—or, rather, you'll catch on as soon as you talk to Mary. All I can say now is that I'm up against it good and hard, and I believe you are the only person on earth who can help me. Mary knows all about you and admires you immensely. What you say will count a lot with her. Meantime here's a point that may count with you. If I don't get Mary this time I'm convinced that I never will get her. The happiness of my life is at stake. Now will you help me, or won't you? I'll take your answer as final."

"O, well, of course, if you put it like that——" Ruth checked the resigned note. "Tell me exactly what you want me to do," she ended more buoyantly.

"First of all, I want you to have a talk with Mary and brace her up. Then I want you to stand by till the wedding is over so that she can't back out. Be her bridesmaid—or my best man, whichever you prefer," he added jubilantly, sure that his victory was won. "You see, there won't be any one at the wedding but you and aunty. Mary has no intimates in New York, and it just happens that none of my army pals is here now. It's all so sudden. I only suggested it at dinner tonight."

His hearer made a swift decision. The situation might be amusing to an onlooker, but evidently it was serious for Jerry; therefore it should be regarded seriously by Jerry's friend. She recalled also that Jerry was as willing to be used by, as to use, his friends. If at present she happened to be the important link in the human chain he was counting on to pull him out of some hole, she must prove equal to the strain on that chain.

"It's settled," she promised. "I will be at Dr. Cosgrove's church at 12."

"That's ripping of you, Ruth. I won't forget it in a hurry. Allow plenty of time, please, for aunty is giving us a wedding breakfast for four at 1 o'clock—if the wedding comes off," he added darkly.

"But——"

"Don't flinch. Do the job thoroughly. We're leaving town at 3—if we're married, I mean—so you'll have us off your hands after that—if everything goes all right," he added apprehensively.

"There seem to be a lot of 'ifs' in your program," Ruth could not help saying.

His reply was a kind of groan. "Nothing but 'ifs,'" he admitted, "and every 'if' is Harry! Good-night."

"Good-night."

Ruth spoke rather faintly. Her day, her full, valuable day, was like a ship struck by a torpedo. She replaced the receiver on its hook, extinguished the electric light at the head of her bed and composed herself for slumber. She resolutely refused to contemplate the ruins of her day, though she seemed to feel their physical weight upon her. Instead, she was determined to get what sleep she could before the summons that would arouse her at 7 o'clock. She had an abysmal certainty that she was in for a strenuous morning. But despite her effort to banish all thought of the interview just ended, she found herself thinking of Harry. Who was Harry? And what had Harry to do with the unexplained tangle of Jerry's matrimonial affair? She was still puzzling over Harry when she fell asleep.

A fuller intimation of the nature of the obligation she had taken upon herself came while she was rushing through a heavy mail with her secretary at half after 9 o'clock in the morning. The dictation of her fifth letter was interrupted by the ringing of the telephone bell on her desk, followed by the anxious voice of Fitzgerald.

"Ruth," he began urgently, "will you drop everything and meet me at the Ritz in ten minutes?"

Miss Carrington groaned. "It's impossible!" she almost wailed. "I haven't called off the 10 o'clock meeting here and some of the committee members must be on their way now. I simply can't stop them."

Fitzgerald's voice held the calm of despair.

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

A CAT ASKS FOR HELP AND GETS IT.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

THE Teenie Weenies loved to play ball and almost every afternoon the little folks gathered beneath a big bush, not far from the shoe house, to play their favorite game. Their tiny gloves were made out of frog skin and stuffed with caterpillar fur. The bats were made out of matches and the ball was finely wound with woven spider web and covered with lizard hide.

All the little men were fine ball players except the General and the Policeman, who were much too fat to move rapidly. Gogo was an expert catcher and the heavy hitter on the club. He could hit the ball a great distance, and once he knocked it 672 (Teenie Weenie) feet, which is about 14 feet in our measurement. Paddy Pinn played first base, and it was almost impossible to throw past him on account of his great reach.

One afternoon the little folks were having a very exciting game when they were startled to see a big cat poke his head under the bush and walk out among them.

" Excuse me for interrupting your game," said the cat, " but you see I'm in a great deal of trouble and I most urgently need assistance."

The Teenie Weenies could tell the cat was very well educated and the General put on his very best manners.

" Pray, madam, tell us your wants and we will be very glad to assist you providing it is within our power," remarked the General.

" Your welcome and polished manner stamps you at once as a gentleman, and I'm going to ask a favor of you in spite of the fact that I am a total stranger to you," said the cat.

" We are at your commands, madam," said the General, flushing a cherry red.

" Well," began the cat, " I'm a neighbor of yours, not a near neighbor, however. I live some little distance from your village, but I had a caller a few nights ago who told me about you all. He spoke very highly of you and I decided to come over and ask a little favor."

" Please go on, madam," cried the General. " We shall be glad to help you."

" The little girl to whom I belong took it into her pretty head not long ago to tie this ribbon and bell around my neck. It will be quite unnecessary to tell you I haven't caught a mouse since it was put on. The mice hear me and I never get near enough to tell them what I think about them for not letting me catch them."

" A very sad state of affairs, very sad, indeed," sighed the General.

" Well, the favor I'd ask is that you should cut this ribbon from my neck," said the cat smiling pleasantly at the General.

" Your wishes shall be obeyed, madam," blushed the General, and he ordered the Cook to bring out one of the sharp knives from the kitchen.

The Cook soon produced the knife and in a few seconds the little fellow cut the ribbon from the cat's neck.

" O, joy!" exclaimed the cat as the bell fell to the ground. " Now I can dine on mice this evening, and, my friends, I thank you a thousand times for your timely assistance."

" The pleasure is all ours," answered the General. " And we shall be happy to cut bells from your fair neck as fast as they can be put on."

" O, you flatterer!" and the cat almost blushed as she disappeared under the rose bush.

" A very charming lady," remarked the General as the cat vanished.

" Yes, rather," answered the Lady of Fashion, " although she is a bit cattish."

"If you don't come, I guess it's all off," he predicted.

"Jerry, what do you mean?"

"O, it's the same old story. It's Harry again!"

"What is Harry doing?"

"Butting in—as usual."

"And Mary has changed her mind?"

"Yes. She pretends it's because the wedding is too sudden. But it's Harry." He ground his teeth. "It's always Harry," he finished acidly.

"Perhaps it is too sudden. Perhaps Mary is right."

Ruth spoke absently, her eyes returning to the mound of letters on her desk. She could do all sorts of things in the time that wedding would take, she calculated ruefully.

"But listen, Ruth," urged her friend. "It isn't sudden in one way. We've been discussing it for six months—and the whole time Mary's only objection has been Harry. If you would talk to her for a few minutes you could make her look at the thing straight. I'm sure of that. So I've made her promise to listen to you if you run up now. I'd come down and get you, but that would take time. So jump into a taxi——"

Miss Carrington ruthlessly interrupted him. "Are you seriously proposing that I go up to the Ritz and persuade an unwilling lady to marry you this morning?" she demanded. "Because, really, Jerry, if you are——"

Fitzgerald disregarded all but what he considered the important word in her speech. "She's not unwilling," he explained patiently. "She's entirely willing. She loves me, Ruth. She'll tell you so. And aunty approves of me. But there's Harry—darn him," he added vindictively. "Forgive me, but I'm all on edge."

Miss Carrington laid down the receiver and turned a stony face upon her secretary. That individual returned the look with eyes alight with womanly sympathy. She did not know what had been said, but she realized that her employer was seriously disturbed. The holder of the telephone instrument rattled wildly. Through the discarded receiver came strange, futile sounds—the ghosts of the captain's anxious speech. Ruth sighed and returned the receiver to her ear.

"So you won't go back on me," she heard in imploring accents. "You'll talk to her? You'll see me through, won't you? Ruth, for heaven's sake, stand by!"

"All right. I'll be there in fifteen or twenty minutes."

Ruth crossed the room in silence and rang for her maid. Then, with a last poignant look at her unopened letters, she addressed the sympathetic secretary:

"First call a taxicab. Let the committee come at 10 o'clock, just the same. Ask Miss Beardslee to take the chair. Telephone Harriet Van Dorn that I can't see her till tomorrow morning at 11. Notify the Red Cross committee that I can't be with them. Telephone to Mr. Ransome that I will try to look over the hospital plans if he brings them at 4 this afternoon."

It was almost 10 o'clock when she reached the Ritz. The captain was waiting for her in the hotel lobby, and after a glance at him she forgot her broken engagements. He was 30, but today he looked 40.

He rushed her along an upper corridor of the hotel and rang the doorbell of a private suite. The door was opened by a colored maid, who led the guests into a small sitting room and left them there while she carried the news of their arrival to the captain's fiancée. As she disappeared, Fitzgerald started for the outer door. Ruth caught his arm.

"Where are you going?" she demanded suspiciously.

He put his finger on his lips. "I want you to talk to Mary alone," he whispered.

Her first thought was that Mrs. Chase looked absurdly like a very young girl. Though Mary was really 23, she seemed no more than 19 or 20. There was something exquisitely fresh, virginal, and unworldly about her as she came forward with a shy smile and with both hands outheld to the caller.

The latter's next impression was that her hostess was not only unhappy but frightened. The discovery made her feel unexpectedly maternal. She was fifteen years older than this alarmed infant that Jerry was trying to coerce into marriage. If he expected her to help him to browbeat a child into going against her inclinations—— The next instant the room was full of pleasant sounds and movements as the two women exchanged greetings and compliments and settled down side by side on a hospitable davenport.

Ruth's compunction over her errand grew, and the feeling was so strong that she acted upon it in immediate response to the first words of her hostess after the two were seated. Mary Chase leaned forward and put a gentle hand on her visitor's knee.

"Jerry said you were coming to talk to me," she began, in a voice that held alluring southern modulations, "and it's very kind of you. But, dear Miss Carrington, you won't be hurt, will you, if I tell you at once that I've made up my mind not to be married today." Her soft lips set. "I've made it up firmly," she added, "and—and—irrevocably."

The older woman gave a friendly touch to the hand that lay on her knee.

"That saves us both some trouble," she said comfortably, and with obvious relief. "I loathe giving advice ever, and most of all I loathe giving it when I'm not sure myself that it's good. So we will regard the matter as settled and we'll feverishly cultivate each other's acquaintance for a few minutes, until I must rush back to my work!"

Mrs. Chase looked startled. The corners of her charming mouth drooped like those of a hurt child. "I suppose you think I'm frightfully changeable," she muttered.

"I don't think anything of the sort," Ruth said serenely. "I don't know enough about the matter to form any opinion, except that you and Jerry are both very fortunate in having found each other," she added more formally.

"You don't think that, do you?" Mrs. Chase asked eagerly.

"Of course I do."

Mary sobered and the light died out of her eyes. "But you think I ought to wait, too, don't you?" she added slowly.

"O, I wouldn't say that. That's a point for you and Jerry to decide—and your aunt," Miss Carrington added tardily. "You see, as I've said before, I don't understand the circumstances. But it's plain enough that you're in love," she added smilingly.

"In love——" The girl repeated the words dreamily. "I should say I am!" Her voice dropped to a whisper. "I'm so much in love," she confessed, "that I'm afraid every one who looks at me will see it!"

Miss Carrington met the now shining eyes and nodded sympathetically. "If you look like that," she corroborated, "every one will."

"The other returned her smile and threw back her head with a sudden pride. "But I don't care," she declared, with exultation. "I don't care who knows it. No one could help loving Jerry."

Again her mood changed. "I've tried," she added. "O, how I've tried! And I'm not to blame because I've failed, am I?" She fired the question as if it were a bullet.

The visitor stared at her. "But why—" she began, then checked herself and fell back on the safety of a cheerful commonplace. "No outsider can express an opinion of any value in such a matter," she pronounced.

"O, but you're not an outsider!" The voice of her hostess dripped horror at the suggestion. "Jerry says you're the best woman friend he ever had—and I've read columns and columns about your wonderful work in France."

Miss Carrington laughed and rose to her feet. "It was high time we met," she said. "And I can't forgive Jerry for not giving me the pleasure sooner. But you will forgive me if I run away now, won't you? I'll catch my committee in full cry if I go home at once. And perhaps I can persuade you and your aunt and Jerry to dine with me tomorrow night?"

Mary Chase put out a charming hand and tentatively grasped a button of the caller's coat. It was the gesture of a small child, and her expression as she looked up into her guest's eyes oddly matched it. "But we may not be here," she suggested, droopingly. "We'll be on our honeymoon—if we're married."

"But you said—I thought——" Ruth stared in bewilderment. The other slowly whirled the button round, to the imminent undoing of its fastening.

"I wish you would advise me," she murmured.

"Dear child, how can I?"

"You know Jerry."

The older woman laughed. A sense of relief welled up in her. "O, if Jerry's the uncertain quantity, I can vouch for Jerry," she jested. "He's an officer and a gentleman—and one of the salt of the earth. You haven't been listening to any one's gossip without giving Jerry a chance to defend himself, have you?"

"No, O, no!" Mary's loyalty was as evident as her horror at the suggestion.

Ruth Carrington shrugged her shoulders. "To an intelligent spinster," she murmured, "it all seems very simple."

Her hostess had been staring at a spot on the rug at her feet. Now she raised her head with a gesture of decision. "It is," she said abruptly. "I've changed my mind."

"O." The caller was slightly dazed.

"So we're going straight out to get my clothes. I know you will help me, as time is so short. Sit down again. I won't keep you waiting a second."

The visitor sat down limply, and gazed after the figure of her hostess as she disappeared into the next room. Apparently she had accomplished her mission. She wondered how and why she had done it. Through the door, left ajar, she heard Mary Chase's quick instructions to her maid, an exclamation of delight from that person, Mary's hurried responses to another, older voice.

"Yes, I've changed my mind. Yes, I have. Yes, it's final, this time. Please don't bother about that now. Hannah, that isn't the dress I want. My land, will you stop being excited long enough to button my shoes? No, aunty, not that one—the gray one. I don't know. Yes, I think so. Yes, of course she will. Yes, she did. Aunty, if you ask me one more question, I shall shriek!"

Miss Carrington coughed restlessly. A sudden silence fell upon the next room. Eight minutes later Mary reappeared gloved and hatted, looking 17, and wholly lovely, and wearing a nervous smile. In the hall the captain was waiting for them—a wilted figure that burst into bloom as they approached him.

"You persuaded her!" he cried to Ruth. "I knew you would. Bless you! Bless you!"

His fiancée broke in upon the dry retort that pressed against Miss Carrington's lips. "You may put us into a taxicab, Jerry," she said, "and that's the last I want to see of you till—till 12 o'clock." She blushed as the captain gazed at her adoringly. "I've got to put all my mind on getting my clothes," she added firmly, "and so has Miss Carrington."

Two hours later Ruth was back in the sitting room, waiting for the bride to dress and regardful of Jerry's last injunction, hissed into her ear, "For heaven's sake, don't leave her until you get her to the church!"

Incidentally she met "aunty," an exquisite gentlewoman, in gray silk and fine old lace, whose venerable face wore rapidly alternating expressions of apprehension and relief. They reached the parsonage almost half an hour late, and Ruth was touched by the pathetic relief of a haggard Jerry, who met them at the door.

Falling into place beside "aunty," and immediately behind the bride and groom, Miss Carrington followed the beautiful service with her usual sympathy. And now, for the first time, she remembered that she was losing Jerry, for whom she had such a deep and genuine liking. Yes, she would miss him; and when one was nearing 40 new friends were not lightly made.

She was aroused from this mournful reverie by the discovery that the ceremony was over and that Jerry was kissing his bride and was following the caress with like attention to "aunty" and herself. Kissing, for the time, seemed quite indiscriminate. When it had ceased, she followed the little party back into the rectory. There she was stealthily looking at her watch when she felt her shoulders caught in a hysterical clutch and looked down into the frightened face of the bride.

"I shouldn't have done it! O, I shouldn't have done it! Why did you let me? Why—why? It isn't fair to Harry!"

Miss Carrington was conscious of a slight chill. She had forgotten Harry. She had forgotten him absolutely. Now, here he was, whoever he was—and evidently he was very much to be reckoned with.

"Harry?" she repeated blankly. "Who is Harry?"

"My Harry! My husband! Harry Chase! O, Harry, Harry!"

The older woman's body experienced an impulse to sit down. She looked around for a chair, and, not seeing one, caught the bride's hand, with an instinctive desire for support.

"Why," she began uncertainly, "I thought you were a widow!"

"I am!" wailed the other. "But do you imagine that Harry doesn't know what I'm doing just because he's—he's dead! He does. He knows all about it. He warned me that he would."

"You see," the bride hurried on, "we were only married six weeks when Harry was killed in the Philippines. And he was so afraid I would marry again that—that—when he was dying he—he spoke of it. He—said—he'd—know it if I ever did. And now he will! O, Harry! Harry!"

She threw herself upon Miss Carrington's reluctant breast, and that lady patted her back with an absent hand. So this was what Jerry was "up against." She wished she had understood. She wished she had more time to think now. Through the arch leading into the next room she saw the broad, unconscious back of the bridegroom, bending over as he affixed his signature to some document. She motioned "aunty" to silence. She had no sympathy to give to the bride. At the moment she was conscious of but one emotion—an intense disinclination to have Jerry return and find his bride weeping over her first husband, in the arms of her new husband's best woman friend. Under the sharp spur of this feeling she spoke almost brusquely.

"Don't cry," she said. "You can't do that now. It isn't fair to Jerry. Here he comes. Brace up before he sees you."

She straightened the clinging figure, thrust it toward the window with its back to the room, and assailed the ears of "aunty" with gay prattle, intended to create the impression of a scene of pleasant excitement. Also, as the unconscious captain approached them, she stopped him and held him with frivolous words until his bride had wiped her eyes—without, however, removing from them a hurt look they invariably held as they rested on the wedding guest.

The little party made the journey back to the Ritz in a hired limousine, and here again Miss Carrington's ability to keep up a flow of easy chatter was severely tested. The captain gave her no help, for he was in a happy dream. The bride was calm, but pale and very silent, and "aunty's" attitude was merely one of watchful waiting. At the table in the big dining room, however, the four smiled at one another for the first time. Aunt Josephine, now the hostess of the occasion, made an effort to play her rôle fittingly. With the pouring of the champagne the scene grew almost bright. Fitzgerald had raised his glass with a gay toast to his "best man," when a cheerful voice interrupted him. A tall young person, carrying himself like a soldier and browned as if by a tropic sun, stood at their table with extended hand, smiling down upon the bride.

"Well, Mrs. Chase!" he cried buoyantly, "this is luck! Here I'm back from the Philippines this very day, and the friend I most want to see is the first friend I meet! That's almost too good to be true!"

Glancing at the new Mrs. Fitzgerald, Ruth perceived that she turned first white, then gray. The newcomer, it appeared, was a Lieut. Vance of the regular army, and he was so boyishly rejoiced over this meeting that Ruth's heart warmed to him, and even "aunty" was too charmed by him to observe the constrained manner of her niece. In a few words that made the situation clear, she invited him to join the party, and the lieutenant's face flashed into a flame of interest as he heard her. Impulsively he took young Mrs. Fitzgerald's hand between both his own.

"Then I'm the first friend outside of this charmed circle to wish you happiness!" he cried. "By Jove, that alone is worth coming home for!"

His pleasure was so sincere that his brother officer beamed on him, and even the white face of the bride took on a little color. The new arrival was too tactful to prolong his call. Within five minutes he exchanged addresses with the bridegroom, and with a final handshake all around firmly took himself off. His departure was followed by a moment of constraint, which the deepening silence of Mary suggested and underlined. Then the captain and Miss Carrington exerted themselves, and the talk at the table flowed on.

Under cover of a story told by the bridegroom, Ruth furtively studied Mary, who had not spoken since the departure of young Vance. Her pallor had deepened, and the black pupils of her violet eyes seemed to fill the iris. Jerry began to cast at her anxious sidelong glances. It was a relief to them all when the breakfast was over and they left the table. In the hotel lobby Miss Carrington, cherishing visions of an immediate escape, felt her arm again caught in a now familiar grasp.

"Please come upstairs for a moment," begged the bride. "I won't keep you long, but I must talk to you—I must!"

The older woman regarded her with disapproving eyes. All the sympathy she had was now given to Jerry. In response to the wouldn't want to burn up that money, and you wouldn't have to cover it, but every little bit helps, you know. You could pick up that thousand on the side and make your end just that much bigger."

"But you're all shot to pieces," objected Tug. "No club would give you a fight in your condition."

"Yes," said Smiley, "I've been sick. The doc says I've got to go out west somewhere—Arizona or New Mexico—and I haven't got the price. I can go away and train on the quiet, and there's some dope I can take that will stop this cough for the time being." Once more he barked hollowly. "I think I can get away with it," he concluded. "These club people ain't very wise."

"How much would you want?" asked Tug.

"Anything will suit me," said the Kid, humbly. "You are the champion, and you can write your own ticket. Make the winner's end as long as you like. All I want is carfare west and money for doctor's bills."

Tug's tough heart was touched by the miserable spectacle before him.

"If the club will stand it," he said, "I'll give you a match. But the winners' end will have to be 85 per cent."

"That's pretty long, ain't it?" pleaded the Kid. "If I rib up this mark to bet a thousanad on me you ought to consider that as something."

"Eighty-five per cent," said Tug firmly. "That or nothing, and this guy can bet or not, just as he likes."

"All right," said the Kid dispiritedly, "All right. You're the champion. I suppose I'm lucky to take a licking at any price. It'll be pretty soft for you, Tug. You won't have to train very hard for a sick man."

Tug smiled.

"I wouldn't train very hard for you, sick or well," was his graceful remark. "But, of course, with you the way you are—it'll be a saving, of course."

The Kid coughed sadly.

"All you'll need in the way of preparation will be a shave and a hair cut," said he. "It's pretty soft to be a champion."

"You shake the cough for a while if you can," advised the champion. "We mustn't make this look too raw."

"I'll stall through somehow," said the Kid.

A wek later the men met in the office of the Apollo club, and the articles were signed—two-thirds of the gate receipts, twenty-five rounds, the fighters' share to be split 85 and 15.

The Kid's angel appeared with $1,000 in good green bills, and all he asked was that the champion should give him odds of 7 to 5. Tug Riley was not a betting man, but he did not object to a sure thing, so he brought out his check book and wrote his check for $1,400.

"Put it through your bank," said he to the newspaper man who was selected as the stakeholder, "collect the money, and post it with the other."

While the negotiations were pending Kid Smiley sat doubled up at one end of the table, offering no suggestions, making no objections, and agreeing to everything by nodding his head.

"All I want is the chace to fight," he said to the club management. "I ain't looking for a shade anywhere."

The period of training was a short one, the champion insisting upon an early date. He felt that he was going into the petty larceny business, and it might be just as well to waste as little time upon it as possible.

Kid Smiley retired to a country roadhouse to do his training and the champion stayed in town, boxing at a gymnasium in the afternoon and doing his road work along the local Rialto in the evening. Wise ones who watched him in his meager preparation felt certain that he was holding his opponent "too cheap," and they pointed out that after the champion had sparred a few rounds he began to puff heavily. A few of them took it upon themselves to warn Riley.

"I know my business," he said. "One punch for this fellow."

A day or so before the fight the champion had a chat with the manager of the boxing club, a cross eyed man named McCloskey.

"How's the Kid getting along with his cough?" asked Tug. "He had a little cold or something the last time I saw him."

"Cough!" said McCloskey. "He ain't had no cough. Where do you get that stuff about him having a cold?"

"So he did get away with the stall?" thought Tug; but aloud he remarked that he hoped the Kid would be in good shape.

"Well, you'll have your hope," said McCloskey grimly. "Smiley has been around here ever since he quit you, and if he's been sick a day in the last six months I don't know where you'd go to find a well man."

"You think he's right, do you?" asked Tug carelessly.

"Right?" said McCloskey. "He's as right as a dictionary!"

Tug grinned at McCloskey's back as the manager departed.

"No wonder," reflected the champion, "that fighters frame up all sorts of things with the likes of this fellow running fight clubs!"

Tug attached no significance whatever to McCloskey's statement, save that it went to lower his opinion of the manager's intelligence. Tug had made it the rule of his life to believe nothing which he had not seen. He had seen Kid Smiley when that unfortunate was coughing like a mogul engine on a 3 per cent grade, and seeing was believing with the champion every time. Not the shadow of a doubt disturbed his serene confidence. One punch, and it would be over.

A roaring welcome greeted the middleweight champion of the world as he climbed through the ropes and offered his hand to Kid Smiley, who had preceded him by several minutes. The Kid rose from his chair, muffled from neck to ankle in a heavy bath robe.

"H'are you, Kid?" said the champion casually.

"Hody, Tug?" said Kid Smiley.

Neither expected an answer to his question. Neither gave one, and the champion barely glanced into the face of his opponent. The crowd cheered again at this expression of professional courtesy.

The preliminaries proceeded with an immense amount of pomp, which is usually the case when a champion enters the ring to defend his title.

New gloves were introduced and donned under twofold inspection. The men were introduced to those who needed no introductiono, and the champion drew another burst of applause by dropping his robe and standing forth, stripped for action, a twisted flag about his waist.

"Take off your blanket, Kid," whispered the referee, as he led the challenger toward the center of the ring.

"Not yet," said Smiley. "I don't want this fellow to get a flash at me until the bell rings."

The Kid was still wearing his bathrobe when the referee began reeling off the customary instruction. Though the fighters were near enough to touch hands, neither looked at the other or at the referee. It was their way of showing that they had been there many times before, and knew the game thoroughly. If the principles seemed bored, their lack of interest was more than made up by the breathless pose and attention of the crowding seconds, towel swingers, and limelight hunters, who hung on every syllable in an attempt to seem indispensable and vastly important.

"I guess that's all," said the referee at last.

Immediately there was a scattering of the smaller fry, a whisking of stools from the corners, and the three principals were left alone in the ring. In a hoarse, barking monotone the referee stated the terms and conditions of the match, while the fighters edged back toward their corners, waiting for the bell.

Just as the club official expended the last of his breath in a command to "Let 'er go!" Kid Smiley twitched off his bath robe and tossed it behind him through the ropes. Then the bell rang.

The champion of the world, trotting toward the center of the ring, his hands hanging at his sides, all but paused in his battle stride. Was this the sick man he was to beat in a punch—this trim, flat muscled, brown skinned individual, who came dancing so confidently to the scratch? Could this be the same coughing wreck of a fighter whom he was to defeat for 85 per cent of the purse and a side bet of $2,400?

Tug Riley was as game a man as need be, but the sight of Kid Smiley, stripped to fight, sent a cold chill down the champion's spine. No man ever reached a championship without the ability to think quickly and see clearly. Tug saw it all in a twinkling. He had been tricked into a bad match, and he knew it. Worse than that, he had come unprepared to "go the route."

The Kid left his former employer no time in which to curse his folly and lack of training. Smiley had played for the shock to follow the surprise. He saw the dazed look in Tug's eyes and attacked instantly without preliminary sparring. Two lightning lefts shot out for the head, up came the champion's guard, and in went Smiley with a sledgehammer right to the stomach. Tug tumbled into a clinch and held on hard.

"What is this?" he mumbled. "The double cross?"

"You'll mighty soon find out what it is," whispered the Kid. "I've got over my cough. Maybe you've noticed it?"

"Br-reak!" bellowed the referee.

The Kid broke at the word, but as he slipped out of the clinch he slashed an uppercut home, and the champion's head snapped back as if his neck had been a hinge. Half the spectators roared with delight. The other half, having bet two to one on the champion of the world, leaned back comfortably and remarked that the game was young yet.

Of course Tug lost his temper and began rushing, determined to annihilate Smiley with a single blow. That was exactly what the Kid thought that he would do, and that was where the weeks of sparring experience stood him in good stead.

Tug might as well have been rushing a sunbeam. The younger man ducked, sidestepped, jerked his head out of danger or stepped inside the wild swings; and every time the champion missed he received a shower of cutting, stinging jabs in the face.

Smiley was doubly armed. He knew every trick in the champion's repertoire, while the champion, to all intents and purposes, was boxing with a total stranger—a stranger who was a master of defensive tactics and a swarm of hornets in attack.

Not all the Kid's blows were light ones. He had a trick of dropping his knees together and lifting in his entire weight behind the glove; and when he did that Tug grunted aloud.

"If I could hit," said the challenger during the second round, "I'd be quite a fighter, eh? But I can't hit hard enough to break a clay pipe."

Then he loosened three of Tug's front teeth with a jab which did not travel more than twelve inches.

It was John L. Sullivan and Jim Corbett all over again—blind rage, bull strength, and shortness of breath on one side; sarcastic coolness, science, and tantalizing attack on the other. Tug put his head down and charged like a Sonora bull, swinging his pile driver right hand for general results and disturbing nothing but the smoke laden atmosphere.

"You couldn't hit me with a handful of birdshot," sneered the Kid. "Say, Tug, do you remember you paid me $12 a week? And made me eat ham and eggs three times a day? Well, here's some ham and eggs for you. And a little claret—from the nose."

Throughout the fight the Kid kept up his annoying monologue. In the fourth round he developed a great curiosity about the champion's bank balance.

"You won't have so much money, now, old horse. Your end tonight won't make up for the fourteen hundred you bet on the side. I suppose you didn't know that thousand was my money, did you?"

And Tug could only grit his teeth and plow in, chasing shadows. Every rush and every swing which failed to find its mark drew heavily upon his slender store of endurance. At the end of the fifth round the champion of the world was leg weary, arm weary, and breathing heavily through puffed nostrils. His face was a sorry sight.

"Now, then," said the Kid as the sixth round opened, "I've got you right where I want you. Fifteen per cent to the loser, Tug. That's what you get for trying to hog everything from a poor sick guy. Fifteen per cent. There's a good house here tonight, too. You won't lose more than 500 bucks, Tug—and the championship. It might have been worse. You might have been worse. You might have run up a lot of training expenses. But you don't have to train for a sick guy, do you?"

This monologue was punctuated with punches—left jabs for commas and heavy right handers for question marks and exclamation points.

Once more the champion plunged forward, swinging his right hand like a scythe. It was a good right hand—it had won all his fights, but that was because he had never failed to hit his man with it. The best right hand in the world cannot disturb a shadow.

"Well, I guess this will be about all," said the Kid, who had been watching the champion like a hawk. "I want to go and count up the house and see how much 85 per cent comes to. Fight, you big tramp, because I'm coming after you now! No more monkey business."

Those at the ringside could not hear the words, but they saw the transformation. The careless sneer left Smiley's lips, the fun went out of his eyes, and the dancing went out of his feet. Tug was practically helpless. There was now nothing to fear from his right hand. The last shot in the locker had been fired. In a flash Kid Smiley, the boxer, became a fighting man, bent on a knockout.

A left uppercut straightened the champion and drew his guard upward, and, when elbows were clear of the stomach, Kid Smiley, with the cool deliberation of a man punching a sandbag, stepped in and sent the right fist crashing under the heart. Riley's gloves dropped to his sides, his head rocked, his knees knocked together, and his feet shuffled uncertainly on the canvas. With the last blind instinct of the fighting brute the champion of the world remained upright, even after his defense was gone.

Kid Smiley looked at the referee.

"I ain't stuck on this," he said, "but I suppose, as he's a champion, he'll have to be knocked out or he'll say you stopped the fight when he had a chance."

The referee nodded.

"Clean up, quick!" he said.

"Quick she is!" said Smiley.

Tug Riley, his battered nose pressed against the canvas floor of the ring, remained a champion of the world only so long as it took the referee to count ten seconds. He never twitched a muscle during the operation, for the Kid's last punch had been a merciful one.

The new middleweight champion sat in his dressing room, dangling his long legs from the rubbing table. There was not a mark on his face and not a bruise on his body; and he received the congratulations of the newspaper reporters calmly.

"What does he say?" asked Smiley. "What's his excuse?"

"He says he wasn't in condition and wants another match."

"Not in condition, hey?" sneered the new champion. "Does he expect to get by with that squeal?"

"He says you bunked him," remarked one brave spirit.

"You go back and tell Riley," he commanded, "that a match well made is half won. I may be a fighter and, again, I may not; but leave it to him if I ain't a bird of a matchmaker!"

The message was delivered, and, though all this happened fifteen years ago, Riley has not laughed at it yet.

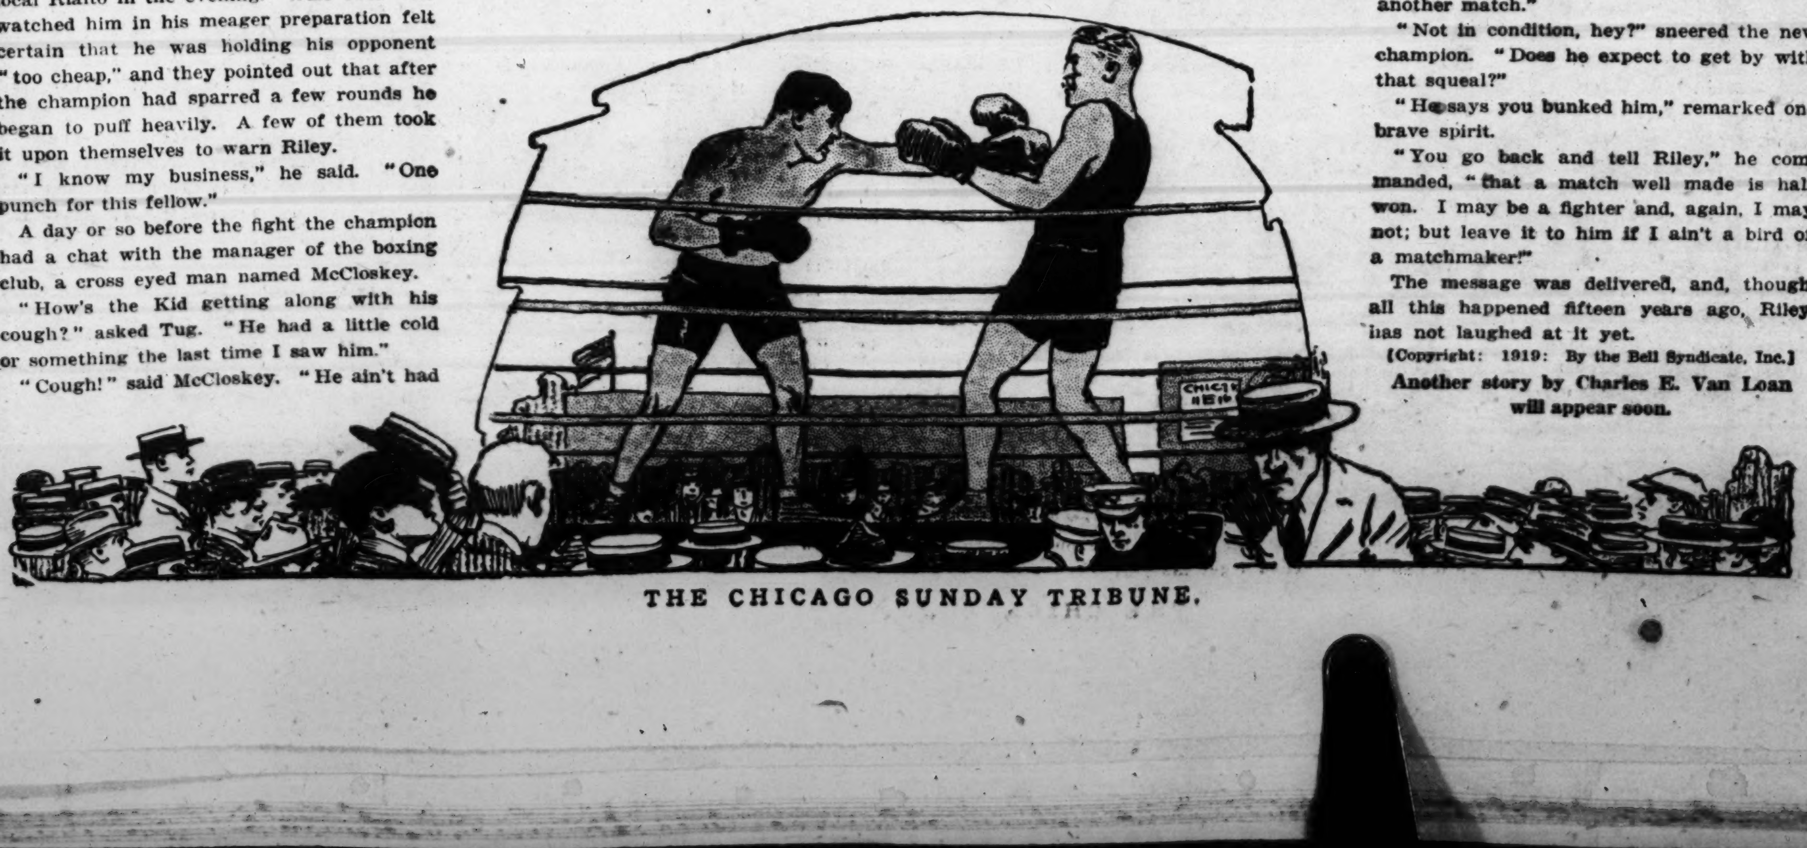
Another story by Charles E. Van Loan will appear soon.



bride's plea, however, she nodded, and followed her into the elevator. There Mary must have given "aunty" and the groom a signal, for when the apartment was reached they silently proceeded down the hall. Mrs. Fitzgerald led the way into her private sitting room, and, after motioning her guest to a chair, dropped into another, and, bending forward, rested her elbows on her knees, cupped her chin in her hands, and stared at the floor.

Miss Carrington studied her in depressed silence. Later she intended to suggest a dose of bromide. At present perfect quiet seemed the best treatment for an obvious case of nerves. Her sympathy for Jerry now amounted to a physical ache. She became aware that her hostess was talking in a queer, flat voice.

"Lieut. Vance was Harry's best friend," she said, slowly, "Harry's very best friend. He was his classmate and chum, at the Point and in the Philippines."

Miss Carrington made some cheerful and matter of fact response. She stood ready to meet any opening for a dose of common sense that might present itself. Thus far, clearly, none had.

"Harry sent him," added the bride dully. She had straightened and was now staring at the opposite wall as if to read some hidden writing there. She repeated the words in a whisper. The visitor moved impatiently.

"My dear," she said firmly, "you will forgive me, I hope, but I must say that I've never listened to such nonsense in my life!"

"Nonsense!" The word brought a spark into the violet eyes. "You wouldn't think it was nonsense if you knew Harry," Mary went on quietly. "But you don't understand. You see, we were awfully in love—and awfully young—I was only 18—and—and awfully happy. So, when he had to go—so soon—all he seemed to think about was that I might marry again. He said he'd know when I did—and he said I'd know that he knew. He said I'd have a sign. And he's taken this way to give it to me. I knew it would come. I've been waiting for it. That's why I was—afraid. Now it's here. He has sent his best friend clear across the world to face me, within an hour of my marriage—and you call it nonsense! No wonder I told Jerry from the first that I never, never could be married. I was afraid I'd be haunted all my life—and—and—now I'm going to be!"

"May I call you Mary?" asked Miss Carrington unexpectedly.

"If you only would! Please do!"

"Thank you. Then, Mary dear, I want to talk to you very frankly—the way your mother would, or an older sister would, if either could be with you now. First of all, let me say that I'm not going to bring up any of the arguments I might offer to prove that Harry, wherever he is or is not, doesn't know what is happening on this earth. Possibly he does; possibly he sees us together this minute. Possibly he is telling me what to say to you. I hope he is!" she added devoutly. "Anyway, for the moment, we will assume that he knows all about us."

"Y-e-s," agreed the bride.

"Assuming, then, that he does know," continued the visitor, speaking carefully, as if to a child, "I want you to open your mind wide, and consider exactly what has happened."

"I dare not! I'm afraid!" gasped the bride

"On the contrary, you can and you must—for there is such tremendous comfort in it."

"Comfort?" The violet eyes stared at her in bewilderment.

"Yes," repeated the other firmly, "comfort. For what does Harry do?" She caught the eyes and held them while she finished with slow significance. "He sends his best friend clear across the world, as you say, to be the first person to wish you happiness!"

Under the dawning wonder, the rapture of relief in the violet eyes, her own worldly eyes almost wavered.

"Don't you see?" she added gently.

"O, if I could believe that! The exclamation was almost a prayer.

"Isn't it an easier thing to believe than that the man who loved you should reach back into this world to torture you? Isn't it easy to believe that Harry, knowing the false value you were putting now on his last unthinking words, had sent you a message to be happy?"

"Yes, O, yes! And he was always like that, too. He often said things he didn't mean; and then he was so sorry afterward, and did everything he could to show it! O, I believe you're right! I know you're right. It's Harry all over. It's exactly what Harry would do!"

"Let us say," corrected Miss Carrington, "that it is exactly what Harry has done. Isn't that better?"

"Yes—yes. He wasn't cruel. He was never cruel. It was only that he loved me so much he couldn't bear to have me even look at any one else." She caught the other woman's hands. "How can I thank you?" she asked. "I might not have understood alone. I'm sure I shouldn't. And Jerry, who is so sweet and understanding about everything else, never understood Harry. Once he said"—her eyes widened at the memory—"once he said he thought Harry was acting like—like an infernal cad!"

Miss Carrington laughed irrepressibly; then rose. "I'm going," she said briskly. "But, there's just one bit of advice I'd like to give you before I say good-by. May I?"

"Please do—you angel!" The bride, standing before her, was clinging to a button.

"It's this: Forget Harry," she said tersely.

"O—you don't mean that!"

"I mean every word of it. The past, with Harry, is over. Your new life with Jerry has begun. It isn't fair to yourself or to Jerry to take even the memory of another man into it. And you want to play the game, don't you?"

"You know I do."

"And to be faithful to him?"

"Why, Miss Car——"

"The unfaithfulness of memory is almost as bad as any other kind. No living husband can be happy who is held up against the background of a dead paragon."

"Harry wasn't a paragon," said Harry's widow, hastening to defend him from this grave charge.

"So much the better," announced her visitor. "Now, tell me, are you going to take my advice? Will you promise me to do it?"

"Yes." The bride's fluffy yellow head went up. Her eyes, with their new light, looked steadily and trustfully into Ruth's. "You see," she said slowly, "you're absolutely right, and I know it! I never was so sure of anything in my life. I shall never doubt it."

THE HEIR by Oney Fred Sweet

He Took for Granted the Fact That He Was an Inland Empire Prince.

THE doctor had not been called by telephone. He had not driven out over the roads with an automobile. But he had not minded the absence of either of these conveniences. He was young and the country was young. His team had known how to find their way along the uncertain trails at midnight. It had been a tough trip, but he had made it. Shielded for the time from exposure, the doctor, sitting in the farm house living room, occasionally rubbed his nose in thought, and Ed Shilinski, nervous with anxiety, presumed that the physician must be pondering over "the case."

"Renting the place here?" asked the professional man finally.

Shilinski started. For hours he had had no thoughts but what were centered within the four walls of the adjoining room.

"Yes," he answered in broken English. "I cannot hope to buy now. The land is $10 an acre. Everything is all right, is it, doctor?"

"Doing nicely. I think you better get more oil for the lamp. It is getting low. We will probably need it until morning. Ten dollars an acre, eh? Rather bleak and lonesome out here. I came through a lot of wet, low places."

"I may not be able to pay you just now for calling you," said Shilinski, clearing his throat. "I may have to wait until another crop, but I know you will do your best."

"Don't you worry one minute about pay, Ed."

"We will always be here," Shilinski assured. "When Lena and I were on the boat and we had that terrible seasickness we said we would never go back to the old country. And when ge got out here we said, 'Here we stick. We have our strong arms, we will work hard, we will save, we will stay.'"

"Neighbors been leaving?"

"Most of them, after the crops this summer. They went back east again or they went on west. Some of them didn't want another cold winter so far from town. We owe everybody, but we will stay."

"Better close that outside door, Ed. I guess the wind that comes off that prairie doesn't have a tree within ten miles to break its force. I don't know, sometimes——"

The doctor arose and glanced sharply toward the adjoining room. He was the professional man now. He crossed the floor, closing the door after him, and Shilinski sat alone for what seemed to him an eternity. When the pale green of daylight came to the window the boy was born.

"Your wife must take it easy for a while," advised the doctor. "I know there's a lot of work around here, but she must not pitch into it again too soon."

Shilinski nodded in homage to the man who knew so many things about which he was in ignorance.

"You have something to work all the harder for now, Ed," remarked the doctor, pulling on his fur coat preparatory to his drive back across the bleak prairie.

Two years later the doctor took the trip again. He found the woman pacing the floor with the child in her arms. Both she and her husband were worn from a series of sleepless nights. The woman tried to explain symptoms and tensely watched the physician while he pursed his lips and felt of the pulse. He administered something from the contents of his bag and the child ceased complaining and slept.

"I will stay awhile," frowned the doctor. "We will see what developments are in an hour or two." Finally, he asked, "How are things going, Ed?"

Shilinski rubbed a rough palm across his forehead. "I am buying the place now. It is a heavy mortgage, but some day, maybe, by close saving, I will pay it all."

Shilinski's shoulders had started to droop and into his face had crept worry furrows. He reached over and replaced a coverlet that the child had pushed aside in its dreaming. What mattered anything except the boy and his protection from cold and want?

"Not much social life out here, I fancy," mused the doctor.

"Eh?"

"You must miss the relatives and friends and the times you had together back in the old country. I suppose the work takes all your time."

"We have been homesick, but the work takes all our time."

"I don't think you need to worry further just now about the boy. His fever has gone down and I will leave you something that you can give him at intervals. I must tell the wife, too, about proper diet. They need a lot of care and attention, these little fellows do. But you folks must get rest now. You can't work hard all day and stay up all night. You both look fagged out."

It was the landscape across which the doctor's team jerked back to town that morning that he always remembered best, even after it had become dotted with big red barns with yellow windbreaks and white houses with evergreens for shade. For at the period when the section began to change the doctor experienced change in himself. There had been too many long drives at all hours of the night—too much exposure to all sorts of weather.

It was the impressions he had caught before his step had lagged and his eyes had dimmed that lingered—the unfenced stretches, the untilled sloughs, the sudden springing up of a covey of prairie chickens. After that last drive home from Ed Shilinski's he had never had quite the same "pep." Yet he had saved the kid.

He saw Shilinski again a few years later when he came into his office one Saturday afternoon and laboriously counted out the few dollars that settled his bill. He saw that Shilinski had been sapped by hard work, from having put too much of himself in meeting emergencies—hay that had to be gotten in before it rained, stock that had to be cared for despite the storm. Interest on the mortgage was forever coming due.

The doctor now smacked of things as they had been. Styles in haberdashery and the manner of combing one's hair might change, but beyond a certain year they had not changed so far as the doctor was concerned. He remained as he had been during his period of "pep." He knew the human nature about him through and through, and, strangely, there were breeds and tribes in the community, held by many in poor esteem, toward whom he was peculiarly tolerant. On the contrary, there were certain high muckimucks concerning whose doings he was inclined to be cynical.

The new generation in Prairie Junction considered the doctor eccentric, but the doctor apparently cared nothing for any opinion the new generation might have. He no longer catered for patronage. In fact, he grumbled when old timers had him called out of bed at all hours of the night, but the old timers would have him, and they ignored his insistence that he had retired and was not practicing any more. He grumbled while he dressed, grumbled all the way to the house of illness, grumbled at the patient—grumbled and gave of the best that was in him. Among the pioneers his practice would only play out for good when he had played out for good.

Farm lands went to $100 an acre, to $200, to $300. The blacksmith shop had been turned into a garage, the old livery barn site was a gasoline filling station, the opera house was a movie, and the summer tented attraction was a chautauqua instead of a circus. Cars whizzed everywhere.

During the rare occasions when he was downtown the doctor was cautious of these whizzing cars. He always waited and watched for an opportunity to cross the street. The day that he was struck by a massive touring car he had been certain but the moment before that there was no automobile in sight. It must have turned the distant corner at terrific speed. When the doctor came to himself he found one of the newcomer physicians attending him.

"Well?" inquired the old doctor.

"No bones broken," assured the younger man. "Badly shaken up, though. I am sure that your vitality is not so low but that you will pull out of it all right. A good deal depends on yourself. I guess you know how to put up a fight."

"How did it happen?"

"The fellow driving the car was a stranger to me, doctor. Here from California, I believe they told me."

"From California," murmured the doctor. "They talk about it now as though it was an adjoining state, and it used to seem on the other side of the world. So it all depends on the kind of a fight I put up whether I pull through or not, eh?"

He started to turn on the pillow when the door opened and a youth breezed into the room.

"How's the old bird?" the visitor inquired cheerfully. "You know, he started one way and I turned the other. Then he started back again. Didn't seem to know which way he wanted to go. There wasn't a chance for me to keep from hitting him. That's the trouble with these old fellows. Now if he had only stood still."

The youth tilted his hat to the back of his head and lit a cigaret that filled the room with an oriental odor. His shirt and socks were of silk. His coat had a belt passing around it at a point between his waist and his arm pits. The hair on his head had been plastered with precision.

"My old man was the same way," the youth breezed on. "But then my old man had old fogey ideas about everything. We never got along. I wouldn't be back here now if it wasn't for settling up the estate. Little old $300 an acre half section ain't so bad, huh? I had a hunch I'd probably have an accident the first time I drove the car."

"Going out to live on the half section?" inquired the young physician.

"What ya trying to do, kid me?"

"What business are you in?"

"Haven't been doing anything so far, but now that I've sold the half section I'm in for anything that pays big returns on the investment. There's a lot of things that a fellow can get into nowadays, but you've got to take long risks to clean up big. You can't be a piker. The old man was always a piker on money matters."

The youth crossed over to the bed.

"How goes it, old scout?" he asked.

"What's the name?" inquired the old doctor with considerable effort.

"Shilinski. Eddie Shilinski. Used to live out northwest of here. Maybe you've heard of me."

The old doctor did not answer. He appeared to open his eyes real wide for an instant and then slowly they closed. The young physician rushed to the bedside. Hastily he made examinations, hardly believing his senses. But the old doctor was gone. He had changed his mind about putting up a fight.

The SPARRING PARTNER

by Charles E. Van Loan

"He Says He Wasn't in Condition and Wants Another Match."

ALL they ever say about the poor worm is that he will turn. Turn? Of course! And what then? Why have we never had any further information touching the conduct of that worm? This story has to do with the worm after he got turned around.

We will now crack the ringmaster's whip and introduce the worm. Come to think of it, we will quit calling him a worm here and now, because he is still alive and healthy enough to resent liberties. For the matter of that, he was never a real worm. He was a centipede masquerading.

Arthur Simms was born in a middle western state, and if parentage and early training count for anything he should have been a perfectly respectable citizen who would have voted the Republican ticket and attended the Presbyterian church.

The Simmses were "nice people"; but how were they to suspect that in the veins of the son ran the hot blood of some swashbuckling progenitor, some great-ditto-ditto-grandfather or other who rode with robber barons and whetted his sword on stone mileposts?

Arthur was a born swashbuckler, and the open road talked to him o' nights. There were no mailed gentlemen campaigning in Missouri in those days—unless you count the James brothers—and no fair ladies to be rescued from castle towers, so Arthur Simms did the next best thing. He ran away with a circus.

Arthur wanted to see the country, and he had his wish. The swashbuckling strain soon asserted itself. Swords were out of style, so Arthur did the best he could with his two bare fists; and his best was enough to make him the untamed terror of the canvas gang. When a young man can fight his way through a circus canvas gang and out on the other side he is ripe for better things. Swinging a heavy sledge hammer developed the tremendous back and shoulder muscles and put the power behind his locked fists. At 18 he was ready to change his name to "Kid Smiley."

At 22 he turned up in the training camp of the middleweight champion of the world, asking for work as a sparring partner.

What Kid Smiley was doing in that four years between 18 and 22 will always remain more or less of a secret, though there may be some who remember the mysterious middleweight who never fought twice under the same name and whipped all the bucolic champions as fast as he could get at them.

It is enough to say that when Kid Smiley presented himself at Tug Riley's training quarters he was as lean as a razorback and as hard as Pharaoh's heart, with a leanness and hardness which would have come from nothing in the world but constant training.

In those early days Kid Smiley was a silent, unobtrusive young man, with a pair of melancholy eyes which seemed always asking everybody's pardon and a manner which was a perpetual apology. When he spoke at all it was in a stammering half whisper.

Tug Riley, the champion, was not particularly impressed by the appearance of the applicant for the job; but a man who is as rough with his sparring partners as was this champion has to take what he can get.

The position of sparring partner to a champion of the world is a job which will never be rated A-a-1 in boxing circles. In the first place, a sparring partner is not hired to show what he can do, but to demonstrate what can be done to him. He is hired as a punching bag, and treated with just about as much human consideration. Nobody ever heard of a sparring partner having feelings. Nobody ever heard of one who was particularly clever. Cleverness is not expected of him. He is paid to be thumped, and if he does any thumping himself it must be on the shoulders or the arms or on the sides of the head, where it can do no damage. Many a sparring partner has blasted his career by forgetting himself and slipping over a solid wallop—before company.

"Well, I'll try you out this afternoon," said the world's champion with a yawn. "Come around at 2 o'clock. You got any clothes—trunks and things?"

Kid Smiley said that he had some clothes. "All right," said the great man. "If you deliver the goods you'll land the job."

The last sentence was badly worded. What the champion meant was that if the Kid survived the delivery of the goods he would get the job.

Tug Riley was notoriously careless with his sparring partners, and, to further complicate matters, he was something of a grandstand player. If distinguished spectators were present to watch him at work—newspaper men or actors, for instance—Tug was prone to forget himself and let drive with his justly celebrated right hand for the chin. Down would go the poor sparring partner as if struck by lightning. Why not? That famous right hand had dropped a world's champion and a dozen aspirants to the title.

Tug's little habit of forgetfulness was responsible for the vacancy in the training quarters. The last sparring partner remarked when the smelling salts were taken from under his nose that he liked a rough guy first rate, but if he was to be murdered twice a week $12 would not be considered an adequate compensation. So he went away.

The first workout with the champion took place behind closed doors. For all his innocent, boyish expression and the unspoken apology in his eyes, Kid Smiley allowed few things to escape him. He knew what he had been hired to do, and he did it to perfection. He sparred four cautious rounds with the middleweight champion, feeling his way, seldom attempting to land the lightest sort of a blow, and working entirely upon the defensive. Tug was well pleased.

Toward the end of the fourth round it occurred to the champion to ascertain whether his $12 a week man was game. No man has any right to expect gameness for $12 a week; but Tug did not think of that. Without the slightest warning the world's champion let drive with his never to be sufficiently appreciated right hand. The glove was as big as a pillow, but Kid Smiley went down like a log, rolled over twice, and came up, grinning foolishly.

"Why didn't you say you was going to cut loose?" he asked, in his funny whisper. "You took me by surprise. I didn't know you was going to hit hard."

"Huh!" said Tug. "That wasn't hard. You all right now?"

Smiley shook his head a few times with the jerking motion of a swimmer who clears the sea water from his hair.

"I wasn't hurt," he said. "I was surprised. Come on."

The champion was busy wondering why Kid Smiley had not stayed on the floor, so he never fully understood how it happened; but just before the end of the round the new sparring partner came tumbling into a clinch, and in some accidental fashion his left fist went crashing into the pit of the champion's stomach. It was a vicious blow, which lost nothing of its effectiveness by reason of being totally unexpected. Tug Riley grunted loudly, his knees spread apart, and he hung on, panting, with open mouth.

"Excuse me," said Kid Smiley, in his low, apologetic tone. "I don't know how I came to do that. Just sort of jammed the left straight ahead of me. I thought sure you'd block it——"

By this time Tug had recovered his breath, and he cut off that apology with a flow of the sort of language which might have been expected from a champion of the world under such distressing circumstances.

"And don't try any more of that funny business," he snarled in conclusion. "If you do I'm liable to tear into you and move your face over on the back of your head. You nailed me that time when my stomach muscles was all relaxed."

The Kid murmured that he was very sorry and would not do it again.

"And don't forget this," was the champion's warning. "You ain't being hired to slip over any of that stuff on me."

"Then I get the job?"

"I'll try you for a week."

At the end of the first week Kid Smiley was a fixture in Riley's camp. The boy was a willing worker, and a willing worker is always welcome around the training quarters. In the morning there was road work to be done, and as the champion did not like to trot his seven or eight miles alone Kid Smiley went with him, trailing along doggedly.

The time of preparation slipped away, and the fight for which the champion was in training loomed close at hand. It seemed to be the consensus of opinion that Tug Riley was in perfect trim and fit to defend his title. Kid Smiley was also in fighting trim, but, having no championship to defend or no particular reputation to sustain, the fact of his fitness interested nobody. None of the sporting writers ever said that Kid Smiley was ready to battle for a king's ransom, and some kings are pretty cheap at that. The sparring partner was just a walking gentleman in the cast of characters—a walking gentleman with two black eyes, blue nose, and a split lip. Who cared anything about him? You have the correct answer—nobody.

It was not for $12 a week that Kid Smiley's eyes were mourning. He was making an exhaustive study of the champion's style of boxing, and paying for his course of instruction with his bruises and the thin stream of blood which often trickled from his nose. The Kid wanted to know all about the middleweight champion, and he was willing to pay the price. For all his modesty, his quiet, retiring nature, his unspoken deference, the sparring partner was analyzing the professional personality of Tug Riley—literally taking him apart, blow by blow, to see what made him great.

There is as much individuality about a man's boxing as there is in his gait, his handwriting, or a photograph which has not been retouched. It would be as easy to find two men of the same physical proportions and physiognomy as it would be to find two skilled boxers with the same tricks and the same way of using them. Every great boxer or fighter has his own distinctive style, and must be studied as an individual. Every boxer has a weakness of some sort. It is the skill with which that weakness is defended that marks the topnotcher.

Kid Smiley had seen many boxers, and he had learned something from every one of them. He may have been colorless, apologetic, and a mere background against which a champion displayed himself, but Tug Riley would have been unpleasantly surprised had he known how accurately his stock in trade was being appraised by a $12 a week sparring partner.

The Kid looked guileless enough to suit any one, but he was more crafty than he seemed. He was a fox disguised as a sheep. He had his reasons for wishing to know all about Riley's style, and still more reasons for keeping Riley from finding out anything about Kid Smiley's tactics. He saw every card in the champion's hand without exposing his own, and since his first day he had not landed a single blow with any power behind it. His punches were clean, deft, and well timed, but there was nothing but an apology behind them.

"If you could only hit, Kid," said the great man, as he sprawled upon the table at the end of a day's work, "you'd lick a lot of those third-raters around here."

"What do you want for $12 a week?" asked Kid Smiley sorrowfully, "a Charley Mitchell?"

The period of training drew to a close. Upon the last afternoon, spurred on by a distinguished assemblages of wine agents, actors, sporting writers, and heavy betters, the champion waded into poor Smiley and hammered him all around the ring.

"That's it! Show us something!" came from the audience.

The Kid wriggled out of corners, ducked into clinches, used a meek, straight left upon occasions, and managed to escape a finishing punch.

"Put him out! Knock his head off!" chorused the wine agents.

The Kid rolled a malevolent eye toward the corner whence came that cry, but the other eye never left the champion's right glove. Smiley lasted the stipulated distance, which was a great disappointment to the audience. He sneaked away to the rubbing table, dazed and bleeding from the nose and mouth. The champion, unmarked, removed his gloves in the middle of a knot of admiring friends.

"I didn't want to cut him up too much," said he, generously. "Of course, I could have got him any time, but what's the use? It ain't worth it."

This humane view brought forth a murmur of approbation.

The champion won his fight in the eleventh round, and though there were sharp eyes at the ringside no man watched Tug Riley any closer than the scarred sparring partner, who swung a towel between rounds in the champion's corner.

When it came time to settle with his hired men Tug tendered Smiley the full amount of his wages, to which he added a $10 note. The champion's share of the purse had been something above $8,000.

"What's this for?" asked Smiley, curiously fingering the bill.

"That's a present," answered the champion.

"O," said the Kid. He seemed to reflect for a few seconds, and then he passed it back. "You better keep that," he said. "It's going to be a hard winter, and you may need it."

The quiet, matter of fact air with which this was done astounded Riley.

"Making a play for more, are you?" he sneered. "Well, just for that you get nothing! Understand? Nothing!"

"Why, that's all right," said the Kid, with his old apologetic stammer, "that's all right, Tug. I never asked you to give me anything, did I?"

"No, and you'd better not!" snarled the middleweight champion.

Yet, the very next time the men met Kid Smiley asked for something, and got it.

Riley spent the next six months waiting for some chesty youngster to challenge for the title, but chesty young middleweights were scarce, and Riley had leisure to regret that he had not "saved" a few aspirants for encores.

Tug was a frugal soul. He had his faults, but prodigality was not among them. He did not believe in releasing "the imprisoned laughter of the peasant girls of France." His wake could never be traced by bobbing champagne corks. Tug was a business man, and his method was simple. He fought as often as any man could be found to meet him, and he put his end of the purse into the bank. Frenzied finance had not yet entered the prize ring, but Tug's bank balance had no reason for shame. Considering his limitations, he had done well, and he intended to do better before the time came for him to say good-by to the ring.

This period of enforced idleness distressed the thrifty Tug. He felt that he was living upon his capital, and, as he would have expressed it, "laying up nothing for old age."

In the midst of this lean season arrived Kid Smiley with a business proposition—and a tearing, racking cough.

"Hello, bo," said the champion, not unkindly. "What are you doing here?"

"Nothing," said the Kid. "Nothing much." He was, if anything, more furtive and apologetic than ever, and as he spoke he twisted his dirty old cap in his hands.

"I've had a couple of fights since I saw you last," said Smiley.

"So I see by the papers," said Tug. "Did you get any coin?"

"None to speak of," said Smiley in a whisper. "But I know a way for both of us to get some—a bunch for you and a few hundred for me."

Here he stopped to cough, and when the champion was assured that his visitor was not going to choke to death upon the spot he signified his interest in the proposition by a single word.

"Well?"

"I had my fights before the Apollo club," said the Kid. "Of course, it ain't a big town, but a good show would draw enough to make the fighters' end close to $5,000. I think they'd stand for a match between us, and there's a sucker down there who wants to back me for a thousand." He paused, and the cough shook him as a terrier shakes a rat.

"A side bet, eh?" said the champion with a grin.

"Of course," said the Kid miserably, "I

The Fortieth Door

SYNOPSIS.

Jack Ryder, a young American, is doing some excavating in Egypt, and is induced by Jinny Jeffries, a pretty American tourist he has known, to attend a masked ball at her hotel. He obtains a Scotch costume from a friend, Andrew McLean, an attaché of the English government, and at McLean's he hears the story of a French scholar who disappeared in the desert fifteen years before. The man was reported dead, and a wife and baby girl were left; now the inheritance of an estate makes it suddenly important to hunt up the child. But all trace is gone. McLean shows Ryder a miniature portrait of the young Frenchman, curiously mounted. At the ball Ryder is fascinated by a mysterious young girl in a Mohammedan costume, who will give no hint of her identity. He follows, as she slips away, and finds she is the daughter of Tewfick Pasha, a Turkish official in the neighboring palace. The terrible ennui of her secluded life has led the girl to this escapade. At parting in the garden, to the girl's horror and amazement, Ryder kisses her. A moment later a servant finds her and says her father wishes to see her. Her fear of discovery proves groundless, but is succeeded by a greater one when her father informs her he wishes her to marry a repulsive old man to save himself from ruin. The next day Ryder breaks, politely, with his American friends and again finds the Egyptian girl. He is moved by her distress at her threatened marriage to offer her his help.

FOURTH INSTALLMENT.

A FIND IN THE DESERT.

AFTER all, he did not know this girl. If he swayed her judgment now, and dragged her away, what life, what compensation could he offer her? How did he know that she would not regret it? Would she be happier in a world unknown?

She had been brought up to this sort of thing. It was bred in her. Marriage was her inevitable game. This very charm she exercised, this subtle, haunting invasion of his senses, what was that but another proof of the harem existence where all influences were forced to serve the ends of sex. And she was so maddeningly resigned to taking this general!

A queer hot rage was gaining possession of him. "O, well, if you prefer this," he said brutally, with a youthful desire to wreak pain in return for that strange pain which something was inflicting upon him.

A girl who would let him kiss her one night and on the next inform him that she was giving herself to an unknown—an old Turk. If she could go like that, to some other's arms and lips.

He wanted to take her fiercely in his arms and crush her lips against his and then fling her away and say, "O, go to him now—if you can!"

And at the same time he wanted to gather her to him as tenderly as if she were a flower he was guarding and tell her that he would protect her against all the world.

He was divided and confused and blindly angry. He felt baffled and frustrated. He was both aching and raging. And yet he was capable of reminding himself, in some corner of his uninvaded mind, that this was undoubtedly the best thing for them both.

What else? For him? For her?

And yet his tongue went on stabbing her. "If this is what you are determined to do——" he heard himself saying hardly, yet with a hint of deferred finality.

It was as if he had said, "If this, then, is what you are like! If you are the soft, submissive harem creature, the toy, the odalisque. If you will endure undesired love rather than face the world——"

And she knew that was what he was saying to her. The injustice brought a lump of self-pity to her throbbing throat. That he should not realize and honor the courage of her sacrifice. That he should reproach, despise. She had expected other entreaties, protestations.

Her heart ached with a throb of steady dreariness.

But she did not stir. Not a line of her drooping draperies wavered towards him. And, swallowing that lump in her throat, she achieved a toneless, "That is what I am going to do."

At the other end of the garden a sound came from the house.

Ryder seemed to rouse himself. "Good-by, then," he said, uncertainly.

"Good-by, monsieur."

He looked oddly at her. "Good-by," he muttered again, and turned, and stumbled out of the gate.

A pool of moonlight lay without its arches, and he stepped into it as if coming out of the shadows of an enchanted garden. He stood there, in the moonlight, against the lane.

A slight sound drew his eyes back.

She had followed him to the gate; she stood and straightened himself as if throwing off that garden's spell. He put back his shoulders and took a quick step down the inky wells of shadow into which her black robe flowed, and in the moonlight her face, gazing after him, was an exquisite etheral apparition, like a spirit of the garden.

She had cast off her veil. He had a vision of her dark eyes shining over rose flushed cheeks, of deeper rose red lips in curves of haunting sweetness, of the tender contour of her young face, fixed unforgettingly in the radiant moonlight—only an instant's vision, for while the blood stopped in his veins, the darkness engulfed her, like a magician's curtain.

But he waited while he heard the gate closed. Still he waited while he heard her locking it. And then for all his hot young pride he turned back and knocked upon it. He called softly. He whispered entreaties.

Not a sound. Not an answer.

In a revulsion of feeling he turned and made his way blindly from the lane.

She had heard his voice. Like a creature utterly spent, she had been leaning against the great gate from which she had withdrawn the key. But she uttered not a breath in answer, and after she had heard his footsteps die away she turned slowly back and groped among the rose roots for the key's hiding place.

Mechanically she smoothed it over and moved on towards the house. All was quiet there. That sound had been no alarm. Unobserved she slipped within the little door, and up the spiral steps.

She had not seen the dark eyes that were watching her from the other side of the rose thicket. After the girl had gained the house the old woman came forward and stooped before the marked bush, muttering under her breath at the thorns. After a few moments she gave a little grunt of satisfaction and her exploring hand drew out the key.

She thrust it into her robes, and, smoothing again the rifled hiding place among the roses, she made her careful way into the house.

. . . .

The siesta was past. The sun was tilting towards the west and shadows were beginning to put out across the blazing sands. Over the mounds of rubbish the bearers had resumed their slow procession, a picturesque frieze of tattered, indigo-robed, ebony figures, baskets on heads, against a cloudless cobalt sky, and again the hot air was invaded with the monotonous rise and fall of their labor chant.

A man with a short, pointed red beard and an academic face beneath a helmet was stooping over the siftings from those baskets, intent upon the stream of sand through the wire screens. Patiently he discarded the unending pebbles, discovering at rare intervals some lost bead, some splinter of old sycamore wood, some fragment of pottery in which a Ptolemy had sipped his wine or a kitchen wench had soaked her lentils.

Beyond the man were traces of the native camp, a burnt out fire, a roll of rags, a tattered shelter cloth stuck on two tottering sticks, and, distributed indiscriminatingly about, a tethered goat, a white donkey with motionless, drooping ears, and a few supercilious camels.

The camp was in the center of a broken line of foothills on the desert's edge. North and south and west the wide sands swept out to meet the sky, and to the east, shutting out the Nile valley, the hills reared their red rock from the yellow drift.

Among the jutting rocks in the foreground yawned dark mouths that were the entrances of the discovered tombs, and within one of these tombs was another white man. He was conducting his own siftings in high solitude, a lean, bronzed young man, with dark hair and eyes, and, at the present moment, an unexhilarated expression.

It had been two weeks since Jack Ryder had returned to camp. Two interminable weeks. They were the longest, the dullest, the dreariest, the most irritatingly undelighting weeks that he had ever lived through.

But bitterly he resented any aspersion from the long suffering Thatcher upon his disposition. He wanted it distinctly understood that he was not low spirited. Not in the least. A man wasn't in the dumps just because he wasn't—well, garrulous. Just because he didn't go about whistling like a steam siren or exult like a cheer leader when some one dug up the effigy of a Hathor cow. Just because he objected when the natives twanged their fool strings all night and wailed at the moon.

The moon was full now. Round and white it went sailing blandly over the eternal monotony of desert. Round and white, it lighted up the eternal sameness of life. He had never noticed it before, but a moon was a poignantly depressing phenomenon.

He couldn't help it. A man couldn't make himself be a comedian. It wasn't as if he wanted to be a grump. He would have been glad to be glad. He wanted Thatcher to make him glad. He defied him to. He didn't enjoy this flat, insipid taste of things, this dull grind, this feeding of sameness and emptiness that made nothing seem worth while. A feeling that he had been marooned on a desert island, far from all stir and throb of life.

Suppose he did dig up a Hathor cow? Suppose he dug up Hathor himself, or Cleopatra, or ten little Ptolemies? What was the good of it? Not Jinny Jeffries herself could have cast more aspersions upon the personal value of excavations.

When he was tired of denying to himself that there was anything unusual the matter with him, he shifted the inner argument and took up the denial that anything which had happened in Cairo those two weeks before had anything to do with it. As if that rash encounter mattered! As if he were the silly, senseless, sentimental sort of idiot to go mooning about his work because of a girl and a girl from a harem with a taste for secret masquerades and Turkish marriages! As if he cared!

Of course, he admitted this logically and coldly now to himself, as he sat there in the ray of his excavator's lantern, on the sanded floor at the end of the hall of offering—of course, he was sorry for the girl. It was no life for any young girl, especially a spirited one, with her veins bubbling with French blood.

The system was wrong. If they were going to shut up those girls they had no business to bring them up on modern ideas. If they kept the mashrubiyeh on the windows and the yashmak on their faces they ought to keep the kohl on their eyes and the henna on their fingers and education out of their hidden heads.

It was too bad. But, of course, they were brought up to it. Look how quickly that girl had given in. She was Turkish, through and through. Submissive. Docile. And a darned good thing she was, too! Suppose she had taken him at his fool word. Suppose she had really wanted to get away!

Lucky, that's what he'd been. And it would be a lesson to him. Never again. No more masked young things with their stolen keys and their forbidden doors. No more whispered tales of woe in a shady garden. No more——

Violently he wrenched himself from his No Mores, Recollection had a way of stirring an unpleasant tumult. But it was all over. He had forgotten it—he would forget it. He would forget her. Work, that was the thing. Normal, sensible, everyday work.

But there was no joy in this tonic work. Somewhere, between a night and a morning, he had lost that glow of accomplishment which had buoyed him, which made him fairly ecstatic over the discovery of this very tomb.

For this tomb was his own find. It had been found long ago by the Persians, who had plundered it, and it had been found by Arabs, who had plundered the Persians, but between and after those findings the oblivious sands had swept over it, blotting it from the world, choking the entrance hall and the shaft, seeping through half-sealed entrances and packing its dry drift over the rifled sarcophagus of the king and over the withered mummy of the young girl in the anteroom. The tombs had been cleared now, down almost to the stone floors, and Ryder was busy now with the drifts that had lodged in the crevices about the entrance to the shaft.

It was really an important find. Although much plundered, the walls were intact, and the delicate carvings in the white limestone walls were exceptional examples. And there were some very interesting things to decipher. A scholar and an explorer could well be enthusiastic.

But Ryder continued to look far from enthusiastic. Even when his groping fingers, searching a cranny, came in contact with a hard substance his face did not change to any lightning radiance. Unexpectedly he picked up the sand incrusted lump and brushed it off.

A gleam of gold shone in his hand. But it was no ancient amulet or necklace or breast guard, nor was it any bit of the harness of the plundering Persians. It was a locket, very heavily and ornately carved.

He stood a moment staring down at the thing with a curious feeling of having stood staring down at exactly the same thing before—that subconscious feeling of the repetition of events, which supports the theories of reincarnationists—and then, quite suddenly, memory came to his aid.

In McLean's office. That day of the masquerade. Those visiting Frenchmen and that locket they had shown him. Of course the thing reminded him—— And it was remarkably like. The same thick oval, the same ponderous effect of the coat of arms—if it should prove the same coat of arms that would be a clew!

With his mind still piecing the recollection and surmise together, his fingers pressed the spring. There was a miniature within, but it was not the picture of Monsier Delcassé. Ryder was looking down upon the face of a girl, a beautiful, spirited face, with merry eyes and wistful lips—dark eyes, with a lovely arch of brow, and rose red lips with haunting curves.

And eyes, and brows, and lips, and curves, it was the face of the girl who had gazed after him in the moonlight against the shadows of the pasha's garden.

. . . .

"It's no end good of you, Jack to take this trouble," Andrew McLean remarked appreciatively, looking up from his scrunity of the packet which his unexpected luncheon guest had pushed over to his plate. "Uncommon thoughtful. It's undoubtedly a twin to that locket, the portrait of the man's wife—whatever his name was."

"Delcassé," said Jack Ryder promptly.

Gratefully he drained the second lemon squash which the silent footed Mohammed had placed at his elbow. It had been a hard morning's trip, this coming in from camp in high haste, and he was hot and dusty.

"You might have sent the thing," McLean mentioned. "I daresay that special agent chap has left the country, for I recollect he said he was at the end of his search. And, of course, this isn't much of a cue—eh, what?"

"It's everything of a cue," insisted Ryder.

by Mary Hastings Bradley

"It shows where this Frenchman was working, for the first thing."

"Unless it had been stolen by some native who lost it in that tomb."

"Natives don't lose gold lockets. Of course it might have been stolen and hidden, but that's far fetched. It's much more likely that this was the very tomb where Delcassé was working at the time of his death. For one thing, the place showed signs of previous excavation, up to the inner corridor, and there I'll swear no modern got ahead of me. And for another thing, it's a perfect specimen of the limestone carving of the tomb of Thi which Delcassé wrote his book about—looks very much as if it might be by the same artist. There's a flock of hippopotami in a marsh scene with the identical drawing, and there's the same lovely boat in full sail—but there, you bounder, you don't know the tomb of Thi from a thyroid gland. You're here to administer financial justice, the middle, the high and the low; your soul is with piastres, not the past. But take my word for it, it's exactly the spot where an enthusiast of the Thi tomb would be grubbing away. Lord, they could choose their finds in those days!"

"It's uncommonly likely," McLean conceded, abandoning his demolished cherry tart and pulling out his briar. "And if the locket proves the duplicate of the other it indicates that it's a portrait of Mme. Delcassé, but it doesn't indicate what has become of Mme. Delcassé. Though in a general way," McLean deduced with Scotch judicialness, "it supports the theory of foul play. The woman would hardly have lost her miniature, or have sold it, except under pressing conditions. In fact——"

Ryder was brusque with his facts.

"That doesn't matter—Mme. Delcassé doesn't matter. The thing that matters is——"

As brusquely he broke off. His tongue balked before the revelation, but he goaded it on.

"That there is a girl—the living image of that picture."

"I say!" McLean looked up at that, distinctly intrigued. "That's getting on. You mean you've seen her?"

Ryder nodded, suddenly busy with his cigaret.

"Where is she, now? In Cairo? That's luck, man! And you say she's like?"

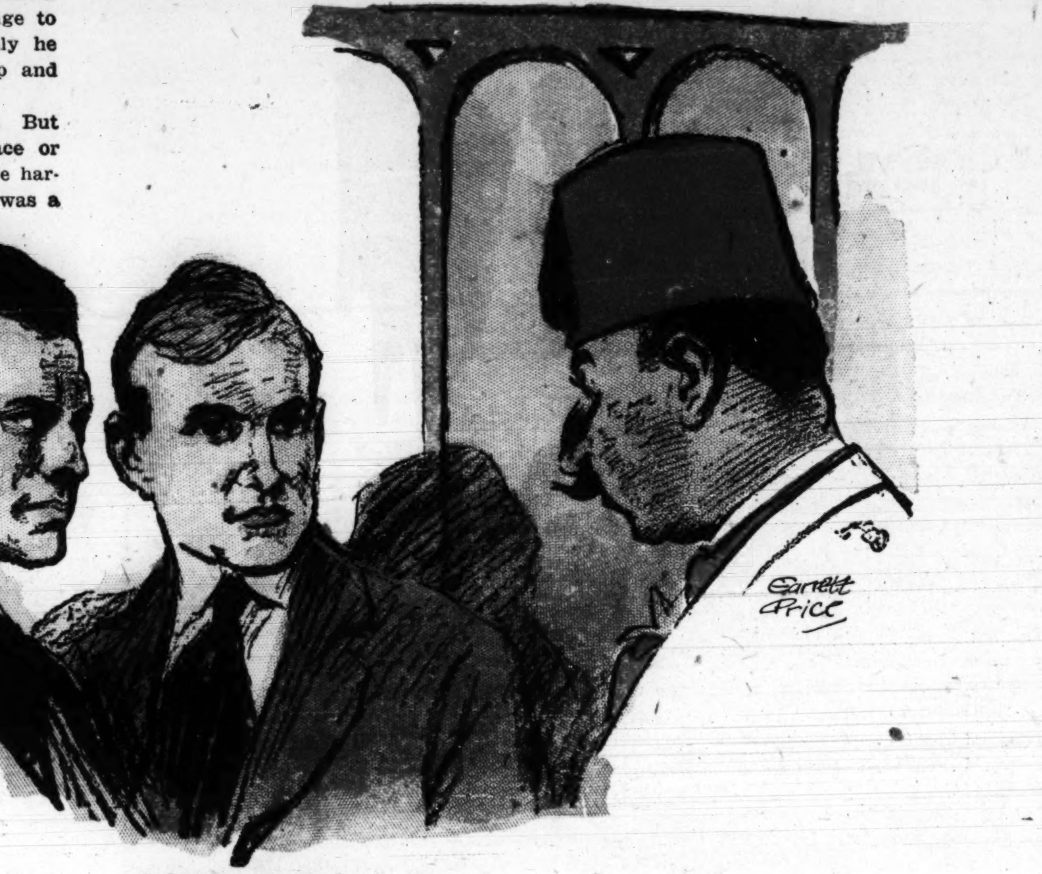
"You'd think it her picture."

"It's an uncommon face." McLean bent over it again. "I fancied the artist had just been making a bit of beauty, but if there's a girl like that——! Fancy stumbling on that! But where is she? And what name does she go by?"

"Oh, her name—she doesn't know her own, of course." Ryder paused uncertainly. "She's in Cairo," he began again vaguely. "She'd be just about the right age—18 or so. She—she's had awf'ly hard luck." Distressfully he hesitated.

The shrewd eyes of McLean dwelt upon him in sorrowful silence. "Eh, Jock," he said at last, with mock scandal scarcely veiling rebuke. "I did not know that you knew any of that sort—the poor, wee, lost thing. Tell me, now——"

"Tell you you're off your chump," said Jack rudely. "She's no lost lamb. Fact is, she's never spoken to a man—except myself."



A fortune was coming to the pacha.

He rather enjoyed the start this gave McLean after his insinuations. It helped him on with his story.

"The girl doesn't know her own name at all, I gather. She thinks she's the daughter of Tewfick Pacha. Her mother married the Turk and died very soon afterwards, and he brought up this girl as his own. She says she's his only child."

He paused, ostensibly to blow an elaborate smoke ring, but actually to enjoy McLean's astonishment. As astonishment, it was distinctly vivid. It verged upon a genuine horror as Ryder's meaning sank into his friend's mind.

McLean knew—slightly—Tewfick Pacha. He knew—supremely—the inviolable seclusion of a daughter of such a household. He knew the utter impossibility of any man's speech with her.

Yet here was Ryder telling him.

Ryder's telling him was a sketchy performance. He mentioned the girl's appearance at the masquerade and their acquaintance. He touched lightly upon her attempted flight and his pursuit. Even more lightly he passed over those lingering moments at her garden gate and the exchange of confidences.

"She said that her dead mother had been French. And that her name was her mother's—Aimée. So there is——"

"But the likeness, man—her face? She never unveiled to you?"

"Well, the next night——"

"The next night?"

It was at this point that Ryder began to lose his relish of McLean's astonishment.

"Yes, the next night," he repeated with careful carelessness. "I told the girl I would come and see if she got in all right—there had been some footsteps the night before——"

"And you went? And she came?"

"Do you suppose she sent her father?"

"You're lucky she didn't send her father's eunuch," McLean retorted grimly. "Well, get on with your daring story. The girl took off her veil."

"Nothing of the kind," said Jack a trifle testily—so soon does conventional masculinity champion the conservatism of the other sex! "That was just as I was going—gone, in fact. I looked back and she had drawn her veil aside. The moon was bright on her face—I saw her as clear as daylight, and I tell you that this miniature is a picture of her. She is Delcassé's daughter and she doesn't know it. Her mother was stolen by that disgusting old Turk——"

"Hold on a bit. Fifteen years ago Tewfick could hardly have been 30, and he has the rep of a Don Juan. It may have been a love affair, or it may have been plunder. The girl remembers her?"

"Very little. She was so young when her mother died. She said that the father was so in love that he never married again."

"H'm. It seems to me that I've heard tales of our Tewfick and of pretty ladies in apartments. Cairo is a city of secrets and tattlers. However, as to this Delcassé inheritance, I'll just notify the French legation."

"We'll have to look sharp," said Ryder quickly. "There's no time to lose. The girl's to be married."

"Married? But she'll inherit the money just the same."

"But she doesn't want to be married," Ryder insisted anxiously. "Her father—her alleged father—has just sprung this on her. Says there are political or financial reasons. He's been caught in some dirty work by this Hamdi-Bey and he's stopping Hamdi's mouth with the girl. And we've got to stop that."

"I wonder if we can," said McLean thoughtfully.

"If we can? When the girl is French? When she's been lied to and deceived?"

"She seems to have been taken jolly well care of. Brought up as his own and all that. Keep your shirt on, Jack," McLean advised dryly with a shrewd glance from his gray eyes at the other's unguarded heat.

Then his eyes dropped to the miniature again. A lovely face. A lovely, unfortunate creature. And if the daughter looked like that, small wonder that Jack was touched. Beauty in distress.

Some men had all the luck, McLean reflected. He had never taken Jack for the gallivanting kind, either, yet here he was going to masquerades with one girl and coming home with another.

Jack was too good looking, that was the trouble with the youngster. Good looking and gay humored. The kind that attracted women. Women and romance were never fluttering about lank, light eyed, uninteresting old Scotchmen of 29!

A mild and wistful pang, which McLean refused to name, made itself known.

"I'll see the legation," he began.

"At once. I'll wait," urged Ryder.

And at once McLean went.

The result was what he had foreseen. The legation was appreciative of his interest. That special agent had returned to France, but his address was left, and undoubtedly the family of Delcassé would be grateful for any information which Monsieur McLean could send.

"Send!" repudiated Ryder hotly. "Write to France and back—wait for somebody to come over! Can't the legation do something now?"

"The legation has no authority. They can't take the girl away from the man who is, at any rate, her stepfather."

"They can put the fear of God into him about this marriage. They can deny his right to hand her over to one of his pals. They can threaten him with an inquiry into the circumstances of her mother's marriage."

"And why should they? They may regard it as a very natural marriage. And remember, my dear Jack, that the legation has no desire to alienate the affections of influential Turks, or criticize their fifteen year ago romances. You have a totally wrong impression of the responsibilities of foreign representatives."

"But to let him dispose of a French girl——"

"He is disposing of her, as his daughter, in honorable marriage, to a wealthy and aristocratic general. There can be no question of his motives."

"Of course, if you think that sort of thing is all right."

Carefully McLean ignored the other's wrath. Patiently he explained. "It's not what I think, my dear fellow, it's what the legation thinks. There's not a chance in the world of getting the marriage stopped."

"Then I'll do it myself," declared Ryder. "I'll see this Tewfick Pacha and talk to him. Tell him the money is to come to the girl only when she is single. Tell him the French law gives the father's representatives full charge. Tell him that he kidnaped the mother and the government will prosecute unless the girl is given her liberty. Tell him anything. A man with a guilty conscience can always be bluffed."

In silence McLean gazed upon him, perplexed and clouded, his quizzical twinkle gone. Jack was taking this thing infernally to heart. And it was a bad business.

"You will let me do the telling," he stated at last, grimly. "What can be said, I'll say. Like a fool, I will meddle."

And so it happened that within another hour two very stiff and constrained young men were ringing the bell at the entrance door of Tewfick Pacha.

A huge Soudanese admitted them. They found themselves in a tiled vestibule, looking through open arches into the green of a garden—that garden, Ryder hardly needed to remind himself, with whose back door he had made such unconventional acquaintance.

Now he had a glimpse of a sunny fountain and fluttering pigeons, and, on either side of the garden, of the two wings of the building, gay white walls with green shutters, more suggestive of a French villa than an Egyptian palace, before the Soudanese marshaled them toward the stairs upon the right.

The left, then, was the way to the haremlik. And somewhere in those secluded rooms, to which no man but the owner of the palace ever gained admission, was Aimée.

The Soudanese mounted the stairs before them and held open a door into a long drawing room from which the pacha's modernity had stripped every charm except the color of some worn old rugs; the windows were draped in European style, the walls exhibited paper instead of paneling, in one corner was a phonograph, and in another, beside a chair, stood a table littered with cigaret trays and French novels with explicit titles.

The only Moslem touch to the place were four enormous oil portraits of pompous, turbaned gentlemen, in one of whom Ryder recognized the familiar rotundity of Mahomet Ali in his grand robes.

As a pacha's palace it was a blow, and Ryder's vague, romantic notions of high halls and gilded arches suffered a collapse.

Tewfick Pacha came in with haste. He had been going out when these callers were announced and he was dressed for parade, in a very light, very tight suit, gardenia in his buttonhole, cane in his gloved hands, fez upon his head. For all their smiling welcome, his full, dark eyes were uneasy.

He had grown distrustful of surprises.

It was McLean's affair to reassure him. Far from fulminating any accusations the canny Scot announced himself as the bearer of glad tidings. A fortune, he announced, was coming to the pacha—or to the pacha's family. A very rich old woman in France had decided to change her will.

There he paused and the pacha continued to smile noncommittally, but the word fortune was operating. In the back of his mind he was hastily trying to think of rich old women in France who might change their wills.

"I am afraid that it is my stupidity which has kept you from the knowledge of this for some weeks," McLean went on. "I had so many other matters to look up that I did not at once consult my records. And it has been so many years since you married Mme. Delcassé that the name had slipped general recollection. It was twelve years ago, I believe, that she died?"

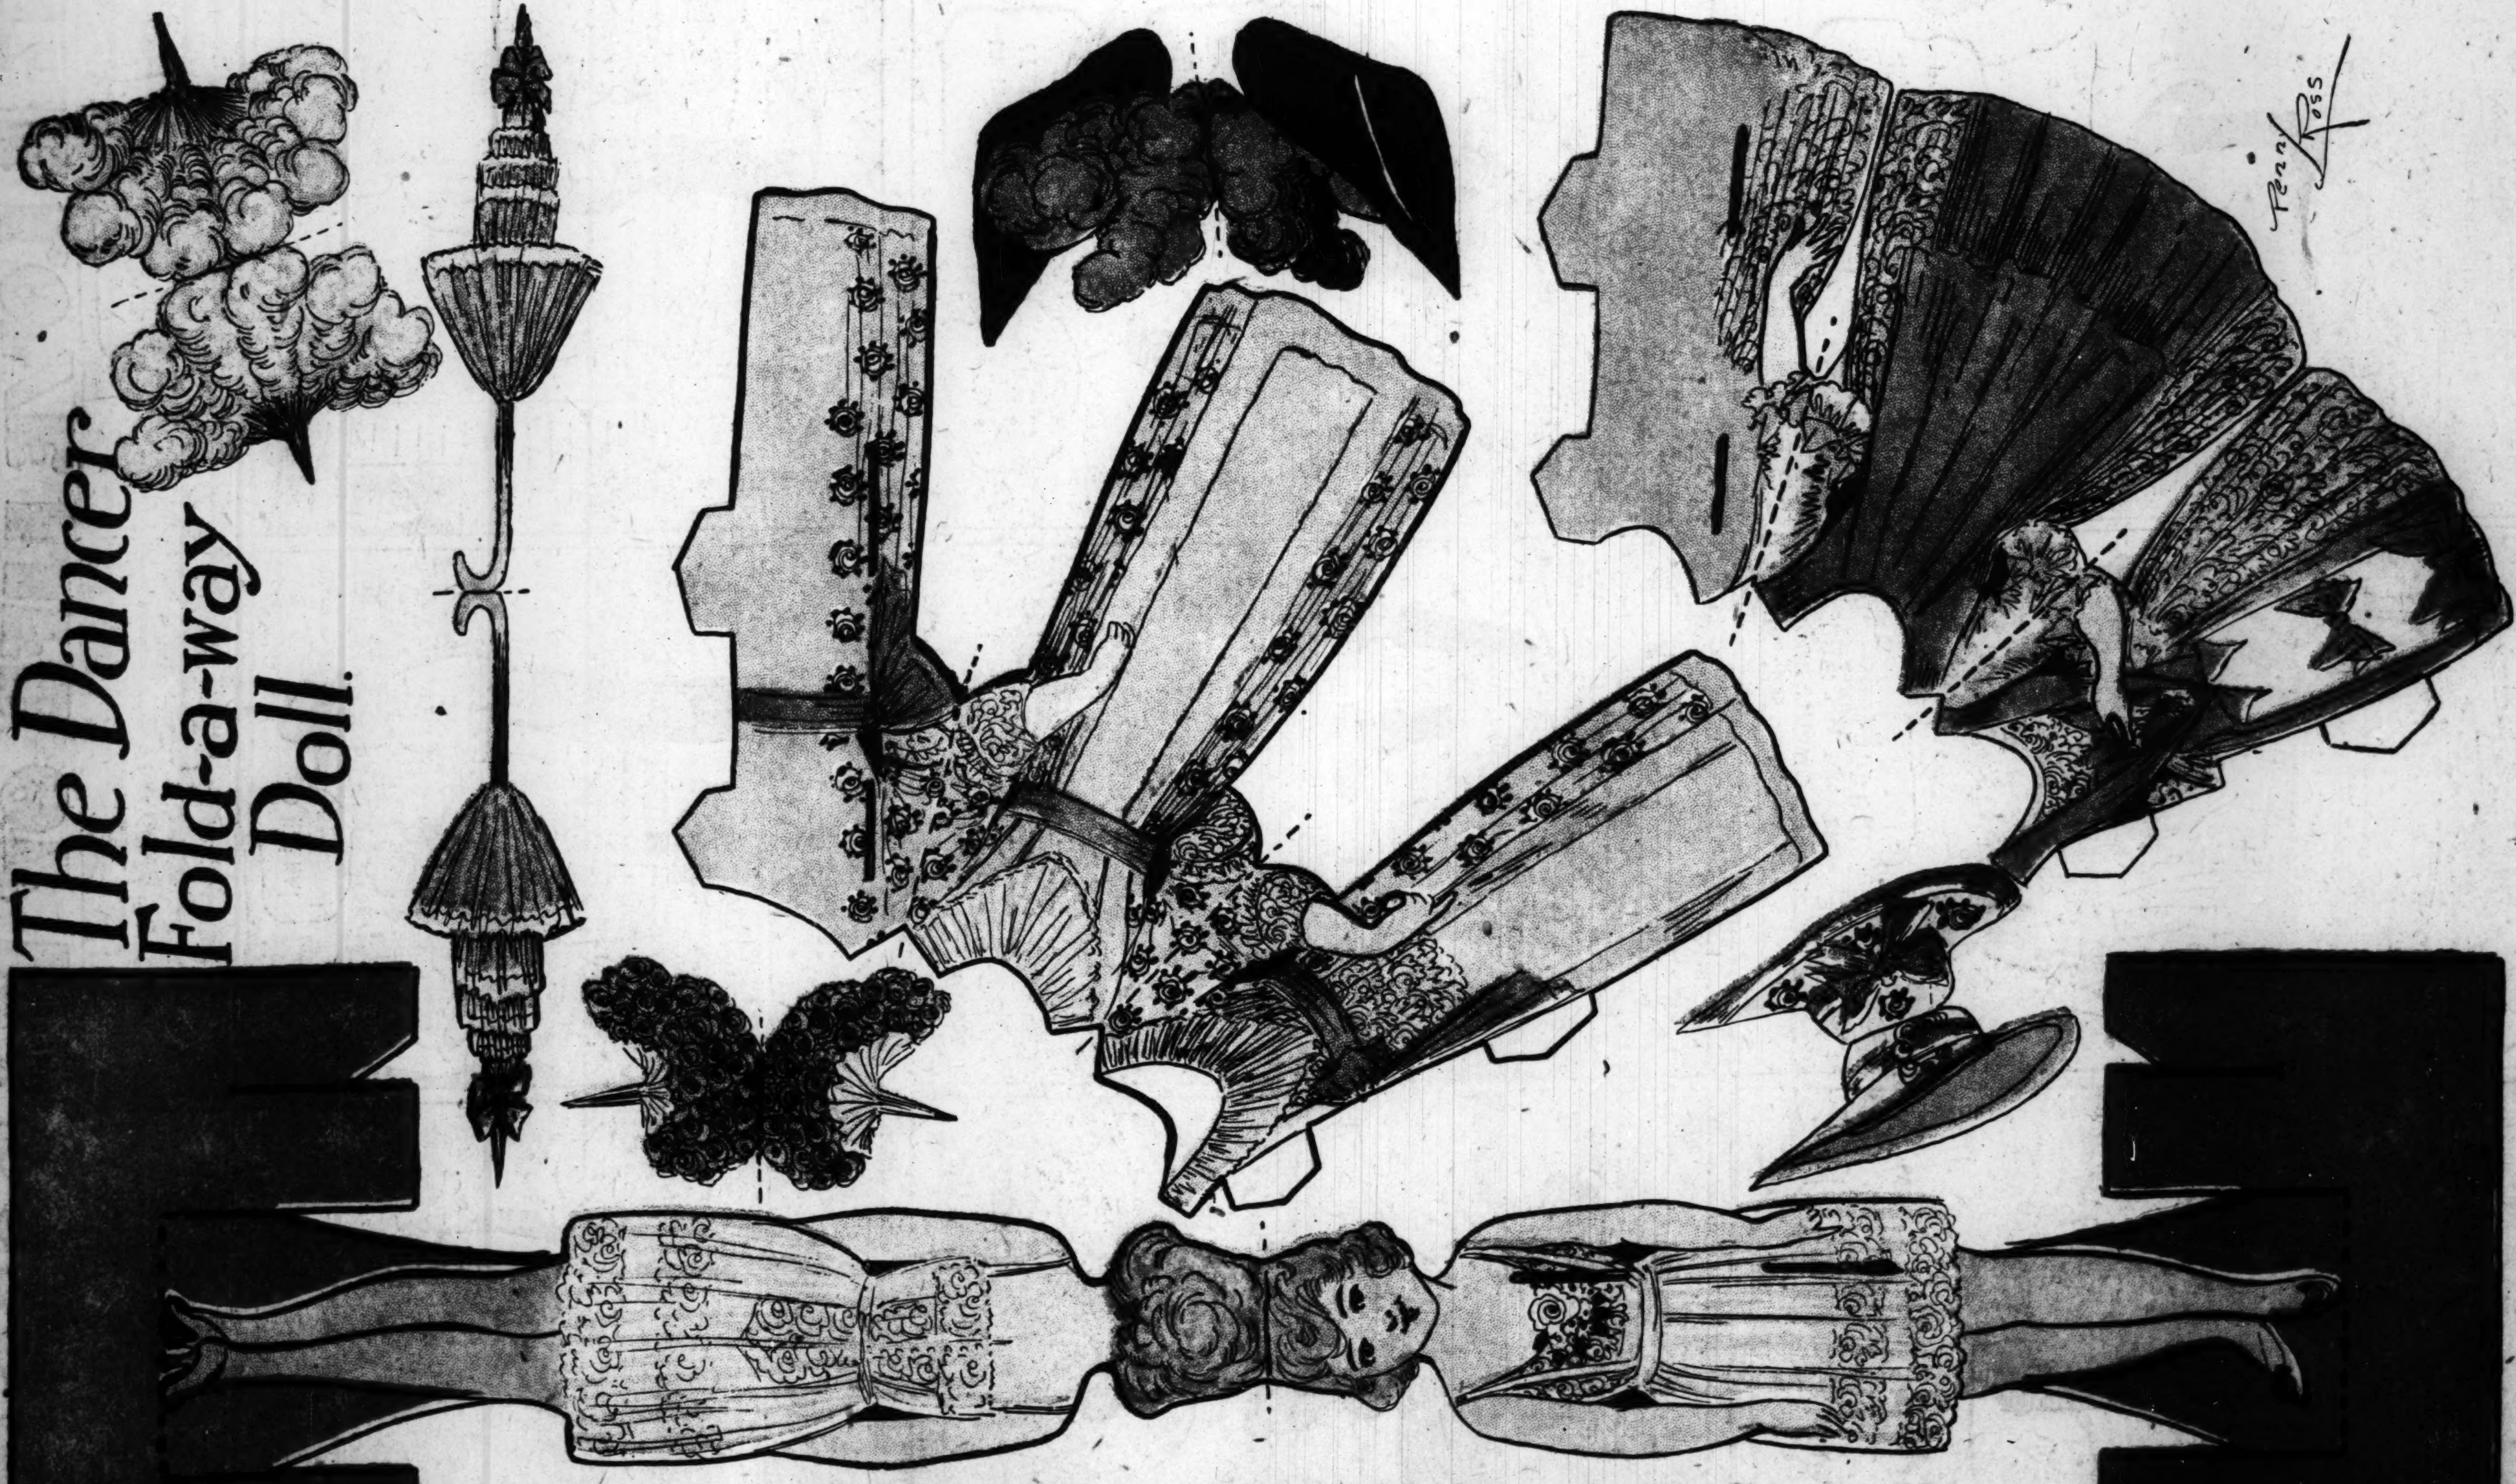
The Dancer Fold-a-way Doll.



Directions for Cutting Out the Dancer Fold-a-Way Doll

Mount the doll on heavy paper—an old magazine cover will do nicely—when dry trim off the black lines around the doll; cut into the double lines on the bases to make locks, and into the double lines on body to make slits into which the fastening tabs of the dresses fit. Fold over directly on the dotted lines at the top of the head and the dotted lines at the feet in opposite directions. Bring the bases together and slide the locks from one side into the locks on the opposite side. The doll will then stand alone.

It will not be necessary to mount the dresses, etc., but cut into the slits of the dresses; fold directly on the dotted lines and fit the fastening tabs into the slits. Dolly's clothes are put on and taken off like real dresses, they fit on tightly and will not drop off; and just think! you will have backs to all the dresses as well as fronts, and Dolly herself will stand up straight without any unsightly easel. Next week the Mother Fold-a-Way Doll and her wardrobe.

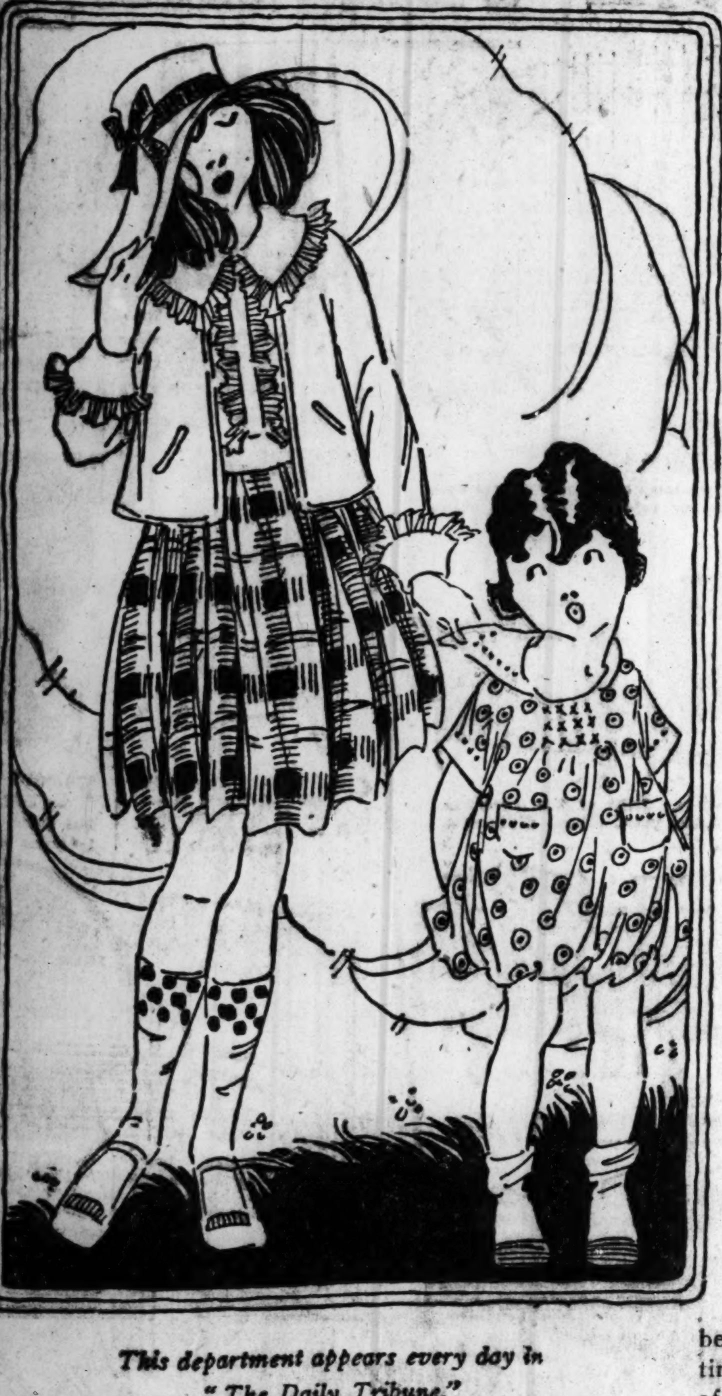
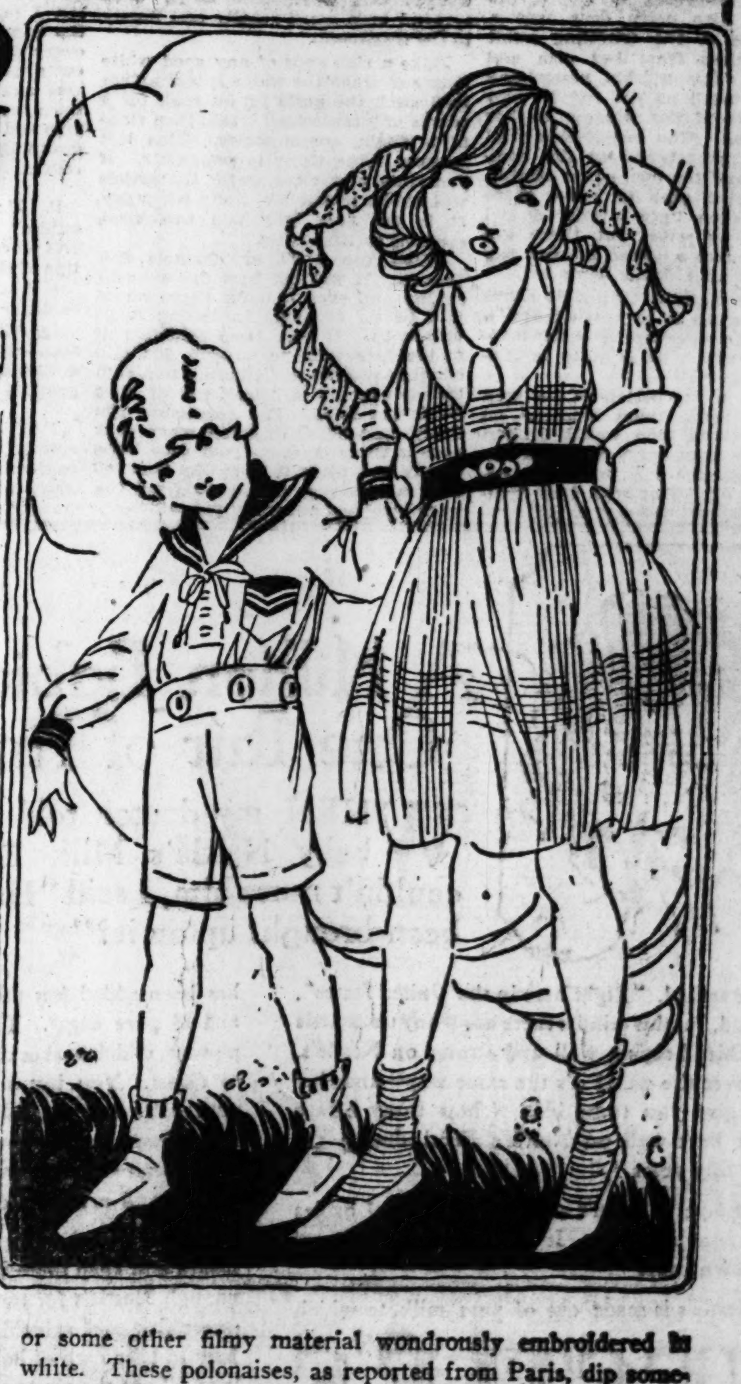
ALL-THE-YEAR-ROUND CLOTHES FOR CHILDREN

FASHION'S BLUE BOOK

by Corinne Lowe





THE little frock at the upper left is dotted Swiss, trimmed with white batiste. Next, a voile of burnt orange is followed by flowered organdy combined with white batiste. The last of this row is another shy voilette—this in white embroidered in color. At the lower left older sister does police duty in a combination of plaid and plain gingham, while the young gentleman under her unwelcome authority makes the best of it in rompers of English print. Opposite, a sailor suit of white linen goes hand in hand with yellow organdy sashed in black velvet ribbon.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—"Backward, turn backward, O time in thy flight! Make me a child again just for tonight!" Whenever we hear that little stanza we are tempted to add. "And make me a child's clo' in which to delight." The truth of it is that our own childhood was clouded by navy serges and plaids and ginghams. They were made in the stupid and boring manner that they did them in the eighties and nineties. The only gleams of difference came from the Kate Greenaway frocks and coats affected by the esthetic. And these made us so conspicuous among other little girls who did not Greenaway that our serenity was entirely destroyed.

The beauty about present times is that a small girl may be dressed differently and yet not feel conspicuous. There are hundreds of different models and they come in nearly all the fabrics enjoyed by grown-ups. We are showing today a group of children's clothes which may be prepared for the fall and winter. Nearly all of these dresses are in thin materials, but overheated houses of the present day are inducing more and more mothers to continue summer clothes straight through the winter. Then, too, heavier materials may sometimes be substituted for the summery ones indicated here.

At the upper left of the page, under what Mulvaney calls the "giniral hould" of the English nurse, we find a charming little frock of white dotted swiss, combined with plain white batiste. You will see that the surplice blouse and the wide sash of batiste are so exactly like the debutante's frock that no 6 year old can possibly be outraged.

For the real party frock voile is as much a favorite with the belle of 4 as with her of 24. Mothers of girls between this age and 14 may select it in a wide range of tints, lavender now being much liked for even the smallest of girls. In this second frock from the left what do we find, however, but the burnt orange which has been so popular this summer in more mature circles? This is trimmed only with rows of drawnwork, but the style—just one ruffle after another—is charming and unusual enough to need no other touch. This frock is designed for the girl of from any waist line and trimmed with a big wave of a collar of em-3 to 8. The next dress is a flowered organdy made without broidered white batiste. The ruffles on the short puff sleeves are of the same material. Another voilette is the little frock at the upper right—this one in white which is finished with fine tucks and scattered with flowers in vari-colored silk.

The authoritative young woman who keeps a hand upon her young brother's collar is wearing a combination which is good in various materials. Here the plaited skirt is plaid gingham, the coat is plain gingham, and the frilled underwaist is fine white lawn. For winter wear, however, one may have the skirt of plaid wool, the coat of black velvet, and the underwaist of the same material as here. This is always a charming and becoming style for the girl of from five to ten or eleven.

Those jolly English prints which have been recruited for the morning frocks of grown-up young ladies are by no means interdicted from the domain of childhood. The fact of it is that some of the most winsome little girl frocks of this present summer have been made of this material. It is a serviceable fabric, too, and for that reason the idea of applying it to rompers is a most excellent one. The little boy here shows you how it is done.

Another little boy is wearing a white linen sailor suit with blue collar. And the chapter ends with a delightful little yellow organdy tucked and finished with a black velvet girdle which ends in long streamers.

Meanwhile grown-up modes are already catching a few echoes from the Grand Prix. This race, taking place just before the Paris dressmakers held their openings, gives us a few significant hints. One concerns the tremendous vogue of black. Another concerns the almost equally tremendous vogue of white—ivory, rather. And a third has to do with the stunning combinations of black and white.

Much lace was seen at the Paris races and the favored weave again seems to be Chantilly. You may have it of black draped over white or with equal decorum you transpose. Then again there need be no contrast. A black over black or a white over white is sometimes quite good enough for the Parisienne.

Side panels continue to float on the ambient air, but even newer than these are the polonaise effects in black net or some other filmy material wondrously embroidered in white. These polonaises, as reported from Paris, dip sometimes almost to the heel over an exceedingly misty underfrock. Their feature is, as has been said, the marvelously dainty handwork.

One of the great hits of the Grand Prix was made by combining black net skirt with corsage of white. This is a style of which we may soon expect to see much on this side. Already, indeed, some of the most unusual and charming frocks for resort wear have observed the law of a bodice of different material from the skirt. The black velvet peasant bodice with short sleeves has, for example, been successfully combined with skirt of white thin material, a particularly stunning example of this being obtained in a frock where the skirt was of white voile with large velvet dots.

The DIRTY PUFF and the IRATE OBSERVER

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

THE gentlemen have the floor and the subject, my dears, is—what do you think? No, not prohibition; not home rule for Ireland; not enforced military training! No, my dears, it is our own beloved powder puff that is up before the house.

Whether it be an article for use behind closed doors or whether it has its place in a public conveyance or restaurant, the speaker rises to debate upon. And he debates, as you may have seen in our well known newspaper, that it offends his eye and his etiquette (two portions of a gentleman which should never suffer offense from any young lady who would appear beautiful) when a powder puff of e'en virginal whiteness is produced and applied publicly. And when a soiled puff or chamois is unearthed from the dark recesses from whence such things are wont to issue, his sense of decency is just plain outraged!

Now, since we aim to please and we know it isn't to please our own sex, a little attention to the speaker's remarks may not be amiss.

A bit old fogy, we'll agree, is his idea that the powder puff is for the eyes of woman only! But not so old fogy about the soiled puff or chamois skin.

This particular complainant cited the incident of being seated comfortably in a palm bedecked and well fanned place of eating, with soul attuned to music not of jazz syncopation, and food well chosen, when along comes a pretty miss in pretty shoes and pretty frock and pretty hat. Her dashing "lieut" stands at attention while the formality of her being properly seated by the paid gentleman of the dining room is gone through. This being done according to Hoyle, the young lady digs down deep into a dark archive of the traveling vault hanging lifeless from her arm and produces a chamois skin resembling nothing so much as the rag he saw in the hands of the window washer at his office. The result—his soul was no longer attuned to the summer breeze and the low, sweet strains.

All of which goes to prove there are things even unto murder a girl may get away with, but there are crimes like unto a soiled powder rag for which a man could hang her.

There is something laughable about a man rising up in protest against a feminine foible—perhaps his utter helplessness, of which he is quite as conscious as you or I!

But down in the bottom of her well intentioned heart there breathes no maid or matron who would deliberately have a man carry away an impression that she has soiled possessions about her. But with true feminine inconsistency some of us will produce an offender like that complained about above and expect that to be taken for just a slight lapse from a well ordered life.

Puffs have by the aid of clever producers been made into conceits that please the eye. Or they may be home made and be quite as pleasing. They may be hidden in folds of dainty Dresden or be done up in a smartly monogrammed box. There are all manner of covers to keep the puff itself of a pleasing white or pink.

"There are three D's to be recommended for the public use of the article in question," says a man interviewed on the subject—"delicacy, daintiness, and deftness." In other words, the operation should be performed in public only when it is necessitated by the shiny nose and then done as quickly, as neatly, and as quietly as possible. "After all," he adds, "it is part of a woman's toilette, and if a man were to shine his nails or curl his mustache or produce a pocket comb and run it quickly through his hair, wouldn't the whole body of women reformers rise up instantly in protest?"

There is a trick about washing a powder puff or a chamois rag which you may not be familiar with and which ignorance may be responsible for your being among the class under attack. Even the tiny puffs you use with the powder packets may be washed this way. The larger ones respond even more readily and fluffily to the treatment.

Make a rich suds of any good white soap and when the water is warm [not hot] stick the puffs in; let soak for a couple of minutes and wash; then rinse in a warm, soapy water. This last feature is the thing to remember. If you rinse in a clear water the article will not be pliable and fluffy when dry. It is the only way you can wash chamois satisfactorily.

Wash the puffs or chamois frequently. It will not hurt the wearing quality and even if it did there would still be no economy in letting it go unwashed. If you keep applying it to the face with yesterday's dirt still clinging you are contributing to a skin that eventually will look full of little black pin holes. You remember you apply the powder in public when your nose is shiny or when your face looks cloudy and when it in reality is soiled after an hour or two away from the wash bowl and naturally you will carry off on the powder rag soil and possible germs.

Besides, e'en though we may laugh at the irate gentleman who doth protest at the publicity given what, in his mind, should be a boudoir intimacy, we know the shock we get when we see a nice girl in nice clothes produce a soiled handkerchief, or show a soiled looking corset cover beneath a sheer waist, or continue wearing a soiled collar and cuff set day after day, or wearing dirty finger nails at a luncheon party.

It isn't hard to imagine, therefore, the pain of disillusion of a soiled powder rag in a public place.

Answers to Inquiries.

ANNA MAY: I DO NOT APPROVE of strenuous exercise if you are trying to gain in weight, but of course a certain amount of exercise is necessary to stimulate to activity the vital organs—heart, lungs, stomach, liver, and skin. A woman 5 feet 2 inches in height at the age of 23 should weigh 118 pounds. I shall be glad to send you my instructions on gaining weight if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

SUNBURN: EQUAL PARTS GLYCerin and limewater it is. Ever so many people have written me of the efficiency of this remedy for sunburn. The sun when given too much liberty with your hair will fade its color out, but I have noticed with most people the damage is not permanent. Hours every day under the boiling rays without a hat is damaging and I would advise against it. Just give your hair the usual care with its nightly brushings and shampoo every two weeks and gradually the old luster and shade will return.

S. E.: A WAY TO DEVELOP ankles? Walking on level ground, up and downstairs, and walking on the tips of the toes all help. Then, keeping the body erect, sway forward and backward alternately from the ankles only, without bending the knees. Then stand with feet slightly apart, bend the ankles out and in alternately as far as possible each way.

PATER: IN MILD CASES OF PERspiring feet common baking soda added to the foot bath is good. Two drams of alum to a pint of alcohol is recommended for more severe cases.

How to Fight High Cost of Living

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Have you won in the fight with the high cost of living? Have you worsted the bugaboo of soaring prices? How have you done it? Have you made a schedule of economy? Have you made over your old clothes? Have you found a new way of earning an extra dollar or so? Have you found that some things you considered necessities are only luxuries? Have you taken your pleasures with an eye to saving money instead of spending as much as possible? Write and tell us your experience. For each letter printed which tell how you have met the problem of the high cost of living "The Tribune" will pay $1. Address High Cost of Living Editor, "Chicago Tribune."

LETTERS KEEP COMING.

NO SIGNS of slackening in the letters which are coming in with suggestions for beating down the excessive cost of living.

If there are more women than men who send in tried and tested methods it is because women have more directly to do with the articles of food and clothing which have soared the highest.

That men are quite as interested in the problem as women is attested by the many masculine ideas which come in, regarding automobiles and the chances to cut down their expenses, regarding car fares and luncheons, and regarding the making of extra money in spare hours.

Men are economizing just as honestly and just as seriously as women. And in many instances a woman can take advantage of ideas which men send in. For example, the girl or woman who works downtown can profit from the same economies which the workingman employs. She can eat less expensive luncheons, can walk oftener instead of riding, and can often save quite a considerable amount on small incidental expenses which have such a way of mounting up before one realizes their magnitude.

Saves on Sheets.

When my sheets and pillow cases begin to show wear, but are not yet broken, I "turn them." The sheets I open down the middle, sew the selvage edges together, and put a narrow hem along each side. With the pillow cases, I cut the seam at the bottom, refold so the center will be at the outside, make a new seam and thus my sheets and pillow cases wear half as long again.

Home Made Soap.

Save all fat cooked or uncooked for about two or three weeks. When you have quite an amount, say about a pan full, boil this fat together with two cups of lye and two cups of water.

Let same boil for about one hour until it is jelly-like and a canary yellow color. Let same cool, then take the cake out and cut in small squares and dry and harden by setting cakes of soap on the porch. This sure is a money saver.

MRS. E. N.

Swallow Pride.

I can afford to spend only so much a month for amusements. There are a number of good shows in town I want to take my girl to see but can't afford to.

"You see how things stand," I told her. "Would you rather go to one and have ground floor seats or see several and sit with me in the 'roost'?"

"I'd rather go to the gallery and see them all," she replied. By swallowing our pride we have choked the H. C. of L. amusements.

T. W.

Recently I accepted a position outside of the loop. My friends thought I was foolish. However, this is what I found:

I receive $15 more a month for the same kind of work I was doing in the loop. It is necessary for me to carry my lunch, which means a saving of about $2 a week. At night on my way to the station I buy fruit and vegetables, saving from 3 to 5 cents on a purchase, compared with the prices our grocer asks. In all, I figure that I save $5 a week by working outside of the loop.

Her First Solo.

My most embarrassing moment occurred when I was about to sing my first solo at a wedding held in church. It being my first attempt, naturally I was very nervous. While the minister was saying the fateful words, "Do you take this," etc., I sat up in the choir loft, desperate to the point of getting up and walking out at the eleventh hour. A sensation of dumbness crept over me, and at the thought of not being able to utter a sound I grew so frightened that I was obliged to hum a few bars of the song to test myself. Any one can readily imagine my chagrin when a wail greeted my ears, which may have been C, C sharp, G, or A, but which nevertheless proved that my voice was all there. Being so decidedly unnerved, I lost all self-control, with the result that the auditorium of the church echoed and reechoed with the sound of my voice, which I thought had failed me. H. G.

Looking for a Telephone.

I was looking for a public telephone and thought I would find one in a large office building. I walked through and at last saw a public telephone sign and as I was in a hurry I rushed through the doors and found myself in the middle of a saloon. The bartender looked up and said: "What will you have, miss?" I was so surprised that I could not speak for a few minutes, but finally said I was looking for a public telephone. As I was backing out the elevator starter saw me and, as he knew me, asked if I was in for an eye-opener. I then decided my telephoning could wait, and rushed out of the building.

Twin Brides.

The strangest wedding ceremony I ever witnessed was a double wedding of twin sisters. It was not only out of the ordinary but a little uncanny to see the father walking up the aisle of the church with two brides, one on each arm, both dressed exactly alike in white satin trailing robes. They were so much alike that in the excitement of the moment the future husbands could not tell them apart and claimed the wrong brides at the foot of the altar where they stood with their father. The two young women allowed their future husbands to be fooled until the preacher asked the fatal question, and then the mistake was made known, much to the embarrassment of the men.

A Slip of the Tongue.

I'm quite sure the most embarrassing moment of my life was when I met my friend Jim ——, whose very rich father had just died. Intending to extend to him an expression of my sympathy, by some lapsus linguae, I said to him: "Jim, I've just heard of your father's death and I want to extend to you my sincerest congratulations."

A Million Babies—and One Pair of Pink Cheeks

WHEN my doctor told me to give my baby Nestlé's Milk Food because I couldn't nurse him, I said "Have many babies been brought up on it?"

He smiled. "Right here in the United States", he said, "at this minute there are many thousands of babies keeping well and strong on Nestlé's. All over the world it's the same way—and that will give you some idea of how many babies have kept well on Nestlé's Food during the past fifty years."

And yet it wasn't all those millions of babies that convinced me. It was the pink cheeks of my own baby.

Nestlé's is made out of pure milk, to which has been added just the right amount of cereal and of pure sugar. This is made into a fluffy powder, which makes the curds of the milk easy to digest. You just add cold water, boil, and your baby has the food nearest to mother's milk—free from the germs of raw cow's milk—safe, clean—almost sure to bring him pink cheeks and a sturdy, dimpled little body.

I found that the Nestlé Company likes to save babies and keep them well. They sent me free enough Nestlé's for twelve feedings and a very interesting and valuable Mother's Book about how to take care of babies. All you have to do is to fill out the coupon below.

NESTLÉ'S MILK FOOD

Nestlé's is pure milk in powder form, that is already modified and does not require the further addition of milk. Always pure and safe, always uniform, and free from the dangers of home modification, Nestlé's has stood the test of three generations and has today the largest sale of any baby food in the world.

FREE! Enough Nestlé's for 12 feedings. Send the coupon!

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

By Mary Brush Williams

FRENCH TAKING UP COLORS.

PARIS.—[Special correspondence.]—The Americans this year served notice, as it were, on the French. They told them that unless they produced something really new in the way of styles, the Americans would cut loose and do their own designing for good and all. Our buyers insist that for three years past they have come over here to look at styles we have rejected or got through with at home. A few of the richest women of America in a little tea party at the Ritz were saying they would never bother with French houses again. They protested that the French couturiers were a nuisance and would not trouble to make things adaptable to the American silhouette, but that they wished to pour the tall, slender American figure into the short, fat French mold. The women went so far in their indignation as to assert that the American style makers had more chic than these acknowledged arbiters of fashion over here.

This is a point on which I, an ardent American, can never agree with my countrywomen. Anything they wish to say on the tenacity and general difficultness of the French couturiers I wish to put my name to also, but there surely can be no serious doubt that they have the world beat for chic.

The couturiers took the threat of the Americans seriously. They were terribly distressed, yet too, they were terribly drained. The war is over, but the effects of it are not. France is still anaemic and a great deal of her art and talent lies buried. Yet the designers of France did their best to get up something new and chic for our people. They are even taking up colors for our sake. All of the Latins, you know, think it is bad form to go on the street in a costume that does not swath them in a pitch black tragic gloom. They get black and dreary colors up around their faces. An American woman who has become so French that she is as snobbish about it as the Anglomaniacs about England, said deprecatingly, "The English and Americans are insane about colors." The French this season are trying hard to get used to colors for the street.

The accompanying costume with the shawl collar is in brilliant green! Even the British might not care to go so far in the way of coloring themselves for the street. Just the same the dress seems to me to be awfully smart, and I should not think the Americans would dare to say of the nation that made it that that nation had no chic. I should say that it even contained more than one idea for us to adopt with profit. The shawl collar edged with beaded fringe is awfully becoming and I do not see why conservative America cannot go in for the audacious touch of having side panels longer than the skirt.

O, yes, I can, too—because the skirts are so long that nothing could go them one better! It is very amusing to watch the Americans arrive here, look askance at French skirts, protest stoutly that they will never change their own, which are four inches above their long pointed, flat heeled shoes; then weakly, in about a fortnight, inquire what the French is for "make shorter." The next thing you know they have a maid in their rooms, sewing by the day. When they appear the next time their skirts have reached their shoe tops. You really ought to get them up at least two inches, you know. Now that the French are putting theirs down, we might go so far as to meet them half way.

But to return to the matter of this particular costume: The panel and the cape are of embroidery, brightly flowered. The creator of it thoroughly approved also of having the panels duplicated in brightly flowered silk. The circular band and the panels starting low on the hips has a tendency to make one look slender. When the mannequin displays this costume she carries a stick. It is of ivory and bound with leather thongs. The hat is of velvet, with an overdress of tulle that drops in an edge from the brim.

"In time of peace prepare for war" is an axiom which I fear the league of nations has not rendered meaningless yet. At least, it will always have an appropriateness in the realm of fashion. While we are at peace in the quiet middle of summer, we are seekly laying mines for that early winter fashion fight, when the victory goes to the smartest. One could scarcely appear in the fur trimmed tailleur in any zone short of the arctic in this month, but the damage which it will do in the months to come, at the Ritz at tea time, on the streets of Paris, is serious indeed. Many of the coats are very long, like this one, and some of them have their waist lines farther down. The last item will undoubtedly sound a glad note to Americans. The accompanying model is made of material in the new rust color. It illustrates the new costume with the fullness in the coat tails. The wide bands of fur which run around the bottom of the coat, down one side, and constitute its high collar, is of loutre, or seal. The side buttons on the collar are especially smart this year. All of the fashionable fur pieces, either sewn on the coats or separate from them, are made like collars, with buttons. The small hat accompanying is of loutre fur.

Lou don't have to accept everything that is shown you, you know. I do not wish to be misunderstood to say that the accompanying evening dress would be appropriate for the Chicago bud, just as it stands. But it is so naively, so spontaneously French! A modest young girl out in the suburbs made it as her unaffected expression of what a chic dinner and dance dress should be. One of the big houses accepted it and made it into a model. I should think that with its airy tulle bow in the back with its long, trailing end now so fashionable, and its surplice bodice different on the two sides, it ought to contain an idea for you at home. The lace is of ochre and the tulle is black. The draped skirt is made of the black tulle. As for the bow, you can't go wrong on it, for bows are everywhere.

An Objection.

When I was at my cousin's wedding everything was going along very nicely. Just after the minister said "Has any one any objection to these two being wed?" my baby brother cried out "Da, da." L. S.

In Gondolas.

The strangest and, I may say, one of the prettiest weddings I have seen, took place in Venice, California. The bridal party were seated in one gondola, which was beautifully decorated, while the guests were seated in other gondolas. The gondolas moved slowly until the one containing the bridal party reached a beautiful spot, just under a bridge, and here the ceremony was performed. X. Y. Z.

Better Late than Never.

The strangest wedding I ever saw was that of an aged aunt, who in her youth had had a suitor who went off to make his fortune and never returned until, old and infirm, but wealthy, he returned to claim his old sweetheart, who was so feeble she had to remain in a wheel chair during the ceremony. THE CHRONIC BORROWER.

INCONSISTENT as it seems, there are some women in the business world who are unbusiness-like enough to borrow money from their associates and forget to return it. There is no distinction made between forgetting to return borrowed goods and getting them with the deliberate intention of retaining them entirely, as far as the lender is concerned. A woman who lends any of her possessions rarely if ever forgets the transaction, and it is hard for her to imagine that the failure to return her property is not done intentionally.

The propensity for borrowing, even when the goods are conscientiously returned, becomes a repulsive habit when indulged continually.

A girl who has been the victim of a "borrower" of the type that fails to make return writes me in part as follows:

"The girl in our office who is constantly borrowing from all of us makes no pretense of being hard up and usually admits that she wants the money for some luxury, and her excuse for borrowing is that it is too inconvenient for her at the moment to draw her money out of the bank.

"She is extremely careful about her own money, and if in an emergency some one asks her for the loan of a small amount, she expresses deep regret at not being able to oblige but she has just deposited all her money in the bank.

"She has practiced borrowing from nearly every one of the girls in the office, but lately when we discovered that she was forgetting to return small sums we got together and decided to turn her down thereafter. Now we all refuse to be victimized and when she requests a loan the office is suddenly and mysteriously entirely out of cash.

"She is an attractive girl, and if it weren't for the fact that she tries to make other people pay for her luxuries she would without doubt be the most popular girl in the office.

"The men fussed about her a good deal until lately. She has never to my knowledge borrowed from any of the men, but they are evidently aware of her penchant of acquiring other people's money, as they have dropped her cold.

"Would you say something about this in your column? I know from my experience in other offices that the borrowing habit is not limited to this office."

It is unfortunately true that the borrowing habit is not limited to the office mentioned in the above letter. The chronic borrower is with us everywhere, and has made of herself a general nuisance.

Any one of us will admit that in an emergency we find it a great convenience to be able to make a loan, and that, I believe, is one of the reasons why we hate to have this privilege abused.

However, to be constantly calling upon a person for a loan is a selfish and inconsiderate act, but to forget or neglect to return the money is dishonorable.

The HOME HARMONIOUS

A SHINGLE BUNGALOW ON A TWENTY-FIVE FOOT LOT

COURTESY OF THE AMERICAN BUILDER

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

THE BUNGALOW TYPE.

SOME ONE has expressed the opinion that the ideal home is a small house with a number of large rooms in it. That, obviously, is impossible, but the bungalow type of architecture comes near to realizing this expressed ideal. However, I would add to that recipe a large porch, where comfort is to be found in the summer time. It would contribute to the beauty of the home.

A porch such as is shown in the accompanying design is a mighty desirable feature. The impression created by the exterior appearance of a house is largely determined by the construction of the porch and the front of the house. If we were building a house we believe that a porch finished in such a distinctive manner as the one shown would not only make the exterior attractive, but would furnish us with a place where solid comfort would be found during several months of the year.

But aside from the appearance of this little five room bungalow, it has many admirable features—features that make it a home that is all that word implies.

While the dimensions of this house are only 24 by 48 feet, 6 inches, which is suited to the narrow lots found in cities and suburbs, the layout of the rooms and their size provide ample accommodations for a family of four, or perhaps five persons. The living room extends across the front of the house, being 23 by 12 feet. The two large windows facing out onto the porch and the smaller ones at either end make this a cheerful, well lighted room. The fireplace is at one end of the room and on either side are high windows with built-in bookcases underneath. The room is large enough so that there is plenty of wall space to accommodate furniture of all descriptions and gives the home furnisher an opportunity to create an artistic sitting room.

The dining room, 11 by 15 feet, has a buffet built into the bay, which has three windows, the center one fixed and the others casements. A kitchen, 11 by 11 feet, adjoins the dining room to the rear, while on the opposite side of the home are two bedrooms, with the bath between them and connected with a hall. Opening off the rear bedroom is a sleeping porch, 7 feet 6 inches, by 11 feet 6 inches. The sleeping porch is another modern feature of this good design. Two of its walls are almost continuous windows which are glazed for cold weather and screened during the warm months.

The bungalow is of frame construction set on a concrete foundation and has shingle siding. The pillars and foundation of the porch are made of cement bricks, but faced clay bricks in the various shades may be substituted. The railing is of concrete slabs. The chimney also is of faced brick, some smooth and others rough, which add to the artistic effect. The unusual railing around the window in the gable is a noticeable novelty.

A concrete floor in the basement provides a well drained, cool storage place for food and vegetables, while one part is divided off to accommodate the heating plant and the fuel supply. There is an unusually large attic space, in fact, room enough for a good sized playroom or storage room.

Answers to Inquiries.

MRS. J. F. L.—Use plain gray Wilton carpet for your living room. For your windows use lace shades with overcurtains of gold colored gauze. Walnut dining furniture in William and Mary style will look well in your dining room.

* *

MRS. B. G.: Use only the piano light on the piano. Your rugs should be one tone plain carpet. Gold colored silk gauze curtains with nine inch shirred valance would look well on your windows in both living rooms. Side lights, say four with two lights each, would be good for each room, ivory or antique gold, all alike, with shields made of gold silk. Use a console table under a French mirror in the hall. Candlesticks would be good, but do not use shields. For your bedroom candle lights use blue shields. For the bedroom table use a small lamp in ivory or gold. You could use the same color and kind of drapery material in the dining room as is used in the living rooms.

MRS. H. P.: I would enamel the woodwork in old ivory, stain the new floors in chestnut brown color, use a soft fawn colored all-over design wallpaper and two candle light side brackets, in ivory or antique gold finished. No ceiling fixture. Use a large plain gray or fawn colored rug, 14 feet wide and long enough to reach from beginning of bay to the hearth. Small oriental rugs may be used for the bay and in front of the east window. Gold, blue, or mulberry transparent gauze silk overcurtains with a 9 inch valance will look well at the windows with a lace roller shade, or net curtains to window sill.

MRS. A. D.: Enamel the living room woodwork and mantel in ivory tone. Use net curtains at the windows with overcurtains of gold colored gauze, looped back. Use all over soft gray or fawn colored design paper for living room walls. Plain colored rug for living room and blue pattern rug for dining room. In the hall use a small table with mirror above. In the living room add a davenport and two or three arm or side chairs. It will be difficult to get an artistic lighting effect without electricity. For the bedrooms use dainty flowered wallpaper, cretonne overcurtains with scrim curtains below.

MRS. R. M. A.: Use pink or blue flowered or plain rose linen over curtains with short shirred valance. The linen curtains may be trimmed with strips of flowered cretonne.

ETIQUETTE

by ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

Questions on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

MRS. J. L. M.: You are entirely in the right in thinking that girls of 16 are too young to be allowed to go to the theater at night unchaperoned. I am sure that if you put the matter up to your daughter perfectly, frankly, and directly she will be reasonable about it and do as you wish.

T. K. H.: When a man tells you he has enjoyed dancing with you, you need only smile and thank him and say that you, too, have liked it.

* *

M. B.: Upon receipt of a stamped, addressed envelope I shall be happy to send you a list of reliable books on etiquette.

* *

G. D. K.: While walking with a girl and her mother your place is on the outside of the walk, regardless of which one is next to you. When you meet a young woman who attracts you there is certainly no harm in telephoning her to ask if you may call. She will doubtless be flattered by your attention.

* *

E. V. C.: It always looks more courteous for young girls to rise to acknowledge introductions, whether they are meeting people of their own age or not. Of course, there are exceptions to this rule, as to all others. For instance, when at dinner in a hotel or restaurant, a man comes to your table and is presented to you it would be embarrassing for him to have you stand. But even in such a crowded and busy place, if the newcomer be a woman, this little extra civility is in order. Shaking hands is a more or less informal proceeding not to be indulged in on ceremonious occasions unless the other person extends his hand, when, of course, to refuse would be sheer rudeness.

GRATEFUL READER: You are quite right in thinking that it is the boy's place to write first to you.

ORANGE AND OTHER ICES.

IT is to the yellow part of the rind of an orange, which contains an oil, and not to the juice of the orange, that we must go for a stable orange flavor. The aroma and flavor of the juice are exceedingly volatile, therefore it becomes flat of flavor in no time. And besides this, orange juice at this season of the year is likely to be exceedingly insipid.

Despite these facts, the ever thirsty crowd in the street today give their best patronage, seemingly, to those who are declaring that they have pure orange juice on tap. So popular has become this preparation recently of the breakfast table that there have appeared tiny street booths were nothing else is sold.

I am not speaking from a first hand knowledge of these orange beverages being so dispensed, but I knew something about a similar one which I believe the pure food officials retired some time since. That left a solid ring of some unedible precipitate around the glass globe from which it was drawn. Therefore my stomach, through the kind assistance of my eyes, looks askance at these so perfectly orange colored drinks. I acknowledge, however, that science is making constant progress in perfecting methods of preserving both fruits and their juices.

The amateur attempting to make an orange juice or sirup is likely to get a more or less cloudy liquid. Freshly pressed out orange juice rarely has the clear orange shade of a slice of orange. People who are simply inspired to meet the present emergency may or may not be amateurs, therefore I am not wasting a stomach lining tasting their orange beverages, but I have tried to find a way to make an orange sirup for flavoring drinks and making ices that has some honest strength. Here is one way:

Wash an orange, or as many as you wish. Grate off the yellow skin only, and mix that from one orange with one tablespoon of sugar, and let stand over night. In the morning add the juice from the orange, and strain through a cheese cloth. Add the whole to a sirup of one cup of sugar and one-half cup of water, which has been cooked for five minutes. For a small amount of ice freeze the sirup made with one orange rind and the juice, with the fresh juice of two oranges.

This makes such an ice as is pictured as "an afternoon orange ice," which is served in the carpels of an orange distended, and outside of which is the skin fancifully manipulated. To prepare the orange take out the stem bit and cut off a thin slice from the other end, so that it will stand up firmly. Cut the skin all around in thin strips nearly down to where a slice of the skin was removed. Turn these in, open out the carpels of the orange and put in the ice box to chill. When ready to serve the orange ice, spread open the carpels with a spoon, put in orange ice, heaped up, and serve. Candied orange peel around the orange add to the afternoon refreshment effect.

For a small company it would not be too much of a task to prepare oranges for this service, not as much as to scallop skins and tie ribbons in them, a foolish thing it seems to me. And there is greater method in the madness of the idea, if it is mad one, than one might suppose at first thought. Much of our eating of ices in summer is a dilatory amusement more than anything else. When we get to the last two or three teaspoons we begin to realize how good it was and how too bad it is we have come to the end. I will pledge myself to the truth of this psychological fact. Well, then, let us eat the carpels of the orange after the ice, and end with a greater feeling of satisfaction. And after that we can nibble the candied orange peel. This orange ice so served then may be quite a social triumph.

By the way, the allowing of the grated orange peel to stand overnight with sugar is quite necessary, and the recipe which suggested this to me prescribed a little alcohol as well as sugar.

Orange ice and sherbet preperations may always be flavored up by adding lemon juice, and when we have not made our orange sirup a day in advance, orange and lemon juice combined, sweetened, and frozen, may give almost as satisfactory results, especially if we also use milk.

There are somewhat the same reasons for using milk in what we used to call "water ices" as in using it in tea, reasons easy to recognize when the experiment is tried, as in the following: Juice of four oranges, juice of one lemon, plain sugar or better orange sirup to sweeten—about a cup—and a pint of milk or more. Combine the sirup and the juices, then add the milk slowly and do not be frightened if it should curdle. Beat it with an egg beater if it does. One can make quite excellent ice cream with sour cream and lemon juice, lightening it up in freezing by the addition of egg white. The wholesomeness of this has been quite widely recognized, so that sour cream and sour milk and cottage cheese ice creams are publicly sold at certain health resorts.

One can make fruit ices with that softening and whitening effect that milk gives without having either fresh milk or fresh cream. Use milk powder instead.

While experimenting with a new ice cream freezer without a turning apparatus, we tried the following commercial recipe for an ice cream with malted milk: One and a half tablespoons of malted milk, one cup of water, one tablespoon of sugar, one tablespoon of cream, one and a half teaspoons of vanilla extract. Finding this insipid, we tuned it up with lemon juice and more sugar, and then not satisfied, we added to it about a half cup of cherry jam and got a satisfactory fruit ice.

Many eat and get enjoyment eating ices of hardly more character than this had before we began to make it over, but it is easy to tell why they are defective, and pleasant to try to improve them.

The new freezer requires less ice, and working as it does, on the thermos bottle principle, to make ices and ice creams with it is to save not only the work of turning the crank but a great deal of mussiness.

When we have to buy our ice cream, we can give it an individual touch by covering it completely with a meringue and putting it in a hot oven to brown. If it is completely protected underneath by cake and all over the top with whipped egg white, it is not melted the slightest when put into the oven. In the United States this combination has been called "baked Alaska." In Europe it is called "omelet surprise." The surprise comes when it is served quickly enough because of the contrast between the hot meringue and the cold cream.

One way to get this surprise is to make it in individual portions. Put a slice of sponge cake on a small white enameled plate. Put on this a slice of an ice cream brick, and cover entirely with the stiffly beaten and slightly sweetened and flavored egg white. Sprinkle with sugar and put in a hot oven, or under the broiler to brown a minute.

An English recipe for this preparation served in an ornamental fashion or decorated like a cake reads: "Cut according to the shape of dish to be used, a round or oval piece of Genoese cake, half inch in thickness, scoop out some of the center portion and fix the shape on a plated dish. Have ready the soufflée mixture (meringue). Fill the cake shape with rich vanilla ice cream, give it a dome shaped appearance, and cover quickly with the soufflée mixture; decorate the surface with the same mixture forced through a cornet (paper cone). Dredge with icing sugar and bake in a fierce oven for about five minutes. The ice must be well frozen and covered completely with the preparation. It is essential that the dish be sent to the table immediately it leaves the oven."

A quite ordinary ice cream is improved a hundred per cent by being dressed up in this fashion. It is an easier thing to do than to pack a bomb or make some of the fancy mixtures and molds of ice, and requires but the simplest equipment.

Ices in beverages with beaten egg white and whipped cream are compositions that it behooves us to learn to make. At any rate we are faced with the possibility of making delightful and often easy liquid desserts with sirups, milk, fruits enhaloed in these ways.

All measurements are made level in these recipes. A teaspoon of regulation size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Sixteen level tablespoons equal one cup (one-half pint). The half-pint measuring cup is the standard measuring cup used in modern cookery.

By Elizabeth O. Hiller.

SEASONABLE RECIPES.

TO make tea scald an earthen or china teapot; drain; add the required measure of tea, allowing one teaspoon for each half pint measuring cup of boiling water. Cover closely and let stand in a warm place from three to five minutes (according to the quantity), and not a moment longer. Strain into another scalded teapot and serve immediately, with or without cream and sugar.

Iced Tea.

Make tea according to the instructions given above, adding an extra teaspoon of tea for each pint of boiling water. Do not allow the tea to infuse longer than five minutes. Strain immediately into a pitcher. Allow the juice of two lemons for each pint of tea; then add sugar to sweeten to taste. Granulated sugar dissolves more quickly than squares of sugar. Stir until sugar is dissolved, turn into bottles with patent stoppers or glass fruit jars, cover securely, and when cold place on ice in a refrigerator to thoroughly chill. Serve in cold tall glasses or tea mugs, half filled with cracked ice, and a thin slice of lemon in each glass or mug.

Tea With Mint Leaves.

Follow recipe for making iced tea. Into each glass place three mint leaves and a teaspoon of sugar; let stand in a cool place until ready to serve; fill each glass to two-thirds its depth with cracked ice; then fill glasses with tea infusion. Pass fine sugar.

The mint leaves should not be crushed, as they are liable to impart a bitter flavor to the tea. Thrust a few sprigs of mint in top of each glass. These, too, may be dusted lightly with powdered sugar.

Jellied Salmon.

Drain the contents of a one pound can of salmon from the liquor in the can, rinse well with warm water and separate into small flakes. Sift together one-half tablespoon of flour, one teaspoon of mustard, one-half tablespoon of sugar, one-half tablespoon of salt, and a few grains of cayenne; add the slightly beaten yolks of two eggs, one and one-half tablespoons of melted butter, three-fourths cup of thin cream or milk, and slowly one-fourth cup of malt vinegar. Cook in a double boiler, stirring constantly until mixture thickens; add three-fourths tablespoon of gelatin, previously soaked in two tablespoons of cold water; then add to flaked salmon and stir until well blended. Fill individual molds, first dipped in cold water, chill. Unmold on serving platter. Garnish with slices of lemon dipped in finely chopped parsley and serve with cucumber sauce.

Cucumber Sauce.

Pare one medium sized cucumber, remove the large seeds and finely chop; drain in a sieve and keep in a cool place until ready to serve. Beat one-half cup of triple cream until stiff, season with salt and a few grains of cayenne; add gradually two tablespoons of vinegar, the drained cucumber, and onion juice to delicately flavor. Chill and serve with cold fish.

Boiled Shoulder of Lamb.

An economical piece of lamb is cut from the shoulder and may include the neck and the foreleg, the whole weighing about five or six pounds. This cut is less expensive than the hind quarter, is just as fine in flavor, and by careful cooking can be made equally as tender as the latter.

Wipe the meat with cheese cloth wrung from cold water, remove the bones and the stringy portions, sprinkle with salt, roll and truss in shape. Place in a kettle, cover with boiling water, and bring quickly to the boiling point; let boil rapidly five minutes, turn the meat and skim. Reduce the heat and let simmer at a temperature of 195 degrees until the meat is tender; when half cooked add one-half tablespoon of salt. Drain from the liquor, brush over with soft butter or dripping, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and dredge with flour; place in a hot oven, basting occasionally with some of the stock and fat in which it was cooked; when richly browned place on hot serving platter and surround with small boiled purple top turnips. Serve with caper sauce.

The stock may be strained and used as mutton broth.

Creamed Chicken in a Rice Border.

For a border mold holding one quart, wash and pick over one and one-half cups of rice, blanch and cook over a rather slow fire in three quarts of boiling salted water or equal parts of water and chicken broth. When soft, butter a border mold and pack carefully with the rice, taking care that it is filled solidly and evenly so that when it is turned on to the serving platter the rice will keep its shape. Set packed mold on several folds of heavy paper in a pan of boiling water and let cook in a moderate oven, while preparing the creamed chicken, as follows:

Melt one-fourth cup of butter with one-fourth cup of chicken fat; add one-half cup of flour sifted with one teaspoon of salt and one-fourth teaspoon of pepper; add gradually two and one-half cups of chicken broth from which all fat has been removed and one cup of milk mixed with one-half cup of thin cream, while stirring constantly until sauce is smooth. Reheat in the sauce three cups of cold cooked chicken cut in small cubes and one-half cup of mushrooms cut in thin slices. Turn mold of hot rice on a hot serving platter and fill with creamed chicken. Sprinkle the chicken with finely chopped parsley and the rice border with paprika. Serve as the chief dish for Sunday dinner, during the hot weather.

Caper Sauce.

Melt two and one-half tablespoons of butter in a saucepan, add three tablespoons of flour, mixed with one-half teaspoon of salt and one-eighth teaspoon of pepper; pour on gradually one and one-half cups of boiling water, stirring constantly until the sauce is smooth and clear. Let boil five minutes, then add two and one-half tablespoons of butter in small pieces, continue stirring until well blended. Add one-half cup of capers drained from the brine, let boil one minute. Serve with boiled mutton or lamb.

Succotash.

Cut hot boiled sweet corn from the cob; add an equal measure of hot boiled lima beans, the latter having been cooked in boiling salted water or equal parts of white stock and water. Mix thoroughly and dress with butter and two or more tablespoons of cream. Season with pepper and salt.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of the CHILDREN

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, "The Tribune," Chicago.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Albert had a wonderful head of long bright curls, and thus was awarded the nickname "Girl" by many companions. One day his father took him to the barber shop and had the curls cut off. On the way home they met a little boy friend who said, "Hello, Girl."

"Gwan," Albert responded, "I'se a boy now. I left the girl in that place."

Bobby slipped out of the house one Sunday morning last fall without saying a word to mother and upon his return he was scolded by her, adding: "And you know, Bobby, you could have easily been run over by an auto!"

"Why, mamma," he said, "don't you know its gasless Sunday!" E. H. O.

Julia was watching her mother pack her father's lunch and kept teasing for a piece of bread and butter. Mother was in a great hurry and told her to go and play; she didn't have time to wait on her. So Julia counted the slices of bread on the table—there were five—and said: "Mother, give me this one without any partner."

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

WAITING FOR THE RIGHT ONE.

HOPE was the only daughter and, as her mother died when she was an infant in arms, she was raised by her devoted father and brother, some fifteen years her senior. Every whim was gratified by her two guardians, and while she grew up to be a lovely maiden with numerous beaux and offers of marriage, it was a well known fact that she was hard to please. One by one she refused her suitors, and as the years rolled on people called her an old maid. "What they say doesn't worry me," she told me more than once. "I'll wait until the right one comes even though I'm as old as Mrs. Methuselah."

All went well until her father's health failed. This was the first cloud on her horizon, then came the blow that almost shattered her reason. Her brother, whom she worshiped, was murdered by a Negro.

A speedy trial sentenced the Negro to the gallows, but a few days before the execution a number of prominent Negroes circulated a petition begging the governor to commute the sentence to life imprisonment. When Hope heard this she immediately went to the state house and begged the governor not to stay the execution of the assassin who had taken her brother's life.

She was then a woman of 35—"a perfect full blown rose," as the governor (who was a widower) remarked to a friend. "Why," said he, "when she threw back her mourning veil and I beheld standing before me this incomparable woman, nothing in the world could have saved that Negro's life."

A few days later the governor called at her home to assure her that the death sentence would be carried out, and then he came for reasons of his own, for in less than a year he led her to the altar, his happy bride.

WHAT ONE MAY KNOW FROM FEET AND TOES

by Doris Blake

CINDERELLA-ING one's way into a lordly "manshing" with gold dishes and plush'm carpets and diamond studded chandeliers has been a much advertised route for the maid with the foot constructed after the print of the original maid with the croo-el stepmother.

The best laid plans of rich young men's mammas have been kicked to smithereens by a pair of saucy insteps aided and abetted by a twinkling ankle or two.

So feet, taken by and large, but not too large, may be spoken of as Highly Active Members of the Home Getters association.

The wise men of the east and the west and the north and the south have given the subject considerable thought since Eve used hers to walk herself out of the lovely garden, and their footnotes I offer here.

A long and slender foot with a well turned ankle indicates a fondness of literature, but love of admiration and social attentions alienate you from it. Many proposals will come to one with this kind of foot, but a husband she will have to go abroad for.

The foot of a flirt is one that is firm and well knit, so that when it is suspended or resting on the floor it shows no change of form.

A foot with a high arch indicates a high temper and pride of ancestry and highly sensitized nature. You are born to grace society; will marry a man much older, and much travel will be yours.

The masculine girl has a broad flat foot with large ankle bones. She comes of a family more sturdy and brave than aristocratic. Marriage will impair her fortune.

A foot with blue veins running over it and that is always damp indicates a nervous, quick tempered disposition; she must marry a rich man, as work is not one of her accomplishments.

A foot with a slight hollow in the ankle bone and with long shell like toenails promises much time wasted in luxury and pleasure.

A person with a high arched instep carries good luck into every house she enters.

If the right foot spreads a good deal more than the left, good fortune will come to the owner.

A flat footed person is not to be trusted.

If your left foot goes to sleep in the daytime an enemy is thinking of you.

If you are light on your feet and crave dancing parties you will have many good friends and much pleasure.

Get out of bed with the right foot first and you have good luck all that day. Get out with the left foot and the reverse is the case.

The habit of sitting on her foot indicates the girl will die an old maid.

To stub your foot violently forebodes a sickness.

Very bad luck is supposed to follow a step on your foot by a man with an artificial limb.

A narrow heel is a sign of ancient and honorable lineage.

The "spur heel" is plebeian.

A heel that spreads as wide as the ball of the foot is not frequent but it indicates a painfully proper person.

An artistic foot requires that the little toe curl inward.

If your little toe is hidden under the next toe you are prudent, kind and courteous.

People with turned in toes are born to ill luck. Preoccupied and absent minded people have them.

If your toes turn down it is a sign of wealth.

Toes joined together by a web are a sign of great luck to the possessor.

If the big toe is strong and broad it indicates an idealism checked by much good sense.

If your big toes lies flat on the floor and very broad, it is a sign you will rule everybody.

A big toe independent of the other toes indicates independence of nature.

If the toe next to the large toe is the longest a girl will have to support her husband.

Individually, pride and resolution are indicated by a wide space between the first two toes. If extremely wide, obstinacy is included.

If a man's second toe is longer than the first, he will have a wife taller than himself.

If your second toe is longer than your first you are a scold, will be boss of the home.

Cruelty is indicated by a second and third toe of the same length.

Stub your right toe and you will meet some one you will be glad to see; if the left, some one you would rather not see.

To step on your own toes is a sign of an enemy.

If some one steps on your toe it is a sign of a quarrel.

If your toe nails grow in it is the sign of lovers many; if your toe nails grow out you will not have any,

Varied Activities of Women

Jeanette Shearer, aged 13 years, of Worcester, Mass., is said to be the youngest person to have scaled the peak of Mount Rainier. The climb to the 14,408 feet elevation was made in thirteen hours and fifteen minutes.

Miss Elizabeth Bachringer of Yuma, Ariz., represents several professions. She runs a ranch, edits the Arizona Teachers' Journal, and is a graduate of Columbia university. She cuts six crops of alfalfa a year and is leader in the Business Women's club of Arizona, the membership of which is two-thirds Spanish.

Miss Louise Larned of West Point, N. Y., painter of the "Navy Girl" recruiting poster for yeomen battalion, and Miss Rose Stokes of New York have advanced from copying plans for big cruisers to putting in the details on the specifications and charts to be sent to the navy yards for submarines to defend the coasts.

During the war the Woman's Land Army of America placed 237,000 women on farms, and they did work which caused them to be accepted as a real factor in production. There were 258,000 in England's woman's land army and they saved the day for England.

In the fifteen southern states there were last year 9,026 girls' canning clubs organized by the home demonstration agents. These clubs had a total membership of 286,278. Of these members 77,264 cultivated one-tenth acre plots; others had one-twentieth acre, and still others were in bread and poultry clubs.

Mrs. H. W. Somers, wife of Gen. Somers of civil war fame, has the distinction of shaking the hand of twenty United States presidents.

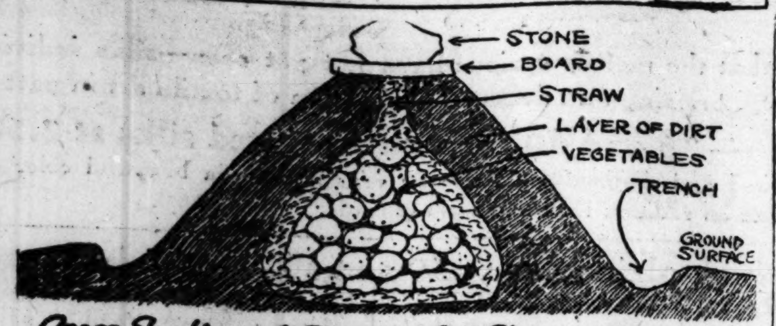
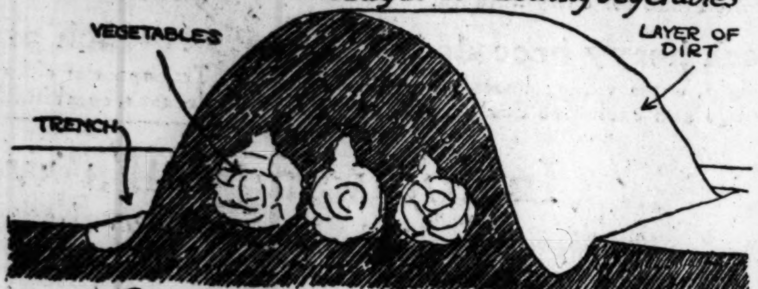
HOW TO STORE VEGETABLES

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

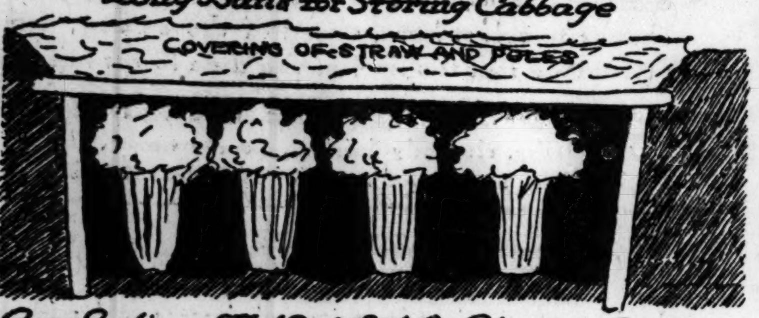
By Frank Ridgway.



Cross Section of Storage Pit Showing Vegetables



Long Bank for Storing Cabbage



Cross Section of Hot-Bed Pit for Storing Celery

"HUNDREDS of dollars' worth of vegetables go to waste every fall out here where I live," remarked a suburbanite the other day. "Too many gardeners are satisfied to grow just enough vegetables for home use during the summer and never stop to think that the surplus can be stored in the winter. I would consider that a great part of my labor had been lost if I could not grow enough vegetables to do my family most of the winter. It's like putting money in the bank.

"In 1909 I dug up the lot back of my home and planted my first garden and I have never failed to grow enough vegetables to last our family until late spring, and several years I have stored more than we could use," he said. "If I have a surplus I can always find a good market during the winter months."

Home storing is always important, but especially so this year, and is one of the most effective ways of reducing living expenses this winter. This has been an exceptionally favorable year for growing vegetable crops and many have been fortunate enough to supply the family needs during the summer and have a sufficient quantity for the winter use. In such cases storing will prove an economy. Many have been able to grow late vegetables for the purpose of storing. Such vegetables as potatoes, sweet potatoes, turnips, beets, carrots, celery, parsnips and similar crops may be successfully stored in their natural condition. It is not difficult to store such crops and experience is not necessary. Good storing facilities already exist in many homes. If not they are easily prepared.

Cellar Desirable.

The excuse is frequently offered by gardeners that they have no place to store vegetables, and those that are not used in the home are sold or allowed to decay in the garden. There are numerous types of storages from the primitive pits and caves that have been used for many years, up to the elaborate refrigerated plants. The cellar has always been a desirable place to store vegetables, and is still commonly used on the farms, but many of them have been crowded out in cities and even in small towns. Cellars under dwellings offer good conditions for storing vegetables if they can be kept cool and well ventilated, but many of them lack these requirements.

Basements may in some cases be used with safety, but frequently a furnace is used for heating the dwelling and it is too hot and dry for some vegetables. However, they may be used where the furnace is located in one corner. A storage room can be partitioned off in the opposite corner away from the heat. The room should be near an outside window so the temperature can be regulated.

Where permanent places for storing vegetables are not available, and this is often the case with the home gardener who is operating on a small scale, it becomes an outdoor proposition. That need not be discouraging, for outdoor storage in cellars, caves and pits may be done at a small cost and with entire satisfaction. They are particularly desirable where there is limited space in the home, as the storing facilities are very inexpensive and are often the means of saving vegetables that would otherwise be wasted.

Pit Is Practical.

There are a few fundamental principles that must be kept in mind regardless of the kind of storage facilities used. Whether it is elaborate or simple the vegetables must be protected from extreme cold and heat as well as from the light. They must also be kept where it is not too dry or too wet.

The pit or bank is used very generally and successfully, and is probably the most practical for the small gardener. It may be used for the storing of such vegetables as potatoes, beets, carrots, parsnips, turnips, salsify and celery. Select a well drained location in the garden and pile the vegetables on the surface of the ground; or a better way is to make a shallow excavation of suitable size about eight inches deep, and line it with straw, or dry leaves and heap the vegetables up in conical piles. Then cover them with a thick layer of straw and at first with earth to a depth of three inches. Of course this will only protect them during light freezes and as winter approaches more dirt should be added from time to time until it is several inches thick. The depth of the final covering will depend on the degree of freezing and many gardeners find it advisable in the middle west states to cover the pits with corn fodder, straw or manure during the severe cold weather.

Never store vegetables in large piles, as this causes them to heat and decay. Storing in small pits containing a few bushels is the best practice, even if several pits have to be made. If the small pit is used ventilation is very much simplified. Vegetables get enough air if the inside layer of straw is allowed to extend through the dirt at the top of the pile. Cover the apex of the pit with a board and lay a stone on top to hold it in place. This will prevent water from seeping in. In larger pits a wooden flue may be used in the top to provide ventilation.

A sugar barrel lined with straw and placed in the excavation with the open end to the south may be used instead of the straw alone. The covering is put on in the same way as described above. Where the barrel is used the vegetables are more easily removed from the pit. If vegetables are kept in small lots it is sometimes difficult to get them out when the ground is frozen hard. When stored in small quantities the entire content may be removed at once, but this is not necessary. If vegetables are removed at intervals a small opening should be made and refilled each time.

Turnips Easily Kept.

It is a good plan to store several varieties of vegetables in the same pit instead of a separate bank for each crop. Where this is done the vegetables should be separated with straw or leaves.

Potatoes freeze where the temperature goes as low as 28 degrees Fahrenheit, and a temperature of about 36 degrees is low enough. Sweet potatoes should not be exposed to a temperature below 55 degrees Fahrenheit. They can be placed in the basement near the furnace or stored in pits if well covered. Pumpkins and squashes may be kept successfully where the temperature is maintained at about 40 degrees Fahrenheit. They can be kept in basements or cellars that are well ventilated, dry and frost proof.

Turnips are easily kept in storage, as they will stand hard frosts, but they are injured where there is alternate freezing and thawing. Parsnips are also very hardy and may be allowed to remain in the ground all winter, as freezing does not injure them. The only advantage in storing them is that digging them out of frozen ground is very difficult.

Celery plants should be taken up and stored just before freezing. Hotbed pits are often used for the storing of celery, but a cellar is the most desirable place. Always pack the roots together. Celery should never be stored with turnips and cabbage, as it absorbs the odor of vegetables and ruins the flavor, according to the experience of many gardeners.

In storing cabbage pull the plants, roots and all, and place them side by side in the pit, with the roots up or down. Some claim it is best to cover the cabbage with a layer of fine dirt before the straw is spread over them.

After the vegetables have been covered thoroughly, a shallow trench should be dug around the base of the pit. An outlet should be made so that water will not stand in the trench. This is important and should not be neglected.

Only the best quality of products should be stored, for when bruised or diseased vegetables are put in storage they soon decay. When spoiling once starts it spreads rapidly. If damaged in any way, they should be prepared for the home table, sold, pickled, canned or fed to animals.

The value of vegetables stored at home cannot be measured in dollars and cents. There is some satisfaction in storing your own vegetables and having them any day you want them, regardless of the market and cold weather.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

Does He Still Love Her?

"Dear Miss Blake: I am deeply in love with a young man two years older than myself. One evening I asked him over to the house. We talked and looked through albums. Then he got fresh.

"I told him I would not stand for it, and he left. I meet him very often, as he lives near me, and we speak.

"When I was on my vacation he wrote to me. When I am with my girl friend and we meet he seems to shower her with attentions and hardly notices me.

"Do you think he still loves me, or is he trying to spite me? Please answer. BEE."

This boy is hardly worth bothering over. If he were the right kind he would like you all the better for rebuking him for his forwardness. He is probably a little sensitive and proud, and he will not doubt come around soon. Do not go out of your way to be nice to him, but do not ignore him. Petty quarrels are not worth the trouble.

Should They Apologize?

"Dear Miss Blake: We are two young men, 18 and 19 years of age, and are in love with two young women of the same age. We have been going with them three months. The other evening we asked to kiss them good night and they objected. Were they right? Should we apologize? They are very nice girls. J. S. AND H. W."

Boys, I'm surprised. You should know, since you think these girls are very nice, that they were right in refusing to allow you to kiss them good-night. Would you like for your sister to kiss a boy just because he asked her?

He Is Bashful.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young man of 19, not bad looking, rich, have a big car, but am very bashful. At a party I always play the piano for them to dance, and it seems that none of the girls pay any attention to me. I always take three or four couples home in the machine, but never have a girl for myself. How and what do you think would rid me of my bashfulness? B."

You are a fortunate youth, to have a lovely machine and to know how to play the piano for others to dance. You have two qualifications for wonderful popularity, aside from your other attractions, which I am sure you are too modest to acclaim. Simply dive in some day and ask the girls to go riding with you; it will be easy after you start. If you conduct yourself properly, and are always in a happy humor, you will come out alright.

He Got Angry.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl 15 years old, and in love with a boy two years my senior, who is very neat and good looking. One night he asked to kiss me and because I objected he got angry. Was it proper for me to refuse? This boy is a great friend of my cousin, and always tells him he wishes to see me and speak to me. Would it be proper for me to speak to him when I see him? And what should I say when I first meet him? It seems that I can't hold my company with a pretty fellow long because I refuse to kiss him. What shall I do? "M. L. R."

My dear girl, if this boy is of the right stuff, he will not allow your refusal to kiss him to cause a break in your friendship. He will rather think the more of you for the courage of your convictions. Speak to him whenever you meet him, just as you do to your other friends, boys and girls, and he will soon see that you are cheery and hold no grudge against him. Boy friends that cannot be held with bonds of real comradeship and friendliness are not worth bothering with.

A FRIEND IN NEED

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to "The Tribune," but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

Asks Home for Dog.

"May I ask you for your kind assistance in finding a home for a little dog? Some years ago I found it in a vacant lot where it had crawled, terribly injured. I took it home, cleaned and dressed its wounds, nursed and kept it until it had fully rcovered, when I found a home for it in our neighborhood.

"The little creature delights in occasionally coming to call on me and always has to be taken back to its present master by main force. The animal merely wants to show its gratitude and affection, which its owner does not understand and resents.

"On its last visit to our house he therefore refused to take the dog back, and, as I cannot keep it, I would like to find a good home for it. It is a mongrel dog—I judge it to be a cross between a Scotch collie and an Airedale—wonderfully sagacious and watchful, gentle, well trained, and, aside from its unapproved visits to my house, very obedient. It would be a good companion for children.

"I am sure you will be able to place the dog. It seems a pity to do away with it and allow its gratitude, which is such a rare quality, and, I daresay, only to be found in dumb creatures, to go unrewarded. E. W. K."

Wants Salt Beads.

"I want to make some salt beads to wear around my neck. Could you tell me how they are made? GRACE L."

Who knows how to make salt beads, and, knowing how, is willing to pass along the instructions to my correspondent?

Offer Help in Spanish.

"We would like to hear from people who are studying Spanish in order to converse and to help them along, as we know that language. But we would like only people who are really interested to learn. Spanish is beginning to be an important language in the commercial development of our country, and we are sure many are studying it. MR. AND MRS. B. O."

To those interested I shall send Mr. and Mrs. B. O.'s address. Do not forget the stamped addressed envelope.

Baby Clothes.

"I wonder if someone will help a soldier's wife to get some baby clothes. The baby is expected soon. We just started housekeeping after he got back so that makes it rather hard. I would appreciate any assistance you may give me. MRS. A. P."

It will give me great pleasure to be able to tell Mrs. A. P. that there are some outgrown baby clothes that she may have.

Dress for Campfire Girl.

"Do you know of any campfire girl who could use a ceremonial dress about size 16? H. C. L."

I have registered your offer and shall send address to the first campfire girl applicant.

Campaign of 1918 11.

THE CAMPAIGN OF 1918

By Maj. Gen. Sir Frederick Maurice

THE opinion is widely held that the armistice of Nov. 11 was premature. It is argued that we had the German armies completely at our mercy and that the foundations of peace would have been more sure if we had ended the war by forcing the surrender in the field of a great part of those armies, or, failing that, driven our beaten enemy back across the Rhine followed him into the heart of Germany. The reception of the German troops by the German people, their march into the German towns through triumphal arches and beflagged streets with their helmets crowned with laurels, and the insistent statements in Germany that the German armies had not been defeated, that the armistice had been accepted to save bloodshed and to put an end to the sufferings of the women and children, aroused amazement and disgust in the victors.

There was very real anxiety lest after all we had failed to convince Germany that war did not pay; it was felt that we ought to have brought the realization of what war means home to the German people in their own country, and that had we done so the long drawn out negotiations in Paris would have been concluded more speedily and more satisfactorily. It is worth while, therefore, examining the situation as it was at the time of the armistice and considering the case as it presented itself to the men who had to decide whether hostilities should cease or not.

There is no question but that the German armies were completely and decisively beaten in the field. The German plenipotentiaries admitted it when they met Marshal Foch and von Bhocidorff. Rantzau admitted it at Versailles, when he said after the allied peace terms had been presented to him: "We are under no illusions as to the extent of our defeat and the degree of our want of power. . . . We know that the power of the German army is broken."

Even if these admissions had not been made, the condition of the German lines of retreat to the Rhine is conclusive evidence of the condition of their armies. Every road was littered with broken down motor trucks, abandoned guns, machine guns and trench mortars. Great stacks of supplies and of military stores of all kinds were abandoned. Every railway line was blocked with loaded trucks which the Germans had been unable to remove.

The sixty miles of railway in the valley of the Meuse between Dinant and Mezieres was filled from end to end with a continuous line of German freight trains carrying guns, ammunition, engineering equipment, and other paraphernalia. On the Belgian canals alone over 800 fully charged military barges were found. It is beyond dispute that on Nov. 11 the lines of communication immediately behind the German armies had been thrown into complete disorder by the streams of traffic which were converging on the Meuse bridges, disorder greatly intensified by the attacks of the allied airmen.

The German armies, unable to resist on the fighting front, could no longer retreat in good order, owing to the congestion on the roads and railways behind them, and for the same reason could not be systematically supplied with food and ammunition. If ever armies were in a state of rout the German armies were in the second week of Novevember, 1918. The morale of the troops was gone, the organization of the services on which they depended for their needs had collapsed. This being so, why did we allow the German armies to escape from a hopeless position? Why did we not at once follow up the military advantage which we had gained at such cost?

The Reason Why.

IN order to get an answer to these questions I visited the fronts of the allied armies shortly after the conclusion of the armistice. I there found, after traveling down the line from north to south, that among the fighting troops of the Belgian, British, French and American armies, the opinion was unanimous that they had got the Germans on the run and could have kept them on the run indefinitely or until they laid down their arms. On the American front, in particular, where there were large numbers of troops ready and eager to go forward, who had not yet taken part in a great battle, there was a very strong feeling that they had been robbed of the fruits of victory.

When, however, I inquired the opinion of those behind the fighting fronts who were responsible for feeding the troops and keeping them supplied with all that was necessary to enable them to march forward, I heard a different story. Everywhere I was told that the allied armies, which were on or were marching toward the Meuse, had on Nov. 11 reached the furthest limit at which for the time being they could be kept regularly supplied.

The reasons for this were twofold. In the first place, the allied lines of communications grew steadily longer as the Germans were driven back, and even before our victorious advance began the state of the railways and the amount of rolling stock in France had caused anxiety. For four and a half years the railway systems of northeastern France had been strained to the limit of their capacity and the effects of that strain were beginning to be serious in 1918. Both Great Britain and America had made great efforts to improve and extend the railway systems in their respective zones.

During 1918 the British military railway administration in France built or reconstructed 2,340 miles of broad gauge and 1,348 miles of narrow gauge railways, while to supplement the Fench rolling stock we sent to France 1,200 locomotives and 52,600 cars. The shipment across the channel of such cumbrous and heavy objects as locomotives and trucks was a slow and difficult business and the needs of the armies were always growing faster than were the resources of the railways. During the last four months of the war the weekly average load carried by the British military railways in France amounted to over 500,000 tons.

American Lack of Railways.

IF these were our difficulties those of the Americans were greater, owing to the rapid growth of the army during the latter half of the year 1918, the shortage of shipping capable of crossing the Atlantic and the necessity of giving first place to the transportation of troops and of war material. Up to the end the railways under American control in France suffered from a deficiency in rolling stock and had great difficulty in meeting the demands of the large forces engaged in the Meuse-Argonne battle at the end of an ever lengthening line of communications.

The French armies, which in the middle of September had been extended along the outside of the great bow made by the German lines between St. Quentin and Verdun, had the longest distances to advance in following up the German retreat and before the advance began the French government had cut down the railway transportation in the interior of the country to the bare minimum necessary for the preservation of the industrial and social life of France and even then was unable to meet the full demands of the French armies and to supplement the railway material which Great Britain and America had been able to produce.

The Belgian armies had hardly any resources of their own and no means whatever of developing their means of transportation. The result of all this was that the mere lengthening of the allied lines of communication by the German retreat, apart altogether from any other action by the enemy, threw a very great strain upon the allied railway administration.

The Germans were, however, very active and skillful in damaging the roads and railways before they retreated, and this damage was extended by the destructive power of the artillery of both sides. Every railway bridge, large or small, was blown up; the railway embankments were cut, long stretches of track were destroyed, the stations were burned down, and the telegraph lines were almost obliterated and the instruments removed. The Germans had left behind them mines buried under the railway lines, and these exploded often after the first damage had been repaired and the trains were running, with the result that there was constant interruption to the traffic.

THE CAMPAIGN OF 1918
By Maj. Gen. Sir Frederick Maurice

Transport to the Rescue.

THE consequence of this was that on Nov. 11, despite the most strenuous and devoted work by all concerned in the repair and working of the railways, the farthest points at which supplies could be delivered by rail were from thirty-five to fifty miles in a direct line behind the front, and often double this distance by road. This gap had to be bridged by the motor transport, which, of course, had to use the roads.

But the destruction of the roads by the Germans was as thorough as their destruction of the railways. Not only were the bridges destroyed, but mines were sprung at every cross road. I remember counting eleven mine craters on three miles of the main road between Le Quesnoy and Mons. This damage could only be very roughly repaired, while the wet weather and the heavy traffic of the German retreat and of our advance increased the work of destruction. The heavy motor truck loaded with supplies and ammunition had to plow their way slowly through these broken roads from the railheads to the troops and return to the railheads to fill up. At the time of the armistice the motor trucks were working in double and treble shifts and the strain upon them caused by the bad roads and the incessant work was such that in the British 4th army on Nov. 1 more than 50 per cent of the trucks at the service of the army had broken down. The troops were receiving no more than bare necessities and at one time had with them nothing more than the day's food carried by the men.

The advance of the British army toward Germany did not begin until Nov. 17, six days after all fighting had ceased, and actually only sixteen of the fifty-nine British infantry divisions in France and Belgium at the time of the armistice—that is less than one-third of our whole army—moved forward. Though there was no interference by the enemy and the advance was made by slow stages, it proved impossible to keep even this comparatively small part of our army supplied with their full rations and at the beginning of December it was necessary to call a halt because the supply trains were running more than forty-eight hours behind scheduled time. A very similar story could be told of the situation on the Belgian, French, and American fronts.

Nor was the feeding of the fighting troops by any means the only problem of supply which the allied armies had to solve. The Germans in their retreat had left behind them in the liberated provinces of France and Belgium a large civilian population on the verge of starvation. In the French province on the British front alone there were nearly 800,000 persons to be fed, and during a period of six weeks, until the French government could undertake the distribution of supplies, we distributed more than 5,000,000 rations among the civilian population, a task which threw an immense additional burden upon the transportation services.

Food the Great Problem.

THE French armies on their own front had very much larger numbers to deal with, and, as it taxed all their resources to repair the main roads and railways so that the troops on the front might be fed, many French villages and towns off the main lines of communication remained isolated for long periods and were only kept from starvation by having food brought to them by aeroplanes.

Added to all this the Germans as they retreated released large numbers of prisoners of war without making any provision for their feeding. The people of Belgium made great sacrifices in order to do what was possible for these unfortunate men, whose sufferings were often intense, but their means was not equal to their generosity, and yet another burden was added to the work of supply.

This being the situation on the front at the time when the armistice was signed and during the days which followed its signature, it is obvious that a great and rapid advance to and across the Meuse by the Belgian, British, French and American armies, such as might have brought about the complete dstruction of the German armies and ended the war with a colossal Sedan, was out of the question. It is true that on Nov. 11 two British cavalry divisions had passed through the front and were ready to pursue the enemy. Sir Douglas Haig had expressed the opinion that this cavalry would have been able to turn the retreat of the Germans on the British front into a complete rout, but it is very improbable that any action by such a comparatively small force of mounted troops would have been able to affect seriously the situation on the whole long front and their influence, though it would certainly have been considerable, must necessarily have been local.

The plain fact is that on Nov. 11 the allied armies on the front between the Dutch frontier and the Meuse had actually or very nearly reached the limit at which they could have been fed and, had hostilities been continued, it would have been necessary to call a halt until the roads and railways behind the armies had been repaired and the serv-

Grass Lake Trip in Lotus Season Is Worth While

By Mme. X.

ALTHOUGH Fox lake was the summer residence of the late Mayor Busse, and is the abode of the early [is early the apposite of late?] Fred Lundin, its proudest boast is not its political celebrities but the wonderful and unique beds of Egyptian lotus that cover acres and acres of Grass lake [an overflow of Fox lake], and of the connecting estuary. The only other place in the world, say the Fox lakers, where this exquisite water lily lifts its pale gold head and spreads its big, flat, round, green leaves is in the land of Cleopatra.

This sounds well and sort of links Busse, Lundin and company with the Ptolemy-Pharaoh concern. As a matter of fact, this "nymphaea lotus"—to give it is botanical name—is found native in various other places. A lake in Wisconsin, for instance, is said to harbor it, while travelers in China and Japan say they have seen the same species growing in those countries, and a very similar water lily is reported as being found in the semi-stagnant pools of central Africa, and developing leaves of so firm a texture and of such stout stems that quite fat African babies can sit safely on these ready made tea trays.

Has Many Visitors.

Be that as it may, a trip to Grass lake in the lotus season is well worth the while of the seeker after beauty. As the season is now nearly past, we venture to dilate on this one of Illinois' most enchanting showplaces, for to crowd that lovely streach of blue water with the average tourists were a desecration, though the hotel keepers and boatmen of Fox lake may not agree with me.

Over five thousand people visited and despoiled the lily beds intheir prime this year, so the spot is not unknown to the touring public.

This year's lotus crop was the largest in many seasons, the hot, dry summer being most encouraging to its growth. The lilies flourish best in stagnant, muddy waters.

We were fortunate in having as a boatman to steer us among the vast beds, William Hodge's double in manner and appearance, a man full of information as to the lotus, its tastes and habits. He destroyed some of our prettiest sentimentalities. When we noted how the great yellow blossoms seem to soar skyward, apparently tugging to escape the sluggish, foul waters, he informed the party that botb blossoms and leaves grew to the surface of the lake in the spring floods. Then, when the waters subsided, the stout stems of the flowers and leaves held them up.

He also said that no attempt at transplanting the lotus had, so far, been successful; that plucking them, provided you didn't pull up the roots, caused them to spread and multiply, and that in his youth he thought the roots of the Fox lake lotus sprang from China.

The beautiful dark blue spiked species of the genus sagittarius, that grew among the golden lilies, were called, he told us, "mule ears," because of the shape of the leaves. He pointed out to us the wild rice which grew in masses of waving plumes back of and much taller than the tallest lotus. He poled us up to ravishing seed pods—as fascinating in their way as the full blown lilies—and counseled us to pluck buds rather than the wide open blossom, which wilts as you pull it from its slimy bed.

Trip Worth While.

Gliding along the margin of those great lily beds, with the shallow lake about us, reflecting complacently the uttermost depths of the exceedingly blue sky above us, was an unforgettable experience, and left one with the feeling that the world was entirly composed of pale yellow, deep blue, and bright green.

The term lotus covers many varieties of vegetation. The sacred lotus of India, Buddha's favorite flower, is another species and is known to scientists as the "nelumbium speciosum." The ancient lotus eaters partook of the distilled juice of the fruit of the Greek lotus, known as the zizuthus, a shrub in no wise related to the Egyptian or Hindoo lotus.

That is all I know of the lotus except that the Fox lake lotus is worth a trip, even by motor over the imperfect roads, which lead to remote Grass lake. But go on a bright blue and gold day, and don't pull the flowers up by the roots. Six feet of slithery stem adds nothing to the attractiveness of your bouquet.

Buys Old Home.

A real estate deal that is of especial social interest is the purchase by Mrs. Robert Greaves McGann of "Fairlawn," her father, the late Charles B. Farwell's, well known old home and grounds in Lake Forest. For half a century the big white house and its surrounding lawns and gardens have been one of the show places on the north shore.

In 1857 a group of the members of the Second Presbyterian church of Chicago, headed by their pastor, the late Rev. Robert W. Patterson, came out to the north shore on a special train seeking a suitable site where they could make a settlement of homes for themselves and their young and growing families. They selected Lake Forest as combining many things they desired, accessibility, remoteness, beauty, etc.

Sylvester Lind, a typical old Scotchman, who founded Lake Forest university, was living here then, his house standing where the James residence, recently bought by Kent Clow, now is. There were at that time few others settled in this now fashionable suburb.

Besides the Farwells, the pioneers who first put Lake Forest on the map were the William Johnstons [whose house now is the Deerpath inn], the William Fabyans, the D. J. Lakes, the Quinlans, the Samuel Williamses, the Harvey Thompsons, the W. S. Warrens, and the Devillo R. Holts. Only the descendants of the two Farwell brothers, Charles G. and John V., and of D. R. Holt sill live in Lake Forest.

Lake Forest Changes.

In those early days the Harvey Thompson place was considered the most beautiful in Lake Forest. Mr. Thompson had terraced the ravine from top to bottom with a soft, velvety lawn. Bridges, fountains, flower beds, garden furniture of all kinds, and lifelike castiron birds and beasts made it the marvel of the community.

Of all this splendor there remains today but one lifesize deer lurking under a wide spreading pine tree on the George Fisher place, which was the east end of the Thompson grounds. The west part was recently sold to George R. Carr by Mrs. Arthur Wheeler.

Across the street to the west the colonial mansion which is now the home of the Lawrence Viles, stands on the site of one of the first residences built in the then simple village, the Quinlan house, later occupied by the parents of Lawrence Williams.

What is now the little triangular park, which under Mrs. Tiffany Blake's supervision was given form and shape three years ago, was formerly occupied by a summer hotel very popular with Chicagoans in the '60s and '70s of the last century.

The stately, square white house Mrs. McGann has bought was built by her father in 1869, and ever since has been closely identified with the life of the Farwell family. No house near Chicago has a finer record for hospitality, both under the régime of the older Farwells, and during the years when the late Mrs. Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor [beautiful Rose Farwell] presided over it. Every one who knows her will be glad Mrs. McGann is going to carry on the family traditions there. Her grandchild, little Ann Winston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Farwell Winston, will be of the fourth generation to live in the house.

Alterations Planned.

Mrs. McGann is planning to make some changes in and additions to the abode before moving in. For large as it seems, it does not meet the demands of a modern residence, when each member of a family has to have his or her own bathroom, and when the service part of a home has to answer requirements which each year's demands make more elaborate.

The charming setting of the house does not need so much alternation to bring it up to date. To the west is a reed bordered miniature lake. South of this is one of the largest vegetable gardens in the village, with a long grape arbor and good sized greenhouses. To the southeast lies the lovely, poetic circular garden Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor designed herself, where a riot of blossoms is confined by a ring of privet hedge. Tree geraniums are a feature of this inclosure.

Stately pine trees, with down sloping branches, stand sentinel on the wide lawns which stretch to the north and east. The lake is visible through the trees, and a graveled driveway sweeps from a gate at the northwest corner of the grounds past the house and out by another gate at the northeast corner. The grounds occupy a whole block.

One of the most interesting late summer weddings was that of Miss Elizabeth Catherine Plamondon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred D. Plamondon of 305 Fullerton parkway, to Harold Beacom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Beacom of 7602 Sheridan road, which took place on Aug. 16 at St. Clement's church. The bride's gown was of conventional white satin, veiled in tulle and embroidered with silver. She wore a court train of point lace, which was purchased by the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Plamondon for their daughter, Jeannette, when she married the late Dr. John B. Murphy, and was worn also by Dr. and Mrs. Murphy's three daughters—Mrs. Julius T. Benedict (Cecille Murphy), Mrs. Edward N. Hurley Jr. (Mildred Murphy), and Mrs. James Gordon Murdock (Celeste Murphy)—on their wedding days.

The engagement of Miss Clara Vopicka, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Vopicka of 3251 Washington boulevard, to Jerome J. Schlesinger, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Schlesinger of 5134 Michigan avenue, was announced last week. Mr. Vopicka, who is United States minister to the Balkans, is now at Lake Cora, Mich., with his family, but will return to the Balkans in a few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Keefe of 4443 Michigan avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Katherine Agnes, to Dr. Walter J. Sullivan, son of Dr. and Mrs. T. J. Sullivan of 4709 Michigan avenue. Dr. Sullivan recently returned from overseas, where he served for two years as a captain in the medical corps. The wedding will take place in the early fall.

News of Chicago Society

Across the way is the old John V. Farwell house, standing as it has stood for even longer than the C. B. Farwell residence. It shows how densely wooded that region was to be told that 100 cords of wood were cut out to make room for the J. V. Farwell house and garden, and that great quantities of gunpowder were used to blow up the stumps to make a smooth lawn. Today both places have an ancient and venerable air worthy of some historic England settlement, and far more desirable and attractive than any American architect's translation of Italian, French, or English architecture could possibly be.

There is a quality in a house that has been lived in by several succeeding generations that can't be reproduced in any modern structure.

Arthur Heun is to have charge of the alterations Mrs. McGann is planning. He is responsible for many of Lake Forest's most attractive homes, his earliest work being the residences of John V. Farwell Jr. and F. C. Farwell, while the later ones include the Ogden Armour, Arthur Meeker, and Edward Moore houses—palaces were a better name for them.

Opera Closes Soon.

The end of the Ravinia Park opera season is almost at hand. A week from tomorrow night, Labor day, sees its closing performance. It has been a fine summer as far as excellence of artistic attainment and sympathetic weather could make it. The average of attendance, too, has improved, the audiences being invariably large on Saturdays and Sundays.

Except for especial performances, like Scotti's in a double bill last Friday, other evenings than Saturdays and Sundays have had rather slim attendance, so that this year's deficit, though smaller than some of its predecessors, is not a negligible sum.

Louis Eckstein, to whom more than to any other person, the north shore owes this great enterprise, says he never expects the opera to be self-sustaining, but he would like it to be better supported than it is at present.

He induced Scotti to come out at the beginning of the season for two performances to the ne wopera "L'Oracolo." Reluctantly the famous Italian baritone came, specifying that he must be spared rehearsals and permitted a quick return to the east. But his first visit to the big pavilion changed entirely his attitude of mind. He immediately became enthusiastic over it, said there was nothing like it in the world, and asked to be allowed to come back for some more performances at the close of the season. So here he is.

Even if his voice is not what it once was, his acting is better than ever before, and the vocal and dramatic are so interwoven in today's opera that the career of the operatic artist is considerably prolonged.

The attention of the local garden clubs is called to a "lusus natural" in a recent presentation of "Thais," at Ravinia Park, when good Cook county oak leaves were shown growing in an Egyptian oasis. But if Egyptian lotus flourishes in Illinois why shouldn't our oaks grow in Egypt's oases?

Pattersons to Leave.

When the George W. Pattersons settle in Boston, as they plan to do next winter, Chicago society will lose an interesting and conspicuous young couple.

Even before this country entered the war Miss Suzette Ryerson prepared herself by a course in bacteriology at the Chicago university to work in a French military hospital. About the same time George Patterson gave up business here and joined an American Red Cross ambulance corps in France.

Miss Ryerson, after conquering interminable quantities of Gallic red tape (and where we use yards they use miles of it), was accepted and sent to a hospital just behind the lines, where she was frequently under fire. When we went into the war George Patterson, after failing to meet the physical tests of the American army, was accepted by the French army, and took the military course at Fontainebleau.

Before he went into active service he and Miss Ryerson were married in Paris. Aviators flew from the front lines to their wedding. Everybody, men and women, were in uniforms of some kind and calling—American, French, Red Cross, or A. F. F. W.

It was a gay and typical war wedding. After a brief honeymoon, he returned to his regiment and she to her hospital. In a few months came the armistice, and then the return to their native land in the following spring, each with the Legion of Honor, expressing the gratitude of France. It is a distinct loss to Chicago to have the Pattersons select Boston as their abiding place.

We may, however, rejoice in the promised return of the Roy McWilliamses, who, since 1916, have been in France, either working in military hospitals or for the A. F. F. W. Mr. McWilliams in 1917 accepted the post of American consul at the French seaport Bayonne, and as Bayonne, when we entered the war, grew overnight from a third rate harbor into one of the chief landing ports for American material, he had a man-sized job there.

Their Chicago friends are wondering whether Mr. and Mrs. McWilliams will bring back with them the French war orphan they have legally adopted. It is reported that the authorities over there are so unwilling to lose one child of France that they even object to one regularly adopted leaving the country.

The whole future of that sore stricken land lies in a healthy increase in the population. There will be little emigration from France for a generation or more if the government can prevent it. Farewell to the French chef, who doesn't care for a dry country, anyway.

Taylors Here Tomorrow.

It is many years since Sir Frederick and Lady Williams-Taylor, who will arrive here tomorrow, were in Chicago—certainly a full fifteen years. Then they were Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Taylor. He came as an inspector for the Bank of Montreal. Now he is general manager of the same bank and is a knight into the bargain.

ART by Eleanor Jewett

Loan Canvases on Exhibition at Art Institute

By Eleanor Jewett.

"We have come a long road
And have fought a stiff fight,
But each weary day
Was succeeded by night—
We have fussed and have fretted
But, dearest, 'tis true—
In the blackest of hours
I've always had you."

And "herself" to "himself"
Then responded in kind,
"To thank God for our struggles
I've often had mind.
And thanks I would give
That the crest we can reach
Of life's hill with his love
Still enfolding us each."

There's not many the couple
(And a pity it is)
As jolly and hearty
As herself and his.

To nothing but a very sound philosophy and an unshakeable faith in the ultimate working together of all things for good can be attributed the expression of divine content, surpassing human satisfaction, that radiates from the apple-round countenances of "himself" and "herself," hero and heroine from the brush of Robert Henri, now placed to be looked upon in the east wing of the Art institute, among the other paintings loaned from the collection of Paul Schulze.

"Himself" bears a weatherbeaten, whisker-fringed face, ruddy-cheeked and blue-eyed—eyes, in fact, of such a blue as only the North sea boasts in summer. A hardy Norse fisherman he looks, or perhaps a wind-knotted peasant of Brittany. Twin to him is "Herself." She is a woman going slowly down the western slope of life, cheery, dressed in Sunday best—but better than gown or gay plumage of kerchief and hat is her own smooth, apple-round, pink and white face, unmarked by the years and guarded by a pair of laughing, green-gray eyes, the summer sea of her husband's giving over to the more tremulous mysteries of spring.

"Early Winter," by Bruce Crane, is an exquisite stretch of solitary landscape. The brown touch of late fall fades into the gray mist that presages snow. The trees stand naked, and on the ground the dead leaves lie in rain-ruffled company. Silent pools, the eyes of the wood, wait shivering for the frost to enchain them. Framing the whole, the gray sky swings close to earth, heavy with its burden of unborn flakes.

Different in mood is "Gloucester," by J. H. Twachtman. Here lies a smiling town by a smiling sea, fragrant with the scents and colors of spring, warm in its pale greens and blue. Soft cotton clauds float low, and the distance is blurred by a haze as delicate as the faint breath of Pandora breathed soft on the silver casket whence spring the troubles of a tempter's world.

Still another painting is "Poetry of Moonlight," by Leonard Ochtman. Lines from "Kubla Khan" come indistinctly back to one as one looks at it. The verses—"a gloomy spot—as e're beneath the waning moon was haunted, by woman wailing for her demon lover," sound again thrillingly in one's ears. There is a space cleared among forest trees and a dark sheet of water at one's feet, where night things drink. A dark sky shrouds the earth close, the deep woven depths of its blackness broken by a single rift where the sweet light of the moon shines through.

There are old friends, too, in this collection of Mr. Schulze. Among them are: "Cave of the Sea," by William Ritschel, N. A.; "Road Through the Woods," by Ben Foster; "Laguna Canyon," by William Wendt; "Invocation," by L. Mazzanovich; "The Northwest Wind," by Charles H. Davis, and "Winter Joy," by Gardner Symons.

In a near gallery are paintings lent from the collection of Martin A. Ryerson. A number of these are by French artists, and several—particularly those by André and Canals—forcibly remind us of the exhibit of modern French art held last spring at the Arts club, where, if our memory does not play us false, certain ones of these same canvases were then exhibited.

The portrait of "A Woman and Dog," by Carrière, was also on view at the Arts club last season. In fact, it was a striking feature of the opening exhibition in the fall of portraits lent by members. But a repeated view does not dull its charms. Whether preference goes to the cool eyed mistress or the silky, sleepy little dog, the painting entire is of unchangeable artistic value.

The canvases by Canals and André emphasize again the differences in style and treatment of pigment of these two equally interesting painters. André is coarser in line and blunter in color—Canals, more rythmic, sensual, soft—master of a blend of form and medium that weaves a warm mesh where is caught and held fast a wandering appreciation.

Second to the Carrière portrait in interest in this gallery is the large painting, "A Pardon in Brittany," by Gaston La Touche. Unfortunately it is hung so that the morning light [we made our visit in the morning], strikes upon the glass protecting it in such fashion that only with difficulty may a clear conception of the picture be gained. Shadows and reflected lights cut unpardonably into every persistent attempt at continuous reading of the story of the painting. But the magic of the conception holds in spite of material obstacles.

One sees a clear sky, the sky of early dawn or late dusk before the copper glow of the sunset had faded or the curtain of night been drawn, and against this sky stands out the dark figure of a woman holding a child and mounted on a white horse by which a youth waits. Below is a throng of white coiffed heads—nuns or monks or peasant folk, maybe—and surmounting them stands the inspired figure of the priest. The crowd is lit by the yellow gleam from the torches held high in each bare hand. Among the white robed figures walk some dark cassocked. Though the meaning of the painting is not plain, yet the effect is instant. It is marvelously absorbing.

There are several examples of Claude Monet's genius. Possibly the most delightful is the lily pond. The bright blue pool offers its sweetness to the passer-by in the fragrant blossoms that lie like broken butterflies in scattered patches of golden throated beauty on its breast.

The most startling contrast to the foregoing is found in "Dans les Coulisses," by J. L. Ferain, a coarse, cynical, harsh but amusing sketch of pleasure seeking in the dives of Paris.

The All-American exposition which is to open at the Coliseum on Aug. 30 will have an interesting department devoted to the fine arts and handicraft. The Art institute will contribute from its collection of paintings and sculpture and the exhibition promises to be of the greatest value. Not the least valuable feature of it will be found in the work secured from foreign born artists. The exhibition is to be as comprehensive as possible and nothing that can add to its universal appeal will be omitted.

Gilbert P. Riswold, the sculptor, has recently finished a remarkable bust of Richard Carle. This modeled portrait will make one of the pieces to be exhibited this season by Mr. Riswold at various art centers.

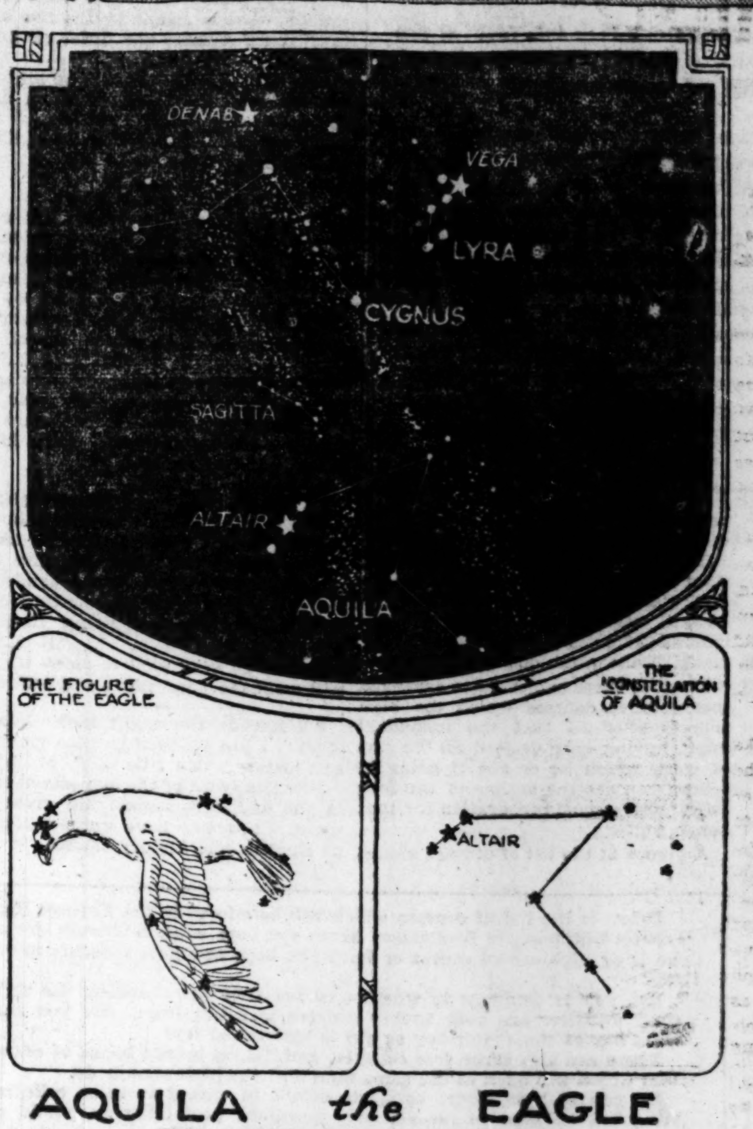
ASTRONOMY



AQUILA the EAGLE
THE STARS OVERHEAD TONIGHT
DRAWN BY S. F. MAXWELL

AQUILA.

THERE are three constellations which dominate the summer sky, and each of them has a first magnitude star in it. They shine all night long, high up overhead, and only incline toward the west before the first streaks of dawn appear. The constellations are those of Cygnus, the Swan, sometimes called the "Northern Cross," Lyra, the Harp, and Aquila, the Eagle.

The bright star of Cygnus is Denab. It is a first magnitude sun of the purest white. Vega is the bluish star in Lyra. It cannot be mistaken, for it is easily the brightest star in the whole summer sky. The great sun of Aquila is Altair. It is flanked on either side by two lesser stars, often called the guards. Altair and the two guard stars form the head of the Eagle. Aquila is represented flying toward the east. No one knows where the constellation of the Eagle first originated. It is one of those groupings which have come down to us from prehistoric times, and is one more instance of the extreme antiquity of star lore.

Altair, Denab, and Vega form a right triangle in the sky, with Vega at the right angle. The Milky Way runs through the configuration, from top to bottom. The space inside this triangle is perhaps more interesting than any other single area of the whole sky. The Milky Way divides into two streams just below Denab, in the head of the Northern Cross. One branch passes by Altair and another by Vega, and there is a clear black space between them. For many years astronomers have asked themselves, "What causes it?"—but of definite information there was none. Discoveries made within the last year do much to plain this hitherto inscrutable bl
lane.

ART by Eleanor Jewett

Loan Canvases on Exhibition at Art Institute

By Eleanor Jewett.

"We have come a long road
And have fought a stiff fight,
But each weary day
Was succeeded by night—
We have fussed and have fretted
But, dearest, 'tis true—
In the blackest of hours
I've always had you."

And "herself" to "himself"
Then responded in kind,
"To thank God for our struggles
I've often had mind.
And thanks I would give
That the crest we can reach
Of life's hill with his love
Still enfolding us each."

There's not many the couple
(And a pity it is)
As jolly and hearty
As herself and his.

To nothing but a very sound philosophy and an unshakeable faith in the ultimate working together of all things for good can be attributed the expression of divine content, surpassing human satisfaction, that radiates from the apple-round countenances of "himself" and "herself," hero and heroine from the brush of Robert Henri, now placed to be looked upon in the east wing of the Art institute, among the other paintings loaned from the collection of Paul Schulze.

"Himself" bears a weatherbeaten, whisker-fringed face, ruddy-cheeked and blue-eyed—eyes, in fact, of such a blue as only the North sea boasts in summer. A hardy Norse fisherman he looks, or perhaps a wind-knotted peasant of Brittany. Twin to him is "Herself." She is a woman going slowly down the western slope of life, cheery, dressed in Sunday best—but better than gown or gay plumage of kerchief and hat is her own smooth, apple-round, pink and white face, unmarked by the years and guarded by a pair of laughing, green-gray eyes, the summer sea of her husband's giving over to the more tremulous mysteries of spring.

"Early Winter," by Bruce Crane, is an exquisite stretch of solitary landscape. The brown touch of late fall fades into the gray mist that presages snow. The trees stand naked, and on the ground the dead leaves lie in rain-ruffled company. Silent pools, the eyes of the wood, wait shivering for the frost to enchain them. Framing the whole, the gray sky swings close to earth, heavy with its burden of unborn flakes.

Different in mood is "Gloucester," by J. H. Twachtman. Here lies a smiling town by a smiling sea, fragrant with the scents and colors of spring, warm in its pale greens and blue. Soft cotton clauds float low, and the distance is blurred by a haze as delicate as the faint breath of Pandora breathed soft on the silver casket whence spring the troubles of a tempter's world.

Still another painting is "Poetry of Moonlight," by Leonard Ochtman. Lines from "Kubla Khan" come indistinctly back to one as one looks at it. The verses—"a gloomy spot—as e're beneath the waning moon was haunted, by woman wailing for her demon lover," sound again thrillingly in one's ears. There is a space cleared among forest trees and a dark sheet of water at one's feet, where night things drink. A dark sky shrouds the earth close, the deep woven depths of its blackness broken by a single rift where the sweet light of the moon shines through.

There are old friends, too, in this collection of Mr. Schulze. Among them are: "Cave of the Sea," by William Ritschel, N. A.; "Road Through the Woods," by Ben Foster; "Laguna Canyon," by William Wendt; "Invocation," by L. Mazzanovich; "The Northwest Wind," by Charles H. Davis, and "Winter Joy," by Gardner Symons.

In a near gallery are paintings lent from the collection of Martin A. Ryerson. A number of these are by French artists, and several—particularly those by André and Canals—forcibly remind us of the exhibit of modern French art held last spring at the Arts club, where, if our memory does not play us false, certain ones of these same canvases were then exhibited.

The portrait of "A Woman and Dog," by Carrière, was also on view at the Arts club last season. In fact, it was a striking feature of the opening exhibition in the fall of portraits lent by members. But a repeated view does not dull its charms. Whether preference goes to the cool eyed mistress or the silky, sleepy little dog, the painting entire is of unchangeable artistic value.

The canvases by Canals and André emphasize again the differences in style and treatment of pigment of these two equally interesting painters. André is coarser in line and blunter in color—Canals, more rythmic, sensual, soft—master of a blend of form and medium that weaves a warm mesh where is caught and held fast a wandering appreciation.

Second to the Carrière portrait in interest in this gallery is the large painting, "A Pardon in Brittany," by Gaston La Touche. Unfortunately it is hung so that the morning light [we made our visit in the morning], strikes upon the glass protecting it in such fashion that only with difficulty may a clear conception of the picture be gained. Shadows and reflected lights cut unpardonably into every persistent attempt at continuous reading of the story of the painting. But the magic of the conception holds in spite of material obstacles.

One sees a clear sky, the sky of early dawn or late dusk before the copper glow of the sunset had faded or the curtain of night been drawn, and against this sky stands out the dark figure of a woman holding a child and mounted on a white horse by which a youth waits. Below is a throng of white coiffed heads—nuns or monks or peasant folk, maybe—and surmounting them stands the inspired figure of the priest. The crowd is lit by the yellow gleam from the torches held high in each bare hand. Among the white robed figures walk some dark cassocked. Though the meaning of the painting is not plain, yet the effect is instant. It is marvelously absorbing.

There are several examples of Claude Monet's genius. Possibly the most delightful is the lily pond. The bright blue pool offers its sweetness to the passer-by in the fragrant blossoms that lie like broken butterflies in scattered patches of golden throated beauty on its breast.

The most startling contrast to the foregoing is found in "Dans les Coulisses," by J. L. Ferain, a coarse, cynical, harsh but amusing sketch of pleasure seeking in the dives of Paris.

The All-American exposition which is to open at the Coliseum on Aug. 30 will have an interesting department devoted to the fine arts and handicraft. The Art institute will contribute from its collection of paintings and sculpture and the exhibition promises to be of the greatest value. Not the least valuable feature of it will be found in the work secured from foreign born artists. The exhibition is to be as comprehensive as possible and nothing that can add to its universal appeal will be omitted.

Gilbert P. Riswold, the sculptor, has recently finished a remarkable bust of Richard Carle. This modeled portrait will make one of the pieces to be exhibited this season by Mr. Riswold at various art centers.

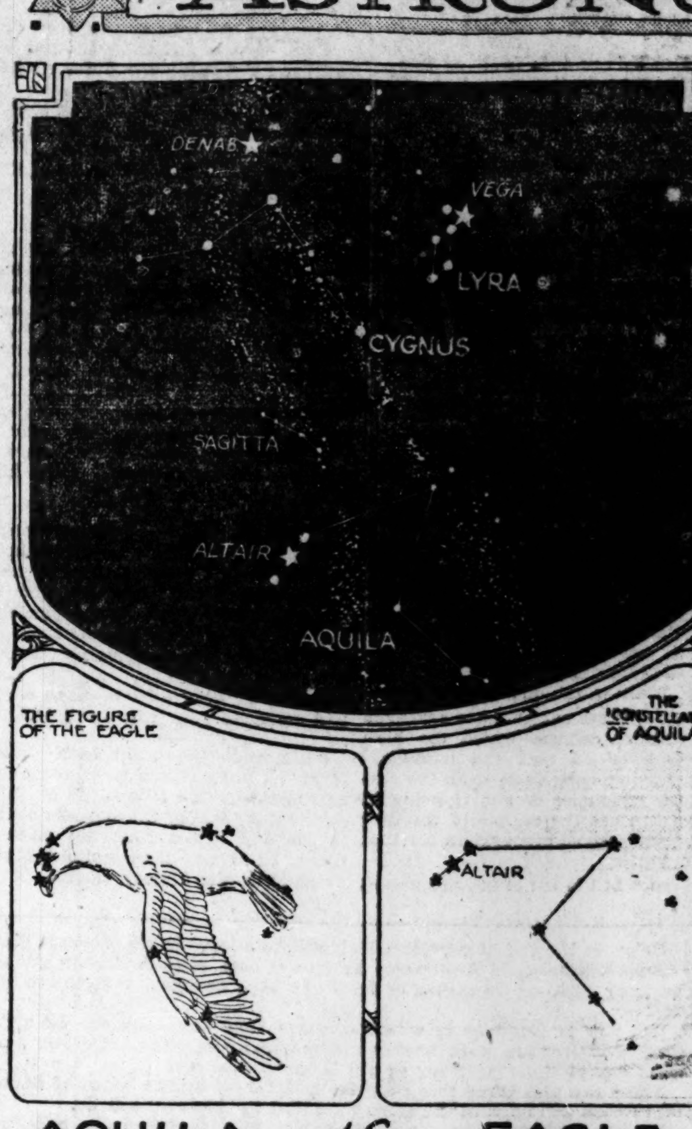
ASTRONOMY



AQUILA the EAGLE
THE STARS OVERHEAD TONIGHT
DRAWN BY S. F. MAXWELL

AQUILA.

There are three constellations which dominate the summer sky, and each of them has a first magnitude star in it. They shine all night long, high up overhead, and only incline toward the west before the first streaks of dawn appear. The constellations are those of Cygnus, the Swan, sometimes called the "Northern Cross," Lyra, the Harp, and Aquila, the Eagle.

The bright star of Cygnus is Denab. It is a first magnitude sun of the purest white. Vega is the bluish star in Lyra. It cannot be mistaken, for it is easily the brightest star in the whole summer sky. The great sun of Aquila is Altair. It is flanked on either side by two lesser stars, often called the guards. Altair and the two guard stars form the head of the Eagle. Aquila is represented flying toward the east. No one knows where the constellation of the Eagle first originated. It is one of those groupings which have come down to us from prehistoric times, and is one more instance of the extreme antiquity of star lore.

Altair, Denab, and Vega form a right triangle in the sky, with Vega at the right angle. The Milky Way runs through the configuration, from top to bottom. The space inside this triangle is perhaps more interesting than any other single area of the whole sky. The Milky Way divides into two streams just below Denab, in the head of the Northern Cross. One branch passes by Altair and another by Vega, and there is a clear black space between them. For many years astronomers have asked themselves, "What causes it?"—but of definite information there was none. Discoveries made within the last year do much to
lane.

men of different professions ask-

he answers which came in were eresting from the light which they rew on the practical and worldly alue of the different subjects. More and more is the modern measure of "use" determining the value of a subject, and supplanting the old measure of the "disciplinary."

Ninety-five per cent of those men and women who were asked said that they would select differently if they had their courses to choose over again.

Of the types of men asked, the largest number chosen were engineers. This was in order to discover the relative value which they placed on higher mathematics and foreign language.

Boys who are intent on pursuing the different lines of engineering will be interested in the average importance of the high school and college subjects according to the engineer's ideas.

In the following order came: mathematics, shop subjects, English, science.

And of the least use: Latin, Greek, higher mathematics, German, French, history, chemistry.

A number of engineers admitted to having used foreign languages to some extent.

The lawyers found that the following were of greatest use to them: English, history, sociology, psychology.

And of least use were: Greek, Latin, French, German, mathematics, science.

Teachers and preachers did not make such a distinction. In their choice of what they had found beneficial and what they had not, as in both professions a wide variety of knowledge is necessary, and science and history, modern and classical language, sociology, and mathematics all have their share in a general education.

Doctors found of most use to them science, Latin, psychology, history, English, mathematics.

And of least use German, French, physics, sociology, economics.

Among farmers, housewives, mothers, real estate men, and men in mercantile occupations the practical value was placed highest on such subjects as English, history, science, agriculture (with the farmers), and domestic science (with the women).

Such a list as this is only fragmentary, but it is representative to a certain degree of the men who have put their education to the test and have found which subjects were of value and which subjects were not.

So many questions come in asking what subjects one should choose in taking a preëngineering course, a premedical course, a pre-law course. Such lists as these answer in a general way many of the questions asked.

Many of these subjects are arranged into definite courses which the high schools offer so that the individual pupil, having once decided on the line of work which he or she is going to follow, can see the outline of the four years' high school preparation for that same work.

A glance at the list of courses shown at the end of this article will show exactly what is meant by the two and four years' outline for different lines of work.

Any of these outlines will be sent on request and full information on any subject of education or schools.

"It's better to save up for a dry day."

"Here is a beautiful diamond ring for you."

"O, it's grand. Is it real?"

"If it isn't I got cheated out of $1.50."

"Kiss me; that's affection."

"Well, if I kiss you it will be inspection."

"To think how happy we used to be. The day we were married you were running around like a fish out of water."

"Well, I knew I was caught."

"Think I'll call a doctor."

"Don't do that. Call a snake charmer."

"Let's be sweethearts to the end."

"All right, give me $50."

"That's the end."

"If my mother knew how cruel you are to me she would give you a piece of her mind."

"She better not. She is so thin now that when she walks around her bones make so much noise that any one near think they hear a crap game."

"Putting It Over":

"Hello, hello, hello. She must be a telephone girl; she doesn't answer."

"Beg your pardon."

"Don't beg from a soldier."

"Did you ever see a cootie?"

"Yes, and they remind me of arithmetic. They add to your discomfort, subtract from your pleasure and divide your attention."

"Why did they call you dough boys?"

"'Cause they kneaded us."

"Gets-It" Peels Your Corns Right Off

Two Drops Will Do It Without Fuss or Trouble. Never Fails.

There's only one way to get rid of a corn and that is to peel it off as you would a banana skin. There is only one corn remover in all the world that does it that way, and that is

There's No Corn "Gets-It" Will Not 'Get.'

"Gets-It." It is because of this fact that "Gets-It" is today the biggest seller among corn-removers on this planet. It means the end of "corn-fiddling." For hard corns, soft corns, very old corns, young corns, corns between the toes and calluses, it means a quick, certain finish. "Gets-It" is applied in 2 or 3 seconds. All you need is 2 or 3 drops. It's easy to do as signing your name. It does away forever with tape, plasters, bandages, knives, corn-diggers, scissors, files and blood-bringing razors. Ease your corn-pains, be corn-free at last. "Gets-It," the only sure, guaranteed, money-back corn-remover, costs but a trifle at any drug store. M'f'd by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Immanuel Baptist Spends $10,000 on New Ideas

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE Immanuel Baptist church, Twenty-third street and Michigan avenue, the Rev. Johnston Myers, pastor, has completed improvements costing $10,000. The new equipment stands for certain ideas in some respects unique. A formal opening will be held as soon as the vacation period is over.

Dr. Myers has expressed the ideals of his church in certain mottoes. Over the main door is the invitation: "Your Friends Are Inside; Come In." A motto on one side reads: "We Care for Both Body and Soul." Another one is: "A Friend in Need Is a Friend Indeed."

The departments of church work have been planned to meet these various human needs, worship, healing, clothing, food, employment.

"A gymnasium is an advantage, but it is not a fundamental need," said Dr. Myers in explaining his idea. "Movies are good and we expect to install them, but they are not essential to life. If young people want to dance we will not prevent them, but young people can live without dancing. Every one must have food, clothing, employment, healing, and worship, and we provide them all."

The office for employment and the office for benevolence are on either side of the entrance in what was formerly the vestibule of the church. Nearby is a switchboard connected with twelve telephones connected with different parts of the building. On one side of the first floor are four offices, one each for assistant pastor, nurse, adviser to women, and director of children's work.

Immanuel club has been formed for mutual social advantage. Clubrooms have been fitted up where young people can meet their friends with as much privacy as in an ordinary parlor and where there is opportunity for social advantages on a club scale. Dr. Myers has adopted a new kind of three Rs—rest, reading, and recreation—instead of reading, 'riting, and 'rithmetic.

The church auditorium is devoted exclusively to worship, although even here there is the departure from the usual program of churches and a full band is provided.

The Rev. E. Y. Woolley, for nearly thirteen years the associate pastor of Moody church, has resigned. He was a business man when called to the Moody church, and will again assume a business career, it is understood. During the interim of the pastorates of the Rev. A. C. Dixon and the Rev. Paul Rader, Mr. Woolley was acting pastor of the church. He has also been Sunday school superintendent. The Sunday school has trebled under his superintendency. E. W. McKee, leader of song in the Moody tabernacle, has likewise resigned, and will go to Minneapolis to take work under the Rev. W. B. Riley of the First Baptist church.

Dr. Charles F. Aked, formerly pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist church, New York, and later the First Congregational church of San Francisco, has accepted the call to the First Congregational church, Kansas City, Mo., and will enter upon his work in September. The last pastor of the Kansas City church was the Rev. Frank G. Smith, who resigned in 1918. Dr. Smith was formerly pastor of the Warren Avenue Congregational church of Chicago and at one time was a member of the Illinois state legislature.

The Rev. E. W. Halpenny is in charge of the morning services in the McCabe Memorial Methodist Episcopal church, Fifty-fourth street and Blackstone avenue, today and next Sunday, in the absence on vacation of the pastor, Dr. George MacAdam.

The Rev. W. B. Norton, religious editor of "The Tribune," has left the paper in order to tour the world in the interest of the Interchurch World Movement. The Rev. Frederick L. Gratiot, S. T. B., recently curate of St. James' Episcopal church, has been named to take Dr. Norton's place.

It is the purpose of "The Tribune," as heretofore, to present in an unbiased manner, within its space limitations, news of the churches of Chicago and vicinity, as well as that of the nation at large; to deal accurately and fairly with the different religious bodies.

The churches can be of assistance in the following manner:

[1] Telephone (Central 100) 1 to 11 p. m., or write all items of general interest and notices of forthcoming events to the Religious Editor.

[2] Mail to Mr. Gratiot, Tribune office, your weekly or monthly publication, as well as any special bulletins or notices. See that the diocesan or district and national papers and magazines are sent regularly. "The Tribune" already subscribes for many of the latter.

[3] Mail notices of Sunday services with, name of minister, topic of sermon, and hours of services regularly so as to reach this office not later than Thursday morning, for insertion in the directory of services published each Sunday. There is no charge for this.

Your co-operation will be greatly appreciated, and will aid in a more satisfactory presentation of the news of all the churches. Criticisms and suggestions will always be gladly received.

The Rev. Mr. Gratiot is well qualified to handle this department. He is a graduate of the Western Theological seminary of Chicago (Episcopal), and is now instructor of religious pedagogy at that institution. His wide acquaintance in Chicago and his theological training fit him to deal with all phases of religious life and assure all creeds—Catholic, Protestant, and independent—a sympathetic and intelligent handling of their news matters in this newspaper.

The men's Bible class of the Buena Memorial Presbyterian church is holding services Sunday afternoons at the corner of Wilson and Kenmore avenues. From thirty to forty men of the class assist each Sunday. The music is led by an organ which is carried to the meeting place by an automobile.

The Rev. Joseph C. Dent has resigned as pastor of the Pilgrim Temple Baptist church, North Leavitt street, near North avenue, and will become district superintendent of the northern district of the Illinois Baptist state convention. Mr. Dent's resignation will take effect Sept. 30 and he will begin his new official duties Oct. 1.

Mr. Dent has been pastor of the Pilgrim Temple for ten years. In announcing his resignation to his congregation he gave as one of the reasons for his resignation the opportunity of serving 150 churches instead of one. Four associations, the Chicago, Aurora, Ottawa, and Rock River, will be in his territory. He will do missionary and evangelistic work.

Concerning the work of the Pilgrim Temple church, he said: "We have made several improvements in the church building and reduced the mortgage to a nominal sum. The church has increased its missionary and benevolent offerings 900 per cent, sent out four missionaries to the foreign field, one pastor to a church in Illinois, and four other young men who are studying for the ministry. The church has increased in spirituality and evangelistic fervor. The church membership is scattered, but many come long distances to worship."

From there he went to St. Paul's. Father Harney was appointed to the pastorate of the Church of the Good Shepherd, a new Paulist church in New York, but was permitted to decline the appointment and will remain in Chicago.

THE TRIBUNE PROGRAM FOR MIDDLE WEST DEVELOPMENT

I. Open the Great Lakes to the Atlantic.
II. Finish the Lakes to the Gulf Waterway Without Delay.
III. Develop a Practical Highway System.
IV. Regrow Our Vanished Forests.

A MIDDLE WEST PROGRAM.

A year ago THE TRIBUNE adopted a platform for the material development of the middle west. Only general principles were stated and no attempt was made to particularize the method of their accomplishment. Study has reduced our views to more concrete form and has strengthened our conviction that the improvements advocated are indispensable to stop the decline of our economic wellbeing.

A great deal too much energy is being wasted decrying the ills that have come upon us. Let us hark back to the spirit of our forefathers and by constructive work hew out the salvation which awaits a courageous and purposeful people.

Open the Great Lakes to the Ocean: The Great Lakes of the North American continent should not remain landlocked. They should be opened to ocean going ships. They should be connected directly with that great world highway, the ocean.

Take a map of North America and study the vast region of the Great Lakes. It is the economic heart of the continent, an inland empire of vast domain, the chief granary of the world, and one of the greatest producers of coal, iron, and manufactured products of increasing variety and volume. Yet this great empire has no seaport of its own. It is true it has access to the sea by rail and by shallow and narrow canals and by the partly improved river systems. It has no barrier of foreign territory to overcome. But it has physical and economic barriers between it and the world highway, and these it should be our policy to pierce.

The Great Lakes should be a part of the world highway, a part of the ocean at least as much as the Baltic or the Black sea.

The situation today is unsatisfactory. Canals in the St. Lawrence and between Lakes Ontario and Erie will carry ships of fourteen foot draft. The Erie canal is but a barge canal. Canada is enlarging the Welland canal. But more draft must be provided, and Lake Ontario must be given connection with the ocean for ocean draft ships, either by way of a better canalized St. Lawrence or by an enlarged canal to the Hudson.

This is fully as practicable as the building of the Panama canal. Political and economic considerations will play a disturbing and obstructive part in the fulfillment of any such project. There will be regional fears and jealousies and ambitions to compose or overcome. But there should be enough force in the truth and expediency of the idea back of the project to win for it. The connection of the Great Lakes with the ocean would be a great world improvement, like the building of the Suez and Panama canals, and it should be placed among the constructive policies of both United States and Canada. Especially it should have the championship of the middle west, which should organize its representation in congress and all its sources of influence to win its access to the world highway. The government has spent hundreds of millions on the Panama canal, the blasting of Hell Gate, the Roosevelt dam, the Mussel Shoals dam, and the innumerable projects for harbors, rivers, and lands. Millions have been well spent. Millions have been wasted in pork. The government can well afford to undertake the connection of Ontario with the sea, and the middle west, whose prosperity it would legitimately increase and secure through the decrease of the cost of transportation and the expansion of our facilities of access to the world's markets, should demand and keep on demanding this improvement until it is done.

Finish the Lakes to the Gulf Waterway Without Delay: The Mississippi is navigable from the gulf to St. Louis and east to Pittsburgh. It is navigable and navigated. It is navigable also but hardly navigated from St. Louis up the Illinois to, let us say, Starved Rock, and then this great thoroughfare is left, as it were, in the air, futile and helpless to perform its natural function. Railroads and highways are not created without regard to terminals, and a waterway must connect something, or it is useless. These are all truisms. Then why is the federal government holding back the permit which is all that is necessary to end this waste and to begin one of the great public improvements of the continent? Chicago, the second city of the nation; Illinois, one of the richest regions of the continent, are waiting. The Illinois plan follows the recommendations of all the engineers' reports; it provides for enlargement with need; it conserves water power; it provides for the necessary connecting link of that system of inland waterways, on which the government has spent hundreds of millions of the people's money, with the second city, the Great Lakes and their territory.

The delay of the government to give its permission for Illinois to go ahead at its own expense on lines approved by the government's engineers is strange, is inexplicable. Who is responsible? We know there are petty spites and disappointments aroused by the failure of previous plans and by pusillanimous politics. But they ought not to control government action on a work of great public benefit. A blast of public protest might do some good.

Develop a Practical Highway System: In Illinois the first requisite, the provision for permanent hard roads, has been achieved. The social benefits that will come from this system of communication need no discussion. What we want now is to develop our plans so as to provide fully the economic advantages to be derived from good roads. We need to build as part of our system roads that will bear traffic and to provide roads of sufficient capacity to carry traffic at congested points. This essential has been ignored so far.

The era of the auto truck is only opening, but the efficiency of this new means of transport depends upon roads that will stand up under the wear of heavy loads and powerful traction. Given these, we shall have a great expansion of our transportation facilities. Less than carload freight will travel, within at least a radius of 100 miles, from point of origin to destination cheaper than by rail and its necessary adjunct, the team truck or auto delivery.

This is especially important in respect to food commodities. We are all especially interested just now in the problem of reducing middle costs for city dwellers. An auto truck system would simplify and economize in this field.

Foresighted city communities, therefore, will build traffic roads out into the country. Wise farming communities will improve connection with the cities. The state should assist. The federal government should provide national roads or assist in connecting up and maintaining main thoroughfares of national extent.

We are only on the threshold of this great expansion of our transportation system, which should develop to the full our railroads, our waterways, and our highroads for the automobile.

Regrow Our Vanished Forests: The prairie soil, for some mysterious reason, did not grow trees, and even today arable land is so valuable that we cannot expect acres which bring rich harvests of grain will be turned into woodland. But the forests of Michigan and Wisconsin were once the source of great wealth, and throughout the Mississippi valley forests can be profitably restored and new areas of growth established. The drainage and climate of the middle west call for trees. We know what deforestation has done to such countries as China. The states should include this subject in their public policy and carry on well considered programs suitable to their own conditions. Planting along roads should be encouraged, on hill tops and slopes, and on land less available for crops. Public forest preserves should be increased. Tree culture and conservation should be taught and practiced.

PREPARE FOR NATIONAL SECURITY.

Republicans in congress have criticized the administration's failure to prepare for war when time was given to prepare. They have held the administration responsible for bad policies, bad management, for evils which resulted, and for sacrifices which were made unescapable.

Now the administration asks congress, controlled by the Republicans, to protect the American future by adopting a new military policy. Where will the Republicans be if in control they will not do what they insisted should have been done when they were not in control?

The responsibility is on them. Secretary Baker, for the administration, asks for the adoption of universal service and for a regular army of 576,000 men.

Universal service is the only sound military policy which the nation can adopt. The regular army must be regulated as to size by the existing or probable demands upon it. Mr. Baker says the world is uneasy and the United States needs this large force. Whether the world is uneasy or not, the United States needs universal service.

That must be the rock bottom of our national defense. With it laid as a foundation, military plans may be drawn to meet conditions. The world is uneasy. It has many illusions, but constantly is running into realities. It hasn't changed. It is governed as it has been governed.

It is dominated by imperialistic ideas. These ideas are being put forward in every direction which promises national profit. The United States is not grabbing anything, but it is involved in the world movements and it has not extricated itself. It will not completely extricate itself even if it does not deliberately commit itself to world obligations and get itself thoroughly entangled in agreements.

It will be fatal to be weak. The war organization of the country is going to pieces. The navy is not ready. The army is being disbanded. The machinery of war is being destroyed. It must be built up again upon a definite policy.

The administration at last has committed itself to a sound policy. The Republican party controls congress. It can make this policy the policy of the country. If it fails to do so it shoulders the responsibility. It not only does that. It surrenders the very principles it has advocated.

Editorials of the Day

CRUSOE AND FRIDAY TRY AN EXPERIMENT.

[Kansas City Star.]

Robinson Crusoe and his man Friday had reached a point in their life on their desert island where they were doing well.

Then one day Crusoe said to Friday: "What's the use of working so hard and saving up yams and cocoanuts?. Thrift is out of date. Let's work short hours and not accumulate anything."

So the new plan was put into effect.

At first it worked beautifully. But after a while the roof began to leak and their clothing to wear out and the reserve supply of food had been exhausted. They decided finally they must mend the roof and make some more clothing. But then they found they hadn't enough food for dinner. So they had to stop work on the roof while they went after food.

"Mr. Crusoe," Friday one day remarked after several months' trial of the new light work plan, "your scheme sounds good. But it somehow doesn't produce the results. For some reason we don't have as many comforts now we are working four hours a day as we had when we were working eight or nine. It seems to me if we are going to have as comfortable a home as we used to have, and as good clothing and as much to eat, we have got to work as we used to under the old plan."

Thus, the chronicler reports, did the desert island realize through painful experience the two great facts of political economy which the race regards as so disagreeable, that in the long run a good living is to be had only by work and thrift.

THREE CAUSES.

[Ohio State Journal.]

There are three things, besides ratio of production to needs, that lie at the bottom of the high cost of living. They are government extravagance, redundancy of money circulation, and profiteering. There can be no suppression of the H. C. L. unless all these are abated or changed. The political statesmen won't see anything but profiteering, for the other two vicious elements, they make themselves believe, the people don't see. And it is not surprising, for politics takes such a narrow view of things that it cannot see it itself. Great appropriations and a large circulating medium would make high prices of food and clothing if there was no profiteering. A few weeks ago a prominent financier wrote an article laying the blame entirely on inflation. But it is well to stamp out profiteering, for it is the child of the other two, so it is well to abolish the whole family. It will have to be done to bring peace back to the nation.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO.

"What fools these mortals be!"

FOR the enlightenment of foreigners who may be surprised by the vote of the House on the daylight-saving law, it should be explained that the present division of time interferes with the farm work of the congressmen when they are at home.

ADD WONDERS OF CALIFORNIA.

[From a Nebraska Paper.]

Mrs. Belle Flanders writes from California that they have been favored with magnificent sunsets. "Almost every evening the orb of day has gone down amid scenes of fiery grandeur in the low lying west. Vast cirrocumulus have been touched with the dying rays and have reflected the red fire as of burning Rome; a brilliant orange that would cause the heart of any admirer of William III. to throb; green that out-Erined lovely Erin and added blends of color more wonderful than Newton ever dreamed of in his dark room with the ray of light burning through the tiny shutter holes. Cloud studies in color that would have made a Corot or Titian rage have been the every evening solace of California loving people. Sermons have been based upon the heavenly wonders, and the Book of Revelations has been canvassed by local clergymen to find comparisons and lessons."

WITHOUT production and plenty of it, every country will find itself in the condition of Russia. The outstanding difference between Russia and the United States is that the Russians quit working altogether, while here the progress toward "a richer life" is more gradual.

A BLOSSOMY IMMORTAL.

IN cleaning out a pigeonhole (sometimes it seems that half our work consists of cleaning out pigeonholes) we came upon a cutting from the Line of 1911, which will be new to many readers. Mr. Arnold Bennett (who should not be confused with Benedict Arnold) visited the United States in that year, and joined, for one day, the family of Line contributors:

SOME INSIST ON JAG.

THE New York Medical Journal is not exactly in favor of prohibition. It recently has had two stories about Hoffman's Anodyne as a jag producer. In one it stated that a police judge in Missouri had tried a man for becoming profoundly intoxicated from taking two ounces of Hoffman's Anodyne. Two ounces of this medicine is an overdose and likely to cause death in one not habituated to it.

In the second article it quoted the health officer of Passaic, N. J., as saying that Hoffman's Anodyne is in wide use among mill workers and is causing the school children to appear dopy.

Hoffman's Anodyne is a compound spirits of ether having the formula:

Ether	32½ per cent
Alcohol	65 per cent
Ethereal oil	2½ per cent

It is an old remedy used for many generations as a substitute for morphine, and as a medicinal stimulant. There is no question about its power to produce a jag. But in addition to being dangerous, a Hoffman's Anodyne jag would not be pleasant.

It is said New Jersey applejack will make you fight your wife and that a moonshine jag will make you fight a wild cat. Hoffman's Anodyne has more ethers than either applejack or moonshine and the Katzenjammer which follows a Hoffman's jag will be just a little more terrible than either of these. Under prohibition, neither Hoffman's Anodyne nor any other spirit of ether will come into any general use as a jag producer.

Of course, both of these stories came from very wet states during very wet times. During dry times some men will show a perverted taste about getting drunk, but the number will not exceed the nuts of the same order developed in wet places during wet times.

There will be some people who will use cologne, liniments, flavoring extracts and patent medicines for jag purposes. When whisky was plentiful, easy to get and cheap there were a good many of these "varnish drinkers." My opinion is that before the law makers get through there will be far less intoxication due to cologne drinking, flavoring extract drinking, liniment drinking and patent medicine drinking than there was during wet times.

Patent medicine intoxication has been very much of an evil. Within the last ten years it has become less so and during the next ten years it will be even less so. Most of the stomach bitters were carried in saloons and sold in competition with whisky. Some were sold in drug stores.

Some of the drug store articles contained less drugs than the out and out saloon articles. In recent years some of the most popular of these drug store jag producers have changed from alcoholic to nonalcoholic remedies and many have increased the amount of drug and decreased the dose of alcohol. The legislative bodies are showing their interest in eliminating these articles as sources of alcohol.

In the good old wet days medical journals contained many reports of disasters due to the drinking of wood alcohol. The only cases of wood alcohol poisoning which ever came to my attention were from wet states. A rancher started a jag on whisky, grew careless, mixed his drinks, got hold of wood alcohol, and lost his eyesight.

My second experience with wood alcohol was among a lot of workers in a brewery. A good many safeguards have been thrown around the use of wood alcohol. Knowledge of its qualities is more widespread. More people know it to be a far more violent poison than grain alcohol, and there is little danger that there will be more fatal wood alcohol poisoning than in the wet days.

We read something about people planning to use solutions of essential oils when stored stocks of alcoholic beverages run out. A certain amount of intoxication can be secured from drinking such compounds, but for such purposes they will prove most unsatisfactory. They are far less intoxicating than alcoholic beverages, they harm the organs more, they are prohibitive in price. There will be people who will try them just as there are people who drink hair oil, but they will always be rare enough to be accounted freaks.

Nothing in this list is to be seriously considered, except the near beers. I do not know just how these products are made, but I understand them to be beers in everything except their alcohol content. They look like beer, pour like beer, foam like beer. In fact a man in a position to know tells us that in Chicago during the last several months every saloonkeeper buying beer was compelled to take a certain percentage of his order in near beer. Many consumers who ordered beer and paid for beer were served near beer. "And the tenderfeet never knew the difference."

Wiley gives two analyses of near beers giving 0.26 and 0.34 per cent alcohol by volume. This is less than is contained in cider and is less than develops in home made root beer which has been stored five days. In fact, there are many ordinary mild fermenting beverages which will develop more than that percentage of alcohol if kept a few days. The only drawback that I can see to the use of near beers is the difficulty in enforcing the laws occasioned by their use.

In all probability much of the present stocks of alcoholic beverages will be used as "a stick" for near beer. How is the casual inspector to know whether the near beer he sees served in restaurants and over bars is near beer reinforced by distilled liquor? A laboratory analysis is required.

A half per cent near beer would not be strong enough to intoxicate to any degree any one except a child. It will be better not to give near beer to young children, but for adults there is no objection to it.

Root beer is a carbonated water sweetened and flavored with sarsaparilla, wintergreen, vanilla and several other essential oils obtained from medicinal plants. If allowed to stand long enough it develops more than one and three-quarters per cent alcohol. The drug store root beer contains almost no alcohol, but the home-brewed kind kept for ten days may become fairly alcoholic.

Root beer is a refreshing drink, liked by many people, but objected to by some because its too high flavor causes thirst. This is an objection to all sweetened drinks and most flavored drinks. They beget thirst. In fact, the only entirely satisfying drink and all things considered far and away the most satisfactory drink is plain, moderately cool water. In the long run its neutral taste is most appealing, it upsets the stomach not at all, it satisfies thirst and has no after effects.

Ginger ale is a carbonated, sweetened, slightly acidulated flavored water. The kinds with the most "bite" contain a small dose of capsicum or red pepper. Taken in moderation there is no objection to ginger ale except the objection which holds against all highly flavored water. In fact, they are very pleasing drinks. Taken in large quantities ginger ale is apt to be hard on the stomach.

Pop is a sweetened, flavored, charged water sold ordinarily in bottles. In the olden times pop was put up in a bottle in which the carbonated water was in touch with a lead plate and wire. Such water often contained a poisoned dose of lead. At the present time the pop bottles are crowned and the carbonated water not being in contact with lead is free from this poison. I do not know of any typhoid caused by carbonated beverages including pop.

Lemonade and limeade are medicines for people with scurvy or any tendency in that direction. For well people these are very wholesome and pleasant beverages. The only objections to them are those which hold against all flavored waters. They are thirst exciters. The more lemonade you drink the more you want. If you drink much of it you must always end up by quenching your thirst with plain water, but in the meanwhile free drafts of the highly flavored drinks have been lessening your relish for water.

Cider is the slightly fermented juice of apples. It is wholesome and pleasing to the taste. Cider is difficult to keep. Hard cider presents one of the great difficulties in the enforcement of prohibition. Its percentage of alcohol may go higher than 5 per cent, and if sugar be added to the fermenting product it will go higher still.

Grape juice is easier kept than cider. It is higher in sugar content. Grape juice is sterilized before bottling and the alcohol content is not a factor.

AKS ADVICE ABOUT BABIES.

Mrs. M. L. writes: "1. I am 24 years old and am four months pregnant. I have an 8 month old baby. Would you advise my putting him on the bottle, and what milk should I use?

"2. Is there more danger than ordinarily if I should have the "flu" this winter, and if so, is there anything I could take or do to prevent taking the "flu," and could any doctor administer it?

"3. I am nervous and irritable when I get warm or tired, as I often do, as I have two children to care for and all my housework to do. Do you think this will have any effect on the child? I try to control myself, but while I may not say anything when things go wrong, I feel them, which is as bad, I should think. Would you advise a tonic to take during the next four months?"

REPLY.

1. Keep your baby at the breast until the weather gets cooler, say about the middle of September. Then put him on diluted fresh clean cow's milk. The milk should be given from a cup.

2. You should be careful to avoid the "flu." Have your physician vaccinate you against it.

3. Try to get as much rest as you can. You are right in controlling your emotions. Equanimity spares the nervous system.

TEST FOR T. B. GERMS.

Ignorant writes: "1. Is it advisable for a young woman to marry who suffers from bronchial trouble; that is, raises phlegm from the throat and bronchial tubes?

"2. If she has a child, what would be the effect on it and on the mother?"

REPLY.

1. She should have the sputum [phlegm] examined at the laboratory for tubercle bacilli. If she has no active consumption there is no reason for not marrying.

2. None on either, provided she is not a consumptive. If she has consumption she might break down under the strain and her child might become infected.

IRON PILLS CAUSE WORRY.

S. S. writes: "Every day for six weeks I have been taking Blaud's pills (five grains). They tend to constipate me slightly, also notice that the waste of bowels is of a very dark color, almost black.

"1. Kindly advise whether I shall continue taking them?

"2. What are they compounded of?

"3. Is HNO3 (three drops to a glassful of water) beneficial to the system?"

REPLY.

1. If you needed iron in the first place you should continue taking Blaud's pills for at least two months more.

2. They are made by mixing sulphate of iron, carbonate of potash, water, glycerin, and gum.

3. I do not know of any condition that is benefited by nitric acid taken internally.

ARE SELF-LIMITED.

A. M. W. writes: "1. What would cause at the end of the spine a most severe soreness? At times it is almost as severe as toothache. Am in pain when I lie down or sit down. Have had this for some weeks and am no better.

"2. Is there anything a woman passing through menopause can take for hot spells which occur with the least exertion and produce a most profound perspiration?"

REPLY.

1. Pain in this region generally calls for no treatment. It is self-limited.

2. Take lutein. It is best given hypodermically. Hot baths are helpful.

FEW DOSES NOT HARMFUL.

Mrs. D. W. writes: "Will you kindly let me know if it would be harmful for a person suffering from rheumatism to take five grains of aspirin each day?"

REPLY.

A few doses will not harm you, but will give you relief. The daily routine taking of aspirin for rheumatic pains or for any other disorder is harmful.

OVER AVERAGE WEIGHT.

J. M. writes: "I am troubled about my height and weight. I am 13 years old, 5 feet 5 inches tall, and weigh 118½ pounds. Please state the average height and weight for 13 years."

REPLY.

Height, 53 to 63 inches; mean, 57 inches.
Weight, 67 to 100 pounds; mean, 83.

HOOLIGAN: "HEAD OF THE NOBLES."

Oak Park, Ill., Aug. 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In a recent edition of your paper there was a letter signed by a Mr. O'Brien concerning the use of the word "Hooligan" in the description of recent "riots" in Liverpool. Mr. O'Brien was right, as far as he went in his criticism—but he did not go down to bed rock. "Hooligan" represents in a very illuminative way the efforts made by England for misrepresenting and wresting from their original meaning not only Gaelic words, but all things Gaelic, as one can readily see by the following explanation which is philosophically correct, and which I hope you will print exactly as I write it, for I have observed that all Gaelic words printed lately by the United States newspapers have been rendered into unmeaning jargon by misplacement, omission, change, and oversupply of the elements of the alphabet.

Ulala Cean means the elite—literally: The head of the nobility. Ua means noble; this has been Englished O'. Uala is pronounced Ooahlah with accent on the first syllable. Cean means head. It is pronounced Kahn. All Gaelic C's are hard. O' is a title of nobility and is in Gaelic Ua, pronounced OO-AH; from the genitive case Uan comes the German Von. England has made of the Gaelic term for the head of the nobles the designation: Hooligan or the head of the rabble. In 1367 England made a law that any Gael reading, writing, speaking or teaching the Gaelic language or having Gaelic books in his possession could be killed wherever found. The Gaelic language is nearest allied to the Sanscrit. It was at one time the language of all Europe except the extreme north and the extreme south. It is the basis of all the Romance languages. The manuscript books of the Gaelic race at present extant in the Gaelic language are more voluminous than all the other literatures of Europe combined. The Gaelic language is a perfect, highly inflected language. It was this centuries before Greece or Rome had even political existence.

A COUNTRY PARSON'S IDEAS.

Chicago, Aug. 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Allow a country parson, a circuit rider, just to touch on a few points that should now interest the American people. I have been intimately in touch with a very few people in my charges, but I believe fundamentally they are much the same as those in the more settled communities. I speak with regard to matters peculiarly personal or individual.

You cannot change a man's nature by enacting a law prohibiting him from doing something. He may obey the law, but he chafes under the restraint, and will often evade it. Where a bad habit is universal and requires new legislation, such as drunkenness and waste, the enactment does not change the nature of the drunkard nor of the wastrel. Would not it be better by some system of training to make such men voluntarily change their ways by showing them it is to their individual interests to do so, and training their minds in childhood so they can understand the proposition when it is put to them?

Some of our schools run too much to book learning and not quite enough to teaching right and wrong and the Golden Rule. Few children know the Golden Rule now, but they read a lot about those who "get away with it," and laugh at the fellow who tries to be honest.

I have seen a great many men in the mountains in communities where the government was unable to stop "moonshining" turn from excessive drinking and be good citizens, because they were made to see themselves that they, individually, and their families, were suffering too much for their supposed pleasures and personal liberties, but they had to make the final change voluntarily.

We have had an epidemic of passing new statutory laws, and now that they are on the books, let us begin the training of the child at home and in school to be law abiding and not law evading. Laws unenforced but weaken our ground, as every law which may be disregarded is but an encouragement to break the laws which may be enforced.

THE POOR LANDLORD.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Your various articles relative to the profiteering landlords are on the whole giving an entirely wrong impression to the general public.

I have patiently waited for one of our real estate boards to answer them, but their spines seem to have suddenly become extremely limp. Whereas, I admit that there are some landlords who are charging larger rental than they are entitled to, as an offset to these, why not take the large number of deadbeats who are constantly moving from place to place and defrauding the landlords of their rental?

You do not seem to take into consideration the fact that for about the last five years the tenants, owing to the surplus of apartments, were insisting upon and getting from one to six months' concessions and that during that period 90 per cent of the apartments in Chicago were running at a loss. Nobody came to the defense of the landlords at that time, and we grinned and took our medicine. No doubt the very same people who asked for the largest concessions are the ones who are making the biggest holler now.

I am not writing this article in defense of those landlords who are profiteering, but in justice to the large percentage of conscientious owners who are giving their tenants a dollar for every dollar which the tenants pay and making a small percentage on their building.

WILL HEIGHTEN CHIMNEY.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Will you kindly see what can be done about the smoke nuisance at the Twenty-second street elevated station? Their smokestack is even with our windows and at all times it is impossible to have our windows open without the house being full of smoke.
L. B.

We have taken this matter up with the South Side Elevated Railroad company, and have ordered them to replace the metal extension which was formerly on this chimney. After this work is done there should be no further cause for complaint from this source.

FRANK A. CHAMBERS,
Acting Smoke Inspector.

CHIMNEY ORDERED REPAIRED.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—[To the Friend of the People.]—The building at 2024 Canalport avenue has a chimney in very bad condition. It looks as though it would fall any minute. Some time ago a few bricks fell. Will you please investigate?
READER.

We have ordered the owner of this building to repair the chimney at once.

FRANK A. CHAMBERS,
Acting Smoke Inspector.

PURCHASE OF PROPERTY.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I bought four parcels of land from same party at same time, divided as follows: Two village lots in one county and one village lot and a tract of land in another county.

1. How many abstracts do I need? I made this inquiry of the county recorder, but he failed to state if two abstracts were sufficient.

2. This property is located in Missouri. The seller agreed to give good clear title, but nothing was said about abstracts. Is he liable for the expense of them?

2. What constitutes a good clear title?
J. L.

1. Enough to cover all the property from the government to the present date. For your own protection, it makes no difference whether they are all bound together or are separate. If you expect to sell in parcels it may be advantageous to have some duplicates.

2. Probably. Depends on the wording of the contract.

3. Question too general for answer here. You should employ an attorney to examine the title for you and determine whether it is good.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

MORE MUSICAL FICTION

by James Gibbons Huneker

A CRITICAL estimate of "Evelyn Innes" without mention of the author's curious desire to revise, rewrite, and otherwise "improve" that novel would be overlooking a notable idiosyncrasy in George Moore. In a preface to "Sister Teresa" he has told us that he had written 300,000 words before he realized that such quantity would be fatal to his fiction. Two volumes, then, were resolved upon. "Evelyn Innes" ends abruptly for the patent reason that Mr. Moore had sawed his manuscript in twain.

This was in 1898. The London publisher, Fisher Unwin, in 1901 planned a sixpenny reprint. Mr. Moore assented to the proposition, as it gave him an opportunity to remold the story. This he did with a vengeance. The text is largely new. Ninety pages are excised from the original, with the result that the second Evelyn is almost a stranger to us. Worse followed.

A few years later the editorial itch again attacked Mr. Moore's pen, and a Sister Teresa—Evelyn's name in religion—appeared that infuriated all orthodox Moorovians. Ulick Dean, her second lover, was metamorphosed into a managerial person. Mr. Moore had enjoyed another of his historic quarrels with the poet, William Butler Yeats, and had obliterated all traces of him as formerly set forth in the first Ulick Dean. The close is catastrophic. Evelyn doffs the nun's garb—luckily enough for her convent—and returns to her old life, but to which particular lover I have forgotten. I am not sorry, because the original Sister Teresa is a fairly credible character, while in the revised version she is only a disturbing ghost. The mystery is why she ever took the veil.

"Sister Teresa" is by no means so brilliant or as convincing as "Evelyn Innes," but its psychology is finer wrought, and a psychology much more difficult to handle than in the first half of the novel. Evelyn, morbid, fatigued by singing Wagner, was bound to taste convent life; too many triumphs, social and operatic, bored by her lovers, her nerves worn to an irritable thread by insomnia, a dyspeptic—is it any wonder that the golden haired girl with the bran-freckled face saw in conventual life a green blooming oasis in a wilderness of vanity, lust, and artificial ideals?

You note her mother's spirit grow stronger in her every day, that mother, with the cold eyes and thin lips who, early in a great career, suddenly lost her voice. "The portrait of our father or our mother is a sort of crystal ball into which we look in the hope of discovering our destiny," says Mr. Moore. Evelyn was weary of love, of the animal love which dragged down her soul from God. Ulick Dean was closer to her than Sir Owen Asher, because he was a mystic, while Sir Owen ruffled her spirit by his rank materialism. But these two men fade after the first hundred pages of the tale.

"We have only to change our ideas to change our friends. Our friends are more or less embodiments of our ideas."

The convent of the Passionist Sisters at Wimbledon is the glowing core of this artistic narrative. For the life contemplative, this Irish novelist has always betrayed in his fiction a predilection. Evelyn had dilly'dallied with her innermost convictions. It was long before she sharply realized that faith is a peculiar gift, is, indeed, a special form of talent, which must be sedulously cultivated else will not come to a perfect flowering. And after she had leeft her lover, and abandoned the operatic stage, after her father had died at Rome; when she had professed, had taken the veil, and become Sister Teresa, her former life fell away from her, and she was a happy bride of Christ—until the pious honeymoon was over. These divine nuptials have their honeymoons, their antipathies, their hours of indifference, even of despair. Acedia is a form of hysteria recognized by psychiatrists. Sister Teresa had her nights of soul darkness, when the whirring of the bats-wings of melancholy were overheard.

NO doubt the author used Huysman's "En Route" as a springboard, with its revelations of monastic discipline and the austere rigors of the order at La Trappe. But Moore is more poetic, tenderer than the French writer. He has so highly individualized, so completly transposed, the character that it would be hypercritical to dwell upon his obligations to Huysmans. He recalls the Russians. Also the mighty Flaubert. There are many half-cadences, chapters closing on unresolved harmonies, some elliptical writing, and all bathed in a hazy atmosphere.

The style is clear, rhythmic, penetrating. George Moore tells of subtle things in a simple manner; the reverse of the method of Henry James, who delights in the narration of simple subjects subtly treated. The character drawing in "Sister Teresa" is not so contrapuntal as in "Evelyn Innes." The convent sisters are sympathetically portrayed; they are the prioress, Mother Hilda, and Sister Mary Saint John. With the brush of a miniaturist, Mr. Moore depicts cloistered life, its futile gossiping, its tiny faults, heroic sacrifices, and its air humming with sanctity

There are pages in the book which might have been written by a nun, so real, so intimate, so saturated are they with the religious atmosphere. And that garden! Whosoever has walked in the sequestered sweetness of a convent garden must feel the goodness, the spirituality, and a certain soft communing with another world, which modulates into the speech and personal rhythms of the nuns. This atmosphere we find in these incense perfumed pages. After the fleshly passion and the unrest in the spirit of "Evelyn Innes" this "Sister Teresa" possesses a consoling music of its own.

It is after the convent doors close on her that the real struggle begins for Evelyn; the duel between her evil and her better natures. There is much talk about the mystical works of Ruysbroeck, John of the Cross, St. Theresa of Avila, St. Angela of Foligno, Catharine Emmerich, and others. There is not so much music talk as in "Evelyn Innes," for Sister Teresa has left the world of footlights and its vain sonorities. However, here are several specimen nuggets of criticism: "In Handel there are beautiful proportions; it is beautiful, like eighteenth century architecture; but here I can discover neither proportion nor design." Mr. Moore is referring to a Brahms score. Now, whatever else may be lacking in Brahms, we are always sure to find design and proportion. Another example: "She remembered that César Franck's music affected her much the same way. Shrugging her shoulders, she said: 'When I listen I always hear something beautiful, only I don't listen.'" This judgment is rather hard on Franck; nevertheless, she was the loser.

AND how does it all end, these psychic adventures of a Wagner singer turned nun; of this woman who had "discovered two instincts in herself—an inveterate sensuality and a sincere aspiration toward spiritual life"? Like her mother she loses her voice, and after giving up the idea of leaving the convent she settles down to teaching, both singing and pianoforte. Sir Owen Asher no longer troubles her, and Ulick Dean has disappeared, or, perhaps, crumbled into dust like Brann in his beloved Celtic myths.

No one from the outside world visited her except Louise Helbrunn, who sang Brangaene to her Isolda during the old days at Covent garden. To the evanescent bell booming of their faraway past march the memories of the two mature women. It is rather melancholy, this coda, as is the close of all active life. "Our fate is more like us than we are aware," adds Mr. Moore, and in the last analysis the fate of Evelyn fits her character. As a singer she talked too much like a music critic; as Sister Teresa too much like a sophist in a nun's habit.

From the start she was a theologian in petticoats, a detestable thing, even more detestable than a female politician. Her conscience was more potent than her lovers. She was not altogether in earnest, always a little inhuman, prodigiously selfish, so we may contemplate with equanimity her immurement with her final "packing-up" for death and its dusty hypnotism. Naturally, these comments of mine deal with the original version of "Sister Teresa." The book is full of brain stuff; it is also a book with a soul. In it the art of George Moore has come to a consummate blossoming. He always had the voice, had this disquieting yet fascinating artist; in the odyssey of Evelyn Innes' soul he has both voice and vision.

WHAT makes the case of Mr. Moore so peculiarly his own is his unlikeness to our preconceived notion of an Irishman. No man of genius resembles his countrymen. We find Swift, Burke, Bishop Berkeley, Parnell, Bernard Shaw, or George Moore with few of the characteristics usually ascribed to Irishmen. They boast wit, yet they are not the rollicking blades that Lever loved to paint. Tom Moore and his rosewater verse, Richard Brinsley Sheridan and his glossy smartness, more nearly hit the popular notion of what a Celtic poet or playwright and man of the world should be.

I don't include the name of Oscar Wilde, who, after being underrated, is now ridiculously overpraised. Whatever else, Wilde was not an original genius; he is the cleverest mockingbird in English literature save Robert Louis Stevenson. Take from Wilde his indebtedness to Swinburne in poetry, his debt to Walter Pater in prose, and his obligations to Huysmans—the Huysmans of "A Rebours"—and you have little left. Epigrams and a sterile epicureanism. But mother wit he had. That was his Irish heritage.

Now, George Moore is far from being an Irishman of the Lover-Lever type, and while he evolved a French soul for himself, he has no point of contact with the Gallic side of Wilde. He is mystical and gross, as hairy old Walt would say; yet there is a tonic strain in him absent from the work of Oscar. He is a neo-Celt and his early adoration of all French is proof positive. Later he developed a restless spirit, a desire to flee the Anglo-Saxon and his haunts. It is the homing instinct in the Celt; after 40, most men of talent return to their tribe and their totem.

Mr. Moore became an Irishman among the Irish. It was the newest incarnation of his perverse, feminine soul, which, waxlike, retains the most subtle impressions. The reader of his earlier books knew him as a worshiper of Shelley and a student of romantic literature; then as a follower of Flaubert, Zola—not forgetting the De Maupassant of "Bel Ami"—and of the symbolist, Huysmans; finally of the George Moore we best like in his Trilogy and the Memoirs. And perhaps these personal confessions will outlive his fiction.

I HAVE read "Martin Schuler," by Romer Wilson, with mixed impressions. Announced as "the first fine novel of the age" by a reviewer in the Westminster Gazette, it shrivels in a cooler analysis into a commonplace story of an impossible German composer, not particularly well written, and marred throughout by an overwrought sentimentality. Evidently "made in Germany." Why is it level headed novelists can't write of music without swooning into nonsense? Heidelberg is a romantic spot; no need, however, to pen pages of rhapsody over its charms. We had fancied that the Charles Auchester type of musical fiction is forever vanished. Apparently not.

But there are good things in "Martin Schuler"; the author has doubtless read "Maurice Guest," a far superior book. There is a woman in the newer story who is the best drawn character of the lot, and a wretched crowd it seems to be. Hella von Rosenthal is a portrait. Her relations with the humbug composer, Martin, show her noble soul. I do wish some one would write a novel in which music plays a strong part, yet is not all the novel. Human nature should have a peep in occasionally. That is why "Evelyn Innes" is a work of art as well as a moving story. Mr. Moore does not flop all over the shop with technical terminology. The ending of "Martin Schuler" is melodramatic. He dies at a first performance of his operatic masterpiece—which sounds like dear old Ouida redivivus. But there is talent displayed here and there. It may be a first novel, and if so it promises enough.

I HAVE to thank Carl Van Vechten for sending me to "Maurice Guest," which he reviews in his "Interpreters and Interpretations." If the novel were not so long, and didn't contain so many repetitions, and if the style had been more polished, I shouldn't hesitate to say that "Maurice Guest" is the most satisfying musical fiction in the English language. It is sombre, powerful, imaginative, and its reconstruction of musical student life at Leipsig is as vivid as Dostoievsky; also as digressive, episodic, and spun out. The heroine, Louise, might have stepped from the pages of "The Idiot"; indeed, there is a certain resemblance between her passionate, cruel, capricious, unsatisfied nature and that of the unhappy, half mad Nastasya Filippovna.

Henry Handel Richardson, the author, has studied Russian and French fiction to advantage. His is said to be a pen name; it is a woman who has written this most moving human yet morbid tale. Both Tolstoy and Artzbachev are evoked. I confess that I read the book through at a long sitting and then reread it. It is Leipsic musical life incarnate, in which the erotic motive predominates. The sorry "villain" violin virtuoso has the merit of existing, and the flabby hero—who nevertheless touches our sympathies—is flesh and blood, a young Englishman of a weak artistic type not altogether unfamiliar. But the Americans are caricatures one and all.

I fancy the book has been judged "immoral" because the author holds the scales so well balanced. I haven't read any of the present day novels that can hold a candle to "Maurice Guest" in the slow dissection of self-tormented souls. It is unpleasant, to be sure, and the conditions it describes are unpleasant; yet they ring true to those who have studied abroad, whether in Germany, France, Italy; they hold good for New York or Boston as well. The gods of love and lubricity—perhaps two sides of the same medal—haunt the lives of music students. Perhaps that is why we never heard much of "Maurice Guest." If the author, an Australian musician, has written other fictions, I for one should like to read them. Compelling power permeates the pages of "Maurice Guest," a morbid, disturbing power. Characterization is its strong point. The book was published in 1908. A second edition was issued ten years later.

"THE BRANDING IRON" [Houghton Mifflin], by Katherine Newlin Burt, is kicking up a lot of literary dust, lassooing countless readers, and making a general and thrilling roundup of us, branded with K. N. B.'s own mark. It's good old fashioned mellow drammer of the wild west, starting with a branding iron in the hands of a jealous husband and the cruelly scarred shoulder of an impetuous girl wife. It dashes through a snowbound winter with a New York playwright who has shot the husband, rescued the shoulder from the burning, as it were, and after skillful courting and winning casts the girl, shoulder and all, back into the burning because he gets a letter from the woman for whom he had built the secret house in the trackless wood. When she finds that her husband is alive, and that she is branded with two spiritual scars, her disgrace and her love for her caveman husband, she runs away lest he find her and finally becomes, through the ever obliging help of John J. Coincidence, as Irvin Cobb calls him, the leading lady in a play about a mountain woman whom a clever man thought he had tamed. Her manager is the husband of the "woman of the secret house."

What more could one ask of any melodrama? When she finds that the author of the play and her man of the woods are the same, there's a pretty little clawing scene and then old friend branding husband appears, and the book ends with Joan in her husband's strong arms. There's something more than mere melodrama in the book, though. Mrs. Burt certainly can write, and for a first novel it's a darb. Rex Beach, new president of the Eminent Authors Pictures, Inc., thinks it's going to be a great success as a movie. Of course it will. It's a movie come to life in a book. As Emerson so aptly did not say, "A little thriller now and then is relished by the best of men."

"The Moon and Sixpence" [Doran] is as great a biography as has ever been written. The fact that it is fiction, and not actual biography, does not affect its right to be placed among the great records of the lives of great men. Charles Strickland lives as surely in "The Moon and Sixpence" as any man ever lived in a biography before. Genius has set down the record of genius. W. Somerset Maugham is a genius, a fugitive soul whose creation is of the literary world apart. He isn't comparable to any one else, because he neither imitates nor reflects any one else. He is the only writer I know who somehow makes the record of brutal truth and reality a living thing. Others who write of base things, of cruelties, of ruthless selfishness, of horrible debauchés, makes one feel that they are writing of realities, horrible realities, but it is the events themselves, not the recording of them, that is real.

Somerset Maugham makes of his record of truth something even more fundamentally true and real than the thing itself. It is the old argument about art. Other writers have made amazing photographic reproductions of truth. They have done freehand what a camera might have done. But they have not made something greater than the camera could have made. That something—that spark of everlasting oneness with creation—Somerset Maugham has in "The Moon and Sixpence." He has painted a portrait of a genius which will live because it IS genius interpreted by genius. I wish that it were in my power to share that sense of the living beauty of the recreation of truth that Mr. Maugham inspires. Beside his picture of genius all of the popular conceptions fade into lineless masses of dauby color—and yet a more completely ruthless, selfish, "unpleasant" character never lived in fiction or in fact.

Somerset Maugham himself might make a hero of a biography novel. He is not much over 40 now and he is one of the best known writers in England—ironically, not for his remarkable novels, but for his wholly delightful comedies. At one time he had three or four plays running in London at the same time and he has made a fortune from them. As a novelist he is known to a very small audience of readers of real discrimination. He is, those who know him say, a quietly amusing person with a convenient stutter which, like Charles Lamb's, heightens the effect of his wit. Before he took to writing he was a surgeon and he has never quite let it drop. He started with a French ambulance as a surgeon in the war, and then was taken into the intelligence department.

And speaking of biographies, it is the longing to have a biography written of her father like unto "The Moon and Sixpence" that makes much of the story of Samuel Merwin's "The Passionate Pilgrim" [Bobbs Merrill]. It is the third volume of the fictional life of Henry Calverley, who is also a genius, but who has not as his chronicler a genius like Mr. Maugham. Samuel Merwin doesn't pretend to do any great psychologizing about genius. He first of all wants to tell an entertaining story. And he does that all right. He also creates a very real atmosphere of a middle western city of the Cleveland type. (Cleveland boosters will says there ain't no such animal as a Cleveland TYPE, that Cleveland's herself and nobody's like her.) "The Passionate Pilgrim" is, like all of Mr. Merwin's work, very good in just the way he wants it to be, probably—popular, pleasant, easy to read, and easy to forget.

P. G. Wodehouse's facility in the literature of the stage has given his knack at writing novels the delightful characteristic of a sprightly conversation. His stories are usually no more than clever plays with description instead of stage setting, with a little—a very little—psychologizing instead of an actor's mobile expression and a little more flirting with time and geography than one can do in the theater. A Wodehouse story moves along at a gayly musical comedy rate, is always amusing, just fantastic enough to have a chic style of its own, and is to high and low brow alike a jolly companion. The sprightly young gentleman who now signs himself Pelham Grenville Wodehouse has written in "Their Mutual Child" [Boni & Liveright] a rollicking satire on eugenics, a jolly love story, with the usual complications—but something more—a tale with that rare quality of canty gayety.

"The Position of Peggy," with an introduction by Sir Arthur Pinero, is the fourth of the Dutton American edition of the novels of Leonard Merrick. "Cythia," with an introduction by Maurice Hewlett, is the third. "Conrad in Quest of His Youth," with an introduction by Sir James M. Barrie, was the first, and "The Actor-Manager," introduced by William Dean Howells, the second volume. Evidently the only way one can secure the limited edition is by committing assault and battery. Immediately upon publication of the first volume of the limited edition the whole edition of 1,500 copies was sold out in advance. The regular edition is printed from the same plates, however, and is both cheaper and inexhaustible.

"Oranges and Lemons" [Houghton Mifflin] is Mary C. E. Wemyss' latest novel about a bachelor uncle, a maiden aunt, and their two wards. Nobody seems to be the latter part of the title. Perhaps it's just put in to make the title hard, like many of the childish conundrums.

JAPAN in 1899 and AFTER

by Mary H. Krout

IN 1894 an agreement was entered into between England and Japan for their mutual advantage. Japan, an island realm, at that time with an insufficient navy, was to have the protection of England's sea power, in case of need, while England was to claim the support of Japan whose military strength had been greatly developed, in case her interests in India and elsewhere in the far east were threatened by rival powers. From Japan there was no danger of invasion, so far as the English were concerned, though even then she was inspired by enormous political ambition, and realized the necessity of territorial expansion for the development of new industrial undertakings, both to increase her revenues and keep a restless element among her people profitably employed. England was concerned with the steady if slow advance of Russia toward her Indian frontier via Persia, her real purpose was imperfectly disguised by commercial treaties with that country—a part of her persevering search for "an ice-free front" that would give her ships access at all seasons to the high seas.

At that time the relations between England and Germany were superficially friendly. But under the surface relentless jealousy of Germany was working, soon to betray itself, in the emperor's message of congratulation to President Kruger during the Boer war.

The French were firmly established in Tonkin and ultimately secured a coaling station at Waugchauwau, afterwards acquiring important holdings in Madagascar and Africa; while the Italians and Portuguese were also gaining considerable foothold in Africa and elsewhere. England, probably because of jealousy caused by her success in controlling her eastern dependencies, her commercial prosperity, and her navy, was in reality "the most hated nation."

She had been forced, therefore, to consider the advantages of being able to command assistance from a well crowned, well armed, well disciplined army, practically on the ground, ready to reinforce her authority should it be required.

THIS, no doubt, was the basis of the celebrated agreement of 1894 with Japan, whose influence, becoming more firmly established and steadily increasing, has made itself disastrously felt today through the peace conference, in the aspect of a secret and deeply laid conspiracy. The premeditated invasion of Corea by Japan in 1894 opened the way to the wholesale despoilment of China. The invaded country, quite defenseless, was essentially Chinese, whose suzerainity had long been recognized and accepted. Its religion, in most of its manners and customs were derived from China.

Encountering little resistance in Corea, the Japanese pushed on into the rich and coveted province of Manchuria, where through all the international complications that have followed, she has since maintained her foothold. With a cruel indemnity Japan also demanded the cession of the Liao-tung peninsula, a demand successfully resisted by Russia, France, and Germany. Failing to secure the Liaotung peninsula, she was forced to content herself with Formosa, the Pescadores—a group of islands in the straits forming a strong garrison, to be well fortified preventing any incursions from the mainland. She had also seized Wai-hai-wai, with its strong coast defense, and Port Arthur. With this she demanded an indemnity of 200,000,000 taels. Port Arthur, however, was surrendered and leased to Russia for ninety-nine years, after a murderous attack on Li Hung Chang, who had been sent to Shimonoseky to negotiate a peace treaty—the surrender having been forced by way of reparation for the crime of a would-be assassin.

In 1898, seeing the closing in of rival powers around her special sphere of activity, Great Britain asked guarantees that her extensive commercial interests in the valley of the Yangtze should not be encroached upon, and that the river, which gave British traders an outlet to the Pacific should be kept open to general navigation.

THIS, in brief, with Japan always entrenched in the background, was the situation in 1898. All this followed the invasion of China in 1894. One of the great aims of the Marquis Ito—an aim through all the vicissitudes and changes of the empire, that was never relinquished, was the removal of extra territorial restrictions—the abolition of the consular courts. It was to effect this that he courted and ingratiated himself with the western powers, had studied their political, educational, and commercial systems of Europe and the United States—knowledge for which, before its final adjustment, he was to pay for with his life. As he had labored from his youth for the vindication and strengthening of imperialistic rule, and accomplished it, so he now turned his energiés to sweeping away the diplomatic limitations that relegated Japan to an inferior position among civilized peoples. He did not approve undue haste, wisely counseling that radical reforms were to be avoided, and time given for the assimilation of western ideas, and the readjustment to meet new conditions, and he wisely counseled at this crisis the necessity of "making haste slowly."

In 1894 the first decisive step had been taken. Great Britain and the United States agreed to relinquish their maintenance of the principle of extraterritoriality. In return for this far reaching concurrence they were given the right to trade throughout the empire, having previously, with other foreign nations, been confined to a few specified ports. This agreement was to go into effect in 1899—five years later.

Within a short time a similar treaty was made with other foreign powers, influenced no doubt by the decision of England and the United States. In anticipation of the fulfillment of the agreement a thorough revision of the Japanese code was undertaken to harmonize it with western jurisprudence. It had been taken for granted, evidently, that Japan through her military achievements—the organization of a thoroughly modern army and navy—would be as readily modernized judicially and politically. The westernizing of Japan, however, fell short, just there. Manners, customs, religion, the maintenance of the Yoshiwara as a national institution, under government control had changed but little. The public official, the wealthy, traveled merchant leaving his office or his counting room put off his European clothes and resumed his loose native dress, and still preferred chopsticks to the knife and fork. In the period fixed, the work of remodeling the legal code of an oriental absolutism to harmonize with the broad and liberal basis of western civilization, as Ito had forseen, made slow progress. Having attained the vantage point to which he had so long aspired he realized that the crucial test was now impending, and this was to be cautiously met, and only after the most deliberate and painstaking preparation. Such unanticipated conservatism was strongly condemned and the former popular idol became an object of bitter execration for a time, of the radical element—the shifting masses who often temporarily control public opinion everywhere, and usually with disaster.

ALTHOUGH this condition of things was the logical outcome of English—and American—approval five years before the English newspapers in the east gave frequent accounts of Japanese judicial ignorance measured by western standard. For example, a foreign woman living in Yokahama and her little daughter disappeared. After three days' patient search both were found—in prison. The mother had taken her child out for a walk, the little girl wearing a short sleeved frock. This, according to Japanese ideas, was indecent exposure of the person, a violation of Japanese law, to be punished accordingly.

An extravagantly sever sentence rendered about that time—also against a foreigner—was denounced by English newspapers in China as an outrage upon all civilized ideas of justice. It was reversed, and the apology for so gross a miscarriage of justice was, that the judge had been quite ill the previous day and night, and had not recovered sufficiently to consider the case fully.

But the deep and fare reaching consequences of the premature abolition of the consular courts were felt most disastrously by foreigners living and engaged in business in Japan. Some of them had been residents of the country for many years. They had developed a large trade as buyers and exporters of tea, silks, linens, and other native manufactures. They had built warehouses and mills on lands leased to them profitably by the government, and were employing hundreds of people at better wages than they had ever been able to earn. These industries were at once exhorbitantly taxed, and numbers of them had to be abandoned at a heavy loss. The ship by which the writer returned to the United States in February, 1900, was crowded with these merchants and exporters. They had dealt fairly and honorably with the Japanese, and in their resentment over the unjust discrimination of the government, declared that "they were through with Japan."

The higher officers knew that necessary discipline might, possibly, be forcibly resisted. In that event, beside creating a panic on board, a complaint would be lodged against them at the first Japanese port, followed, almost certainly by detention, a trial and, probably, a term of imprisonment. An incident somewhat of this nature is recalled, but first it should be explained that there seems to be inherent in the Japanese character, with all their indominable cleverness, a certain childishness which betrays them into actions that would appear irrational in a normal American or Englishman.

The incident referred to is an illustration of this. On one of the steamers of an important Japanese line, the petty officers playfully attempted to toss the chief engineer in a blanket. With justifiable self respect he resisted such an affront to his dignity. Their frolicsome mood changed instantly to ungovernable rage, and they threatened to kill him. The captain was forced to relieve him from his duties, protect him and hide him when they docked on their arrival in Japan.

The above incidents occurred a good many years ago, and with their marvelous power of assimilation and adaptation—to say nothing of acquisitiveness—the Japanese have since made marked advancement in harmonizing their laws and customs with those of the western powers—of England and the United States and Germany—the latter, especially, and in recent years. But notwithstanding all this, there remain the ancient and unalterable antagonisms. Oriental as opposed to western psychology; Buddhism as opposed to Christianity; and imperialism as an insurmountable barrier to democracy.

Within the period from 1894 to 1919 Japan has insidiously advanced her material and political interests, and this while Germany and Russia stubbornly resisted that advance. Since 1898, on the pretext of forcing the Russians out of Manchuria her ascendency, temporarily interrupted, has continued. Notwithstanding her pledges to respect the autonomy of Corea, Japanese colonization and exploitation have never ceased. In the recent world war, while ostensibly aiding her ally, Great Britain, she seized the opportunity to secure Kiao-Chau, leading up to the possession of Shantung. Her losses, in men and money, have been insignificant compared to those of England and France; she is less impoverished by the war than Italy, and remains territorially intact with China despoiled, Germany and Austria disrupted, and Russia in chaos.

She remains, in effect, the one nation that can count upon considerable gains for an inconsiderable outlay. Her demands on our Pacific coast have been partially met, and when not to her entire satisfaction she has desired means to evade legislation enacted to hold her in hceck. The reported recent purchase of lands in Chili, and the bargaining for oil wells in Mexico may well furnish food for political reflection. Every alliance entered into between Great Britain and Japan within recent years reveals the fact that each has given Japan some new and important privilege.

The English evidently perceived the trend of their negotiations, and in the treaty of 1911 specified that Great Britain should not be bound to aid Japan against any power with which she had a treaty of arbitration, thus excluding the United States from difficulties that might arise between the two nations. The present "secret treaty" promises still further advantages to Japan, placing her in full possession of Shantung. Her promise that she will ultimately return the province to China need not be taken seriously, when it is recalled how her pledges have been broken in regard to Corea and Manchuria. In this connection an utterance from the London Morning Post respecting Germany may be thus paraphrased: "Japan, under whatever world system, will still be Japan." In view of what she has accomplished within less than thirty years, with all the diplomacy, open and secret, that has favored her schemes of relentless aggression, Americans may well ask themselves: "What next?"

'Neath Nippon's yoke will say
The world is getting safer for
Democracy each day.

A noble archduke rules the roost
In Hungary just now;
The people had a whack at it
And raised a merry row;
The kaiser bunch is talking loud
And may horn in the play—
The world is getting safer for
Democracy each day.

His Royal Highness Albert comes
To honor us. My word!
We kowtow to the progeny
Of sweet old George the Third;
We licked the King; the Kinglet's boots
We lick—hoorah, hooray!
The world is getting safer for
Democracy each day.

THE CAMPAIGN OF 1918

By Maj. Gen. Sir Frederick B. Maurice

lines of supply were again able to work smoothly.

That is to say, it would have been necessary to give the enemy a breathing space, which would have allowed him to restore some sort of order in his ranks and make good his retreat to the Meuse, where he would have been able to establish himself on a very much shorter front and in very strong positions. This would have entailed fighting at least one more great battle and have cost us very many lives.

There was, however, a part of the front on which the allied armies had made little progress and behind which their communications were in good order; that was the front between the Meuse, northeast of Verdun, and the Swiss frontier. As I have explained in a previous article, Pershing, by obliterating the St. Mihiel salient, which for four years had protruded into the French lines, had given Foch an opportunity for invading Lorraine.

The French marshal had all his plans ready for the extension of his long line of battle by an advance into Lorraine when hostilities ceased. In fact, the maneuvers preliminary to this advance had begun on Nov. 7, when the three French corps immediately east of the Meuse attacked in the direction of Montmedy, a movement followed by the advance of the 2d American army through the Woevre, as the country east of the St. Mihiel salient is called, toward the famous iron fields of Briey.

The left of the 2d American army had driven the Germans back some three miles in the Woevre by the morning of Nov. 11. The general plan for this new attack was that the left of the 2d American army should be protected by the advance of the right of the 1st American army and of the three French corps on Longwy, the French fort on the Luxemburg frontier about fifteen miles north of Briey, which had been captured in 1914 by the German crown prince in the first invasion of France; the 2d American was to attack toward and across the Briey iron fields, which lie north of Metz, while another Franco-American attack was to be made east of the Moselle, and to the south of Metz. These two attacks, which were to have been in full swing by Nov. 11, were intended to isolate the great German fortress.

Now there is very little doubt but that this battle on the Lorraine front would have ended in another great allied victory, for the Germans would have been greatly outnumbered and their troops on this part of the line were not of the best quality, but it is equally certain that it would have exposed a great part of Lorraine to the ravages of war and very probably also to the same widespread destruction which the Germans had carried out during their retreat further north.

The general situation at the time of the armistice was then that the allied armies between the Dutch frontier and the Meuse were for the time being incapable of carrying on a sustained advance, though two British cavalry divisions were ready to begin a local pursuit on a portion of the British front. The Germans in front of them had been utterly defeated and were almost helpless, but we were not and could not for some little time be in a position to complete their destruction as a military force.

It was, therefore, reasonably certain that, if the armistice had been refused, the allied armies would have had to fight hard and would have suffered serious losses, while there was the risk of exposing the greater part of Belgium, including the cities of Brussels and Antwerp and the great Charleroi industrial district, which were still in the hands of the Germans, to destruction. Everything was ready for another battle on the Lorraine front, but this, too, would certainly have cost us many lives and have caused much damage to valuable property, which is today intact and in the hands of the French.

The problem which the allied and associated governments and generals had to decide was whether they would continue to fight on these terms or would impose such conditions of armistice upon the enemy as would render him militarily impotent. They decided on the latter course and I think there are very few who would have taken upon themselves the burden of deciding otherwise.

The Real Question.

THE question was whether the advantages to be gained by invading Germany by force of arms were worth the cost in life, the suffering, and the material damage involved, provided the terms of armistice destroyed, effectively Germany's powers of mischief. I do not think they were, nor do I think that there can be today any doubt that the armistice terms did leave Germany powerless. The criticism of the decision to stop fighting on Nov. 11 has been due to the feeling that the German people do not recognize that their armies were beaten in the field and the fear that this state of mind may sooner or later cause them to fight again. My own conviction is that the reception of the German troops in Germany and the statements made in the German press and by the German people that the armistice was not the consequence of defeat were not unnatural and can be explained. In November, 1918, the German people could only get news of what was happening on the front through the newspapers, and the newspapers got their information through the military press bureau.

The officials of that bureau, either because they were so inured to lying that they could not tell the truth, or in the hope of staving off revolution by continuing to deceive the people, announced from the first days when things began to go wrong for them right up to the end that the German armies were fighting splendidly, that the front was everywhere intact, and that the troops were falling back, slowly and steadily according to plan, to better and stronger positions.

No inkling was given of the true state of affairs on the front and the German people ascribed the surrender either to the revolution, if they were not in favor of it, or more generally to the desire of the new government to get the blockade raised as quickly as possible. When the German troops came back to their homes and began to talk, the truth gradually became known, and the German people were able to see for themselves the state of the army which had once been their god. I do not think that there is today any intelligent German who does not know that the German armies were utterly beaten, though there may be many who would not admit as much to a foreigner.

It has begun to dawn upon most Germans that it is more disgraceful to admit that they accepted defeat, ignominiously surrendered their navy, gave up the greater part of their artillery, and aeroplanes, handed over large quantities of rolling stock and military supplies and permitted the armies of the enemies to occupy the Rhine unopposed, that they did all this when they still had the power to fight on, than to acknowledge that their armies were defeated in the field.

I do not believe that we shall in the future hear much more of the unbeaten German armies, nor do I believe that if we had not stopped fighting on Nov. 11 it would have been possible to make Germany any less capable of resistance than she is today. I have not myself found, nor have I met any enlightened observer of Germany, who has found any reliable indication that the people of Germany are penitent or that they realize that they have committed an abominable crime.

They do admit that they have blundered, but further than that they have not yet got. The present generation of Germans has been brought up to worship a false god and there is no health in them. Theirs is not an attitude of mind which we could have altered by invading their country. Time is the only cure for that and a new generation which knows not Prussian militarism must grow up in a healthier atmosphere before Germany will be fit to take her place among the civilized nations of the world. In the interval it is necessary to see to it that the present generation is not permitted to do the world mischief, and that is the first and most important business which confronts the league of nations.

THE END.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

I harbored no rancor for those who raise
The cost of comestibles fifty ways:
I held my intolerable ire in check
As my purse collapsed in a woeful wreck.

No fierce desires inflamed my spleen
When they raised the price of the Boston bean,
And nary a punitive yearn did swoop
When they boosted the tariff on fish and soup.

But O, that cool, dispassionate calm,
That philosophical, blissful balm
Was riddled with apertures, dents, and vents
When Corned Beef and Cabbage hit Sixty Cents.

Corned Beef and Cabbage is sixty cents.
Think of it, ladies! Think of it, gents!
A lilliput portion of esculent ease
Now costs the sum total of sixty big c's.

Shades of Lucullus and Brian Boru
Think of this tragedy; think of it, do!
Wreathed in your glory, ecstatic, immense,
What do you make of this horror intense?
Corned Beef and Cabbage.........Sixty Cents.

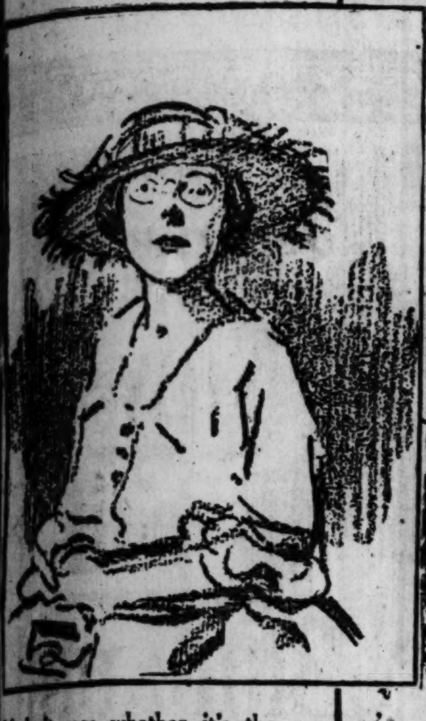
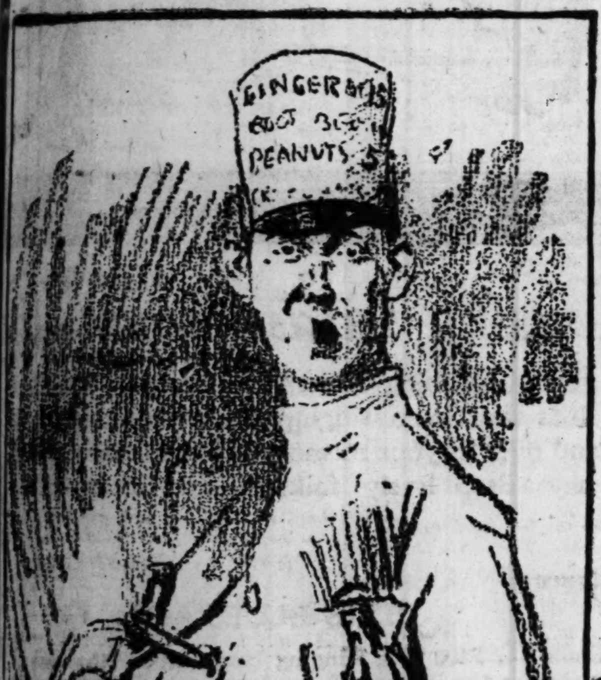
AMONG US MORTALS
Sunday Baseball Fans
By W. E. HILL

(Copyright, 1919, New York Tribune Inc.)

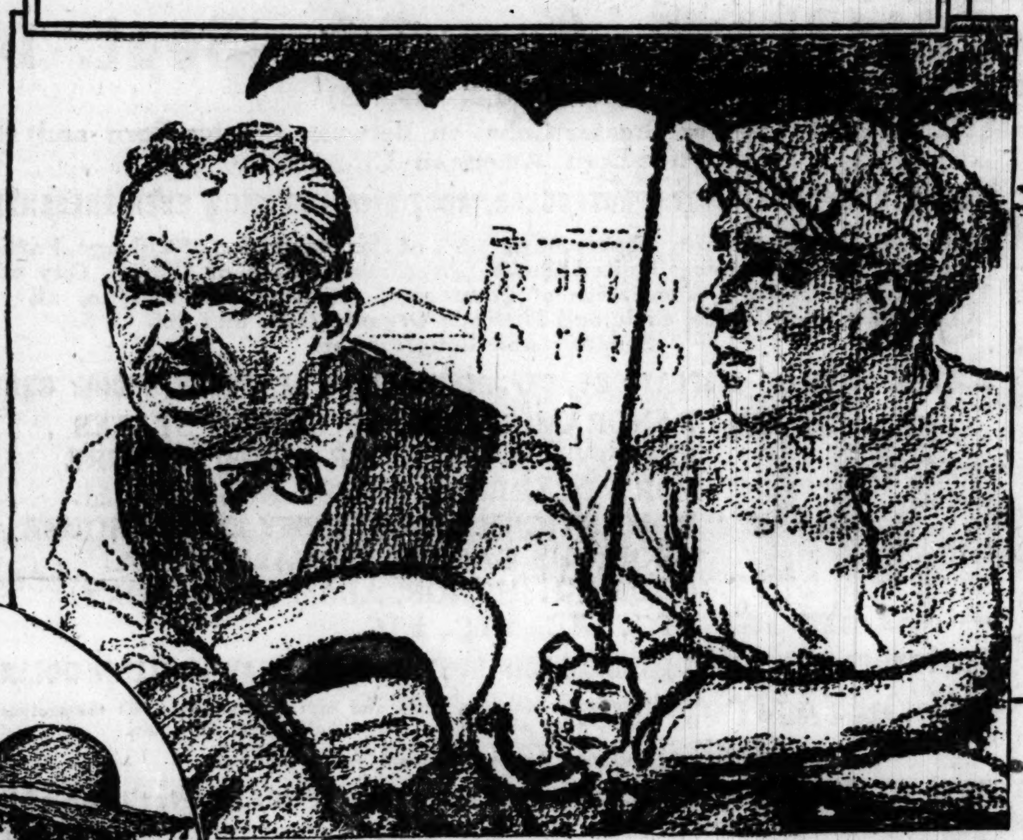


"I don't care whether it's the Chicago Red Sox or the St. Louis Cubs, or who, I always feel so sorry for the losing team!"

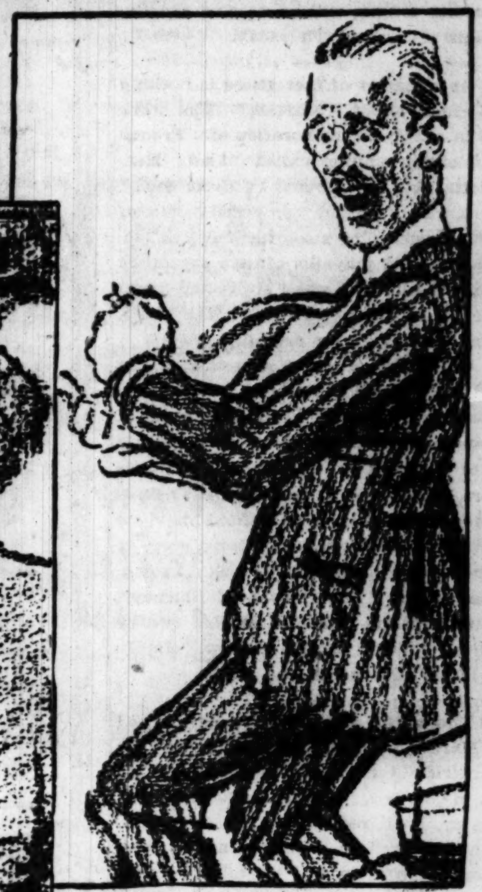
A hot afternoon in the bleachers. "Aw, how do you get that way? I'll betcha any amount of money Ty Cobb will be ten points in the lead."



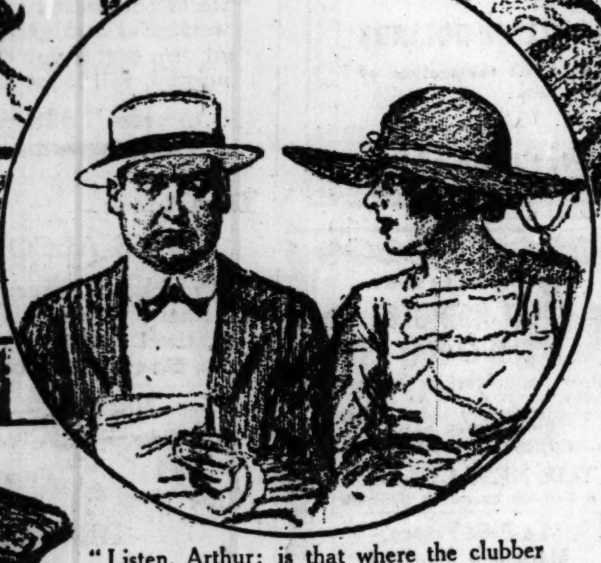
"Peanits, c'gars, n' cigarettes!" Willis is getting ready to toss a bag of peanuts to a man who wants a package of cigarettes.



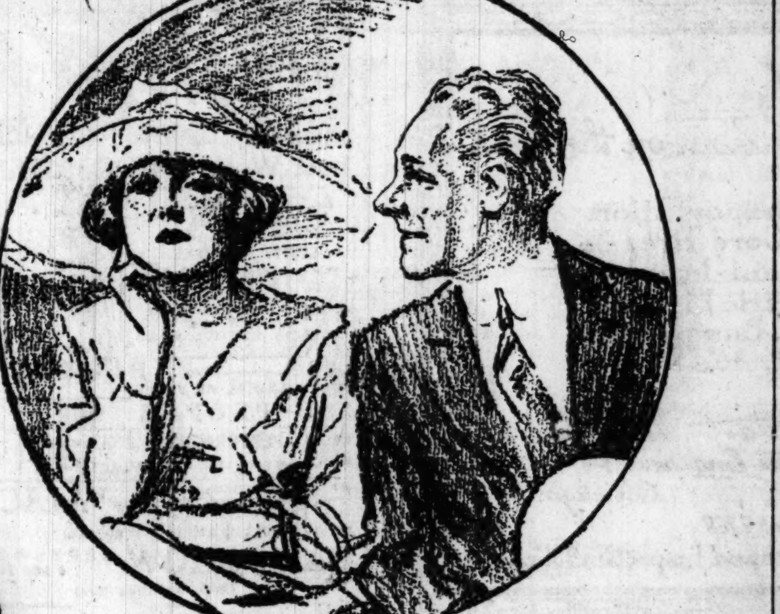
You can tell that it must be a pretty interesting game, for Dr. Hassett, up near the top of the bleachers, to be holding the sun umbrella over Eddie, the newsstand boy.



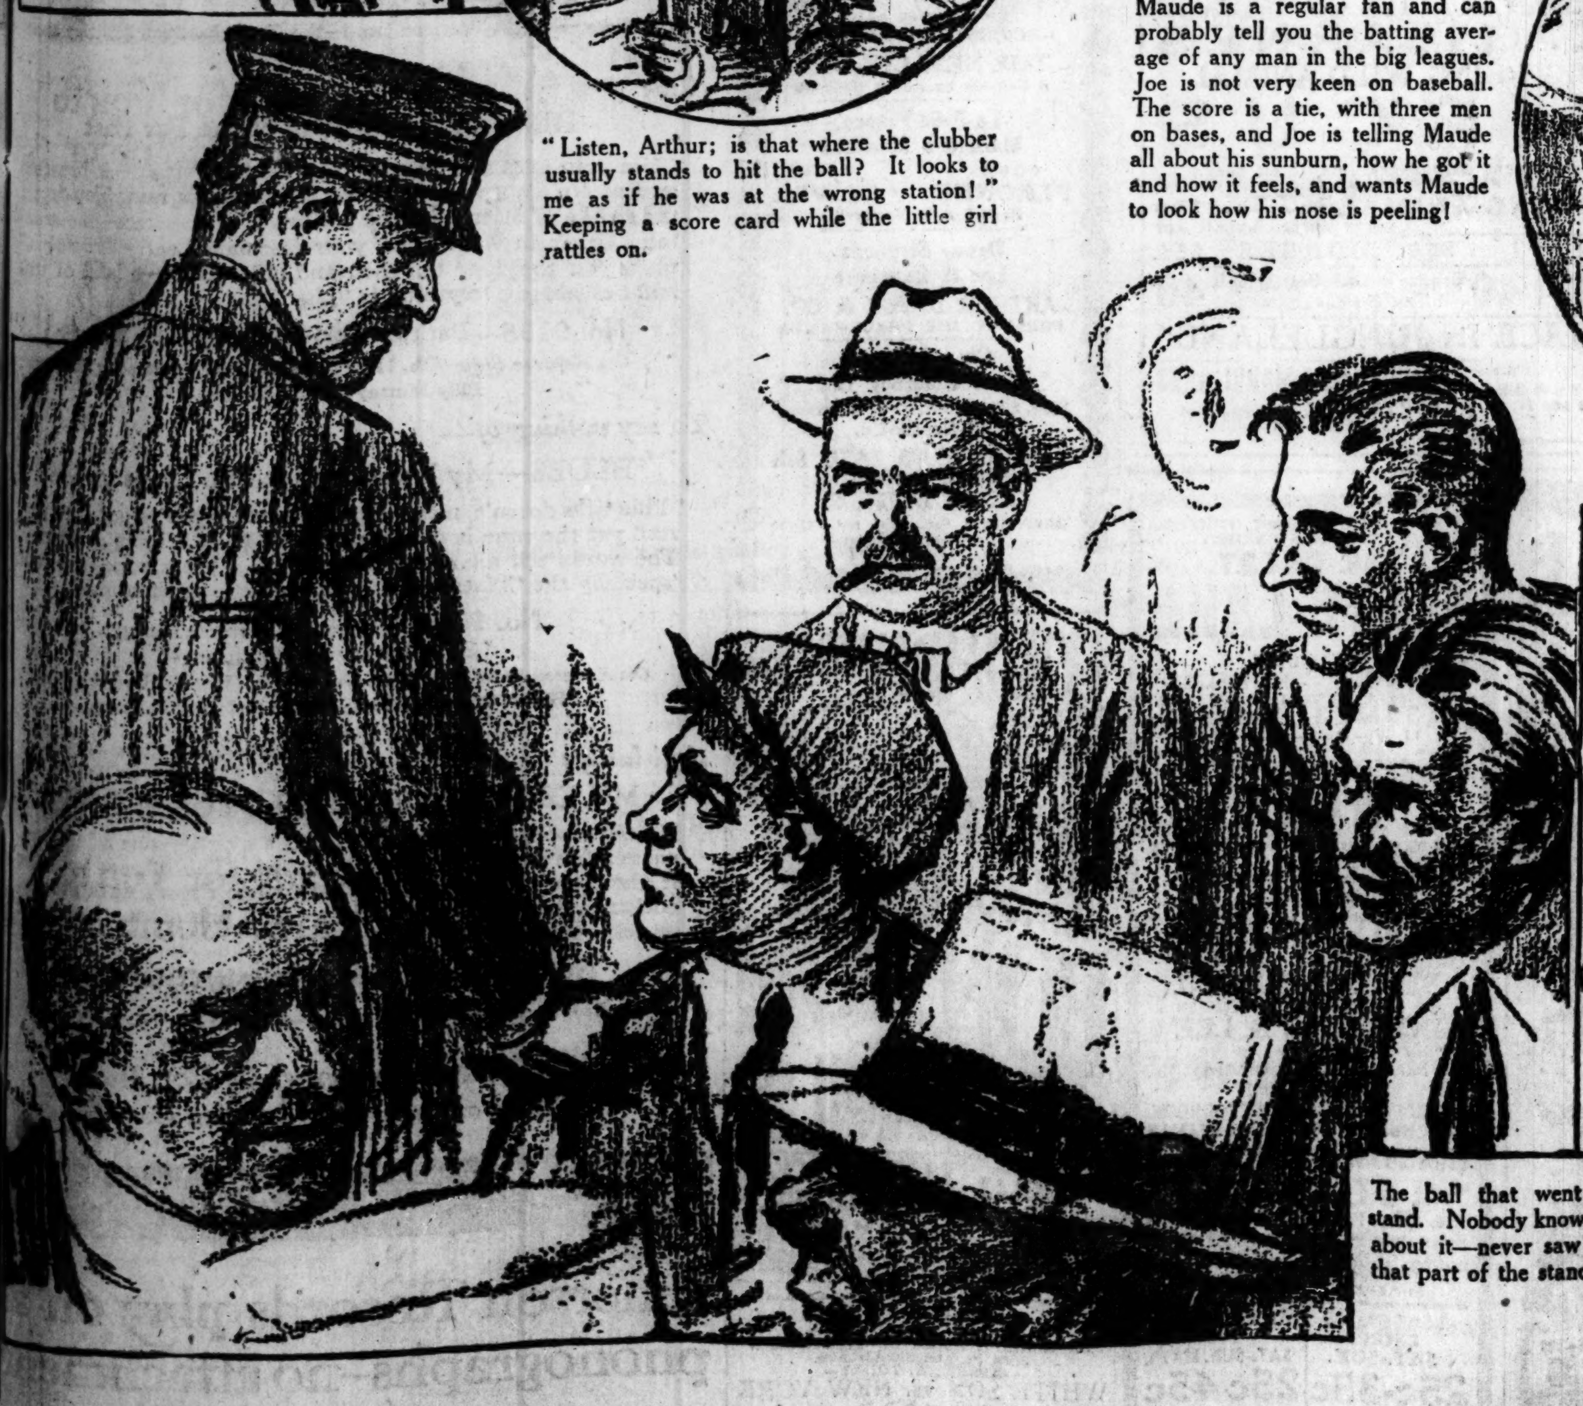
"Safe!"



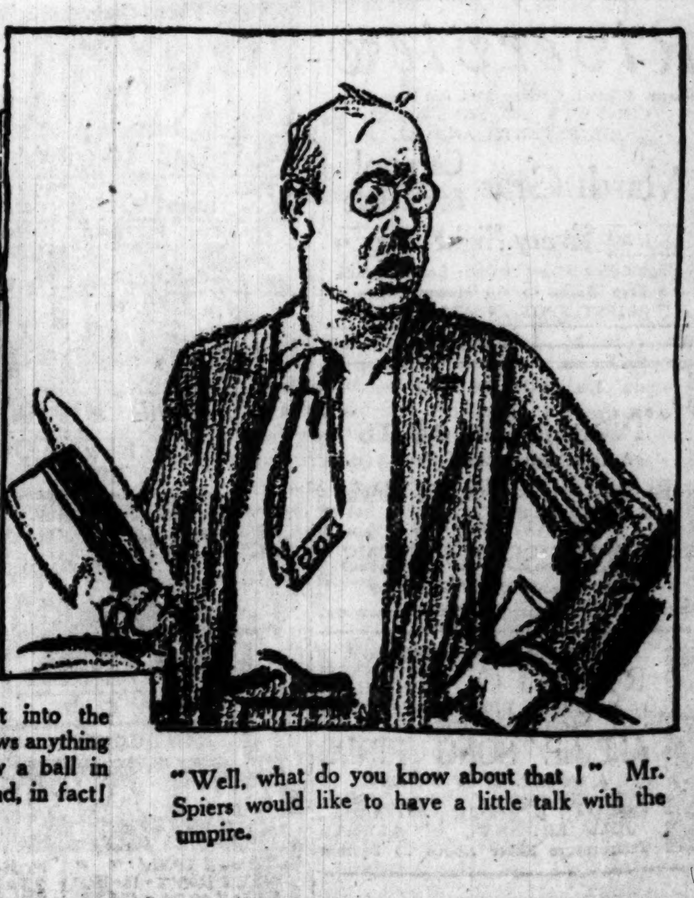
"Listen, Arthur; is that where the clubber usually stands to hit the ball? It looks to me as if he was at the wrong station!" Keeping a score card while the little girl rattles on.



Maude is a regular fan and can probably tell you the batting average of any man in the big leagues. Joe is not very keen on baseball. The score is a tie, with three men on bases, and Joe is telling Maude all about his sunburn, how he got it and how it feels, and wants Maude to look how his nose is peeling!



The ball that went into the stand. Nobody knows anything about it—never saw a ball in that part of the stand, in fact!



"Well, what do you know about that!" Mr. Spiers would like to have a little talk with the umpire.

The Actors and Their Strike

BY PERCY HAMMOND.

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—My Dear Mr. Hammond: In reply to yours of the 21st of August, I wish to state that all the actors require in this pending situation is recognition of the Actors' Equity association. After that all other matters that the papers have stated we require are to be acted on by arbitration. The present standard contract was made and entered into by the A. E. A. and the U. M. P. A., which, I believe, is now out of existence. Its president was Mr. Mark Klaw, and in its place they now have the Producing Managers' association, who do not in any way recognize the standard contract and have refused absolutely to have anything to do with the Actors' Equity association.

Believe me, the whole thing is so simple that it is amazing to me that they will not recognize the association and accept arbitration on the matters in question. We do not demand closed shop or anything else; all we ask is recognition of the A. E. A.

WALTER JONES.

Some of the players involved in the current animosities nurse a dignified resentment against those who are unsympathetic, if not hostile, to their outbreak. They cannot understand why, in a time of general unrest, they, too, should not partake of mutiny's pleasant inflammations and shout their wrongs to a receptive world. In a period when strikes are so popular and so successful, they say, their revolt ought to be recognized as proper, just as is that of any other trade.

Perhaps they are right. But there is a feeling among men who suspect both sides to be wrong, that they chose an evil moment in which to rebel. A strike is a great corrector, but in economic therapeutics there is such a thing as overdosage. The actors' strike is the most widely advertised, and because of the minimum of its discomforts, the most tempting of the strikes. In a condition which threatens to become delirious the players might well have deferred manifesting their happy and infectious nervousness until a less hysterical juncture.

For, after all, their sufferings seem to be less poignant than the other miseries now seeking remedy, and their chains are silken compared to those which, it is said, are all that the workers of the world have to lose. Solution is demanded by greater problems than extra pay for extra performances of "Up in Mabel's Room." To many of their friends the actors' present proceeding is a sheer example of a funny man rocking a boat.

A victory for the actors suggests several diverting possibilities. It would be amusing, for instance, if the Bill Posters' union, having trouble with Billy Watson's Beef Trust, or the Puss-Puss Girls, would call out Miss Barrymore and her company playing "Romeo and Juliet." And no one would enjoy it more than Miss Barrymore.

Mr. Grant Mitchell's convincing enumeration of managerial injustices includes the wrongs of no pay for rehearsal and no pay for extra performances. Of course, the show business, compared to other industries, is more or less haphazard. It is the most precarious of the trades, and so cryptic are the inclinations of its customers that trying to please them is as uncertain as roulette. It is a gamble rather than a business.

Yet in its administration there are rules and a system. At least so it is said. Receipts and disbursements are estimated and balanced; the probability of failure is considered and many other complex fiscal matters are weighed by the producer when he signs a contract with an actor. He figures on holiday matinées and on Sunday night performances in Chicago, and he bases the players' remuneration on those as well as other things. Thus Mr. Courtenay's salary of $750 weekly includes payment for the necessary preparations and for extra labor at stated times. One imagines that the producer of "Cappy Ricks" needed all the extra performances possible to enable him to settle upon Mr. Courtenay so munificent and so well deserved a stipend. Miss Maude Adams and others do not play on Sunday nights, but they earn less money by reason of that occasional idleness.

Mr. Belasco, like an outraged wild bee, sits upon Francis Wilson, a centurion of the strikers, and stings him enthusiastically in his past. Writing to the Actors' Equity Mr. Belasco says:

"My co-workers in the theater: I want to ask you to consider what I am about to say in the light of fairness to those dependent upon you as well as to yourselves and your own manhood and womanhood. When you have closed the theaters here and throughout the country, if you do close them, how long can you depend upon Mr. Wilson, Mr. Frank Gillmore, and their advisers and associate executives to support you financially? If you paralyze the profession, who among you will pay the costs?

"Without reflecting upon the intentions, so far as you are concerned, of Mr. Francis Wilson, let me tell you that Mr. Wilson was among the actors who first deserted his fellow artists in their fight against the theatrical syndicate in 1899.

"Mr. Wilson talked eloquently in many theaters in the cause of the actor for some time, but upon a guarantee from Messrs. Nixon & Zimmerman of the original syndicate, he went over to the syndicate on Jan. 2, 1899, after receiving an offer of $50,000 in the form of a guarantee for a period of years.

"And in explaining his unexpected action, one of his most important reasons for his sudden deflection from the group of actors associated with him was that 'he had his family to consider.'

"This is a matter of record and can be instantly verified from those familiar with the circumstances at the time, among whom are Mr. and Mrs. Fiske, or the newspaper files, or Norman Hapgood's accurate 'History of the Stage in America.'

"Not only did Mr. Wilson desert his associates and his cause, but he insulted them in the following strong and lucid statement, which he issued to the St. Louis Star in February, 1898, before he received his gratifying offer from Messrs. Nixon & Zimmerman.

"'Actors,' explained Mr. Wilson in the Star on that occasion, 'are an emotional, impressionable, I might say shiftless lot.'

"You whom he called 'an emotional, impressionable, I might say shiftless lot' in 1898 might give a thought to your families in 1919 under Mr. Wilson's destructive leadership. We may be emotional and impressionable, but shiftless we have never been, as the man who said it very well knows. In closing I want to say this is not the only instance in which Mr. Wilson has deserted the members of his profession."

Barney Bernard's new play by Montague Glass and Jules Eckhert Goodman is named "The Hon. Sam Davis." Mr. Bernard will play a small town politician.

The independent enterprises of Marc Klaw will include "His Majesty, the Queen," a musical comedy by Ethel Watts Mumford; and Richard Barry's "Petroleum Prince," in which Louis Bennison will act the title rôle.

William Anthony McGuire, the north side's most fertile dramatist, will have four works on exhibition this season. "Broncho Billy" Anderson will present "Stand from Under," with Josephne Victor, and also "Mary, Be Careful," and "Some Poor People." Another McGuire play is called "Hearts and Flowers."

Miss Mae Murray, a film fairy, is about to sing in a musical comedy by Edgar Allen Wolff and Albert Von Tilzer, named "Marigold."

Miss Eva Le Gallienne and Miss Louise Poe, a great-granddaughter of John Allan, Edgar Allan Poe's foster father, will appear in "Lusmore," Mrs. Chauncey Olcott's new play.

Drama hesitating timidly on the environs of the Chicago strike include Miss Grace Valentine in "Seven Miles to Arden," at the Olympic; "Three Wise Fools," at Powers'; "On the Hiring Line," at the Blackstone; Julia Sanderson and Joseph Cawthorn in "The Canary," at the Colonial, and "Listen Lester," at the Illinois.

Victor Eubank, Chicago journalist and motion picture impresario, announces the composition of three short plays, one of which, called "Camouflage," is to be acted in vaudeville by James Meehan.

Rupert Hughes, May Tulley, Eugene Walter, Roi Cooper Megrue, Eugene Presbrey, Gene Buck, Earl Carroll, Augustus Thomas, and Le Roy Scott are members of the Stage Writers' Protective association, designed by its founders to observe a wary neutrality in the great strike.

Miss Ethel Barrymore is going to play Juliet in the balcony scene next week in New York for the actors' benefit, with Conway Tearle, the well known Romeo, as Romeo.

Telegraphed from this morning's New York Times:

John D. Williams seems to have satisfied the Equity association that he is with them, for announcement comes that "Up from Nowhere" will be presented in New York a week from tomorrow night. "Up from Nowhere" is the work of Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson, who have written many a play together, and it will have Norman Trevor in its leading rôle. Others in the company will be Cecil Yapp, Fred Howard, George Casselberry, Ann Andrews, Olive Murray, Grace Reals, Leotta Miller, and Margola Gillmore.

The Shuberts, for all the turmoil of the times, have succeeded in preparing for the stage the Edward Locke-Max Marcin-Louis K. Anspacher play, "The Dancer." Its leading characters will be acted by Isabelle Lowe, John Halliday, Effingham Pinto, and José Ruben, and the piece will be produced near New York tomorrow. As for the Broadway premiere, that—unless the play is of such a nature that it can proceed without stage hands—probably will have to await the end of the Great Trouble.

New and independent firms springing into being will be the Wendell Phillips Dodge-Willy Pogany and Max D. Wilner-Sigmund Romberg combinations. Whether they can successfully remain independent, of course, is a matter for the future to determine; in the meantime, at all events, they are confidently announcing productions. The first named will present a spectacle entitled "Esther," and the Messrs. Romberg and Wilner will offer a musical comedy called "The Magic Melody." In the cast of this latter piece will be Julia Dean, hitherto identified with the more sturdy drama; Carmel Myers, well known in the films, and numerous others.

Clifton Crawford telegraphs Secretary Gilmore of the A. E. A. thus:

"It seems likely that you are going to call me out with the stage hands and musicians. I have a contract which in all honor I signed to play this week for a sum of money. I shall fulfill my contract. After that I shall make no more contracts until the fight has finished. This it seems to me is equity."

Otis Skinner pens this impression of the imbroglio:

"I have been away in the woods and have just learned of the intemperate violence of the Actors' Equity association in calling strikes. Such disregard of right and justice is intensely repugnant to me. I have sent my immediate resignation from their body."

Burns Mantle's Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The striking actors had their day of days last Monday. If no other victory comes to them as a result of their stand "not for more pay, but for fair play," they will always be able to look back on this occasion as a victory in itself.

In the afternoon they paraded down Broadway, some 2,000 of them. It was a drizzly, dirty day and there was a traction strike on. But the one did not discourage nor the other interfere in the least with the success of the parade.

I believe it is just beginning to dawn upon the managers that the actor, whatever his shortcomings actually may be, is a popular little fellow, or a jolly big fellow, or at least a friendly and likable sort of individual, so far as the public is concerned. The manager has traded on and freely exploited this popularity for years, and yet I doubt whether he has reckoned with the force of it in the present controversy.

The actor, to the public, represents the theater, and the theater is a place we go to to be entertained. The manager represents only the man who controls the theater—the man who puts up the price whenever the show is good and never has enough aisle seats to go around. So far as the public is concerned the manager is a sort of necessary irritation, while the actor is, or tries to be, a sort of public benefactor.

Which places the manager at a supreme disadvantage in any contest in which the public serves as arbiter. It is easy to say that this is a disadvantage he should have calculated upon before he plunged into the fight, but successful men are great egotists. Their vision is invariably obscured by the crowds of sycophants that gather round them.

Anyway, the actors had their parade, and the cheers of the curbstone crowds was as a popular symphony to their ears. Frequently they were singled out and called by name, and then how they beamed! Down through their own Longacre square they marched, singing, whenever the bands were quiet enough for them to be heard, the battle song one of the Von Tilzers has written for them, "One for All and All for One, and All for E-qui-tee."

Each company that had responded to the strike order carried a banner, and usually the star of the play walked in front. Thus Frank Bacon led the "Lightnin'" group, Eddie Cantor the five or six comedians who had two days before quit the "Follies," Richie Ling the three or four who had refused to stay with "Chu Chin Chow," Constance Binney the "39 East" company, and so on through a list of thirty-six plays that were either running or in rehearsal at the time the strike started. Florence Gedney, being the only Equity member of a troupe that was rehearsing a farce called "Too Many Husbands" to appear for the parade, bravely carried that banner herself and tripped along the full distance to a chorus of laughs.

At the end of the procession came Marie Dressler and her chorus-girls' union, and so spontaneous were the cheers for this division that the emotional Marie was in tears most of the way. Of course, the proudest men in the line were the four who marched at its head—the Equity leaders, Francis Wilson, Frank Gilmore, John Cope, and Grant Stewart. They stepped out with their shoulders squared and their eyes blazing as much defiance as their joy in the applause permitted.

In an auto Helen Keller, dressed all in white, was a conspicuous figure. In the Lyric theater Monday night the motion picture, "Deliverance," which is a history of her life, was to be shown, and she had been advertised to appear in person to start it off with a hurrah. But Miss Keller is a good bit of a socialist, it appears, and as soon as she heard that the theater had been obtained because of a strike of the actors she refused to appear. She could not stop the picture, but she could refuse her personal indorsement of the engagement.

And so the strike goes on. At this writing there seems no possible settlement in sight, yet both manager and actor are eager to end it. The managers have gone so far as to concede practically every demand the Equity makes, save the recognition of that organization itself, but the actors refuse to consider any such compromise.

Not much is being said about it, for obvious reasons, but the real issue is the American Federation of Labor. The actors realize that once they repudiate this affiliation, even by suggestion, all the support of organized labor will leave them and they will be without substantial backing. Both the stage hands and the musicians, through whose help they have now gone so far, would drop them and they would be as powerless as before in any contest with the managers.

The managers are also afraid of this labor connection. With actors, stage hands and musicians organized against them and working in sympathy, they feel that they would in turn be powerless to extract justice from any controversy, and that every time they had a disagreement with an actor or a musician they would have to reckon on trouble with the whole federation before it could be settled.

As side issues to this situation there is the known objection of many conservative Equity members who themselves resent the idea of aligning themselves with labor "in the raw," as it were, and who do not relish the thought of being "called out" to fight the battles of either stage hands or musicians in the future. And the attitude of the equally conservative managers who see their business going to pot and are willing to indorse anything rather than force the issue to the point where organized labor is seriously affronted. Also the attitude of the stage hands, who never did think a great deal of the superior actors ("hams" is their favorite classification for them) and are therefore somewhat loath to support them now.

One unfortunate outcome of the strike is the probable disruption of one, and possibly of two, of the actors' clubs. The Friars, an organization started originally by press representatives and managers, is put in a bad hole by the resignation of George M. Cohan, its leading member. Cohan has been abbot of the club for years, has loaned it thousands of dollars, and orzganized all the benefits that helped swell the building fund. If he holds to his refusal to return to it there is a strong possibility that a majority of the other theatrical members also will resign, which, in the present state of the club's finances, with a new and expensive home on its hands, probably would mean the eventual disruption of the organization.

The position of the Lambs' club is not quite so precarious, but it is threatened. Through sympathy with the striking Equity members it was natural the club should become violently pro-Equity in the strike, with the result that a majority of the managers who have long been conspicuous as contributing members to the various funds of the club, have withdrawn and all those actors who have sided with the managers and held their jobs have practically been forced out. They have been given what is professionally known as "the raspberry," or the cut direct, by their fellow members and have found the clubrooms extremely unhealthy.

This blow, following that of the dry wave, which has cut the revenues of the grillroom practically to nothing, leaves the Lambs burdened with debt and threatened from every side. This organization will, however, never die. It may lose its clubhouse, or have to share it with some other club during the crisis, but the Lambs' loyalty to their beloved organization is certain to win out in the end.

Miss Alice Gentle at Ravinia.

Ninth Week of Ravinia's Opera

WITH Antonio Scotti in an unfamiliar rôle as the "extra," the ninth and final full week of Ravinia Park's season of opera starts tonight, when "The Love of the Three Kings" will be given for the third and last time. The season will reach its formal end a week from tomorrow night, with Scotti in a repetition of "L'Oracolo" and, for the first time in many years in this vicinity, as Tonio in "Pagliacci." "L'Oracolo" will then have had four performances at Ravinia, and that is a high record for any one opera in the brief season of this lovely resort.

Although the end of the season is a bare week away, not all of the revivals planned by Mr. Eckstein have yet been heard. Since Ravinia was first devoted to opera, nine years ago, "Martha" has been an annual item in the schedule, from which works usually classed with it, like "The Bohemian Girl" and "Maritana," were long since dropped. But "Martha" endures because it is something else than either of those examples of the English "ballad-opera." Long, long ago it was taken, by imperceptible process, out of the German catalogue and reclassified as Italian opera. Von Flotow, who composed it, was a German; and the premiere, in 1847, was given in Vienna—and that, perhaps, ends the German chapter of the popular work, although, doubtless, it is still sung occasionally as an item in the German opera houses. When given in the United States the text is either Italian or English. The former tongue will be used in the Ravinia revival, on Thursday.

As a matter of fact, there is nothing German about "Martha." The work is in reality the elaboration of a French ballet-pantomime, called "Lady Henrietta; or, The Servant of Greenwich," for which Flotow composed some of the music. The story itself is English, and the old playbills always explained that the libretto was "suggested by an actual incident." The plot, the locale, and the characters are all English.

Of course, a great measure of the vogue "Martha" has had for nearly a century is due to "The Last Rose of Summer," and that aria, or ballad, is not Flotow's at all, while the words are, as everybody knows, by Thomas Moore. That Irish poet fitted his verse to an old Irish air—a folksong, some of the antiquarians say—best known, maybe, as "The Groves of Blarney," although the tune has carried two or three other texts. Flotow simply "lifted" the words and music.

The great singers have ever liked "Martha." Patti sang in it on her American tours, and was often heard in it in Chicago. And, as Galli-Curci does today, Patti regarded "The Last Rose of Summer" as an indispensable song for her concert and recital programs. Marcella Sembrich used to sing Martha, and was in one brilliant revival by the Metropolitan Opera with Caruso, Louise Homer and Pol Plancon. A more recent revival of "Martha" at that institution had Caruso with Frieda Hempel, Margarete Ober, and Giuseppe de Luca. "Martha" has been out of the Chicago Opera's active repertoire since 1913-'14, when it was sung on the final night of the season, in English, with Maggie Teyte in the title-rôle.

Out at Ravinia, the soprano and tenor for this revival will be those of last summer's performances—Edith Mason and Orville Harrold who will take part in a repetition of "Romeo and Juliet" also. This final week will be Miss Mason's busiest; for the schedule involves another performance of "Thaïs," with her in the name-part, and she is to be one of two soloists in tomorrow night's concert by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. The other soloist will be Alice Gentle, who is cast as the Nancy of "Martha." Miss Mason, in the concert, will sing Micaela's aria from the third act of "Carmen" and will join with Miss Gentle in the duet of the blossoms from "Madama Buterfly"; and Miss Gentle, too, will have a solo—"O, Don Fatale," which is about all that survives of Verdi's opera of "Don Carlos."

Other concerts of the week will be "pops" today and Saturday at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, one for the children on Thursday afternoon, and the Ravinia club's final afternoon of the season for the soldiers and sailors on Friday. All the concerts will be under Richard Hageman's baton.

The arrangement of operas and singers for the week follows:

8:15 tonight—"The Love of the Three Kings," third time, with the Misses Easton and Falco, the Messrs. Martin, Picco, Rothier, Derman. Conductor, Mr. Papi.

8:15 Tuesday—"Romeo and Juliet," second time, with the Misses Mason, Maxwell, Falco, the Messrs. Harrold, Mareau, Rothier, D'Angelo, Derman, Toft. Conductor, Mr. Hageman.

Mr. Eckstein explaines that he has abandoned for this summer his plan to stage at Ravinia John Adam Hugo's one-act opera, "The Temple Dancer," which was one of the novelties by American composers produced last season by the Metropolitan, where Miss Easton had the principal rôle. He adds that the additions to the schedule made necessary by the return of Scotti put the question of mounting the new opera in the final weeks out of consideration.

A prize of $100 is offered by Eric De Lamarter, organist and director of music, Fourth Presbyterian church, Chicago, for a sonata for the modern organ. The only conditions are that the composer must be American by birth, that the sonata has not been publicly played before its appearance in the weekly recitals at the Fourth Presbyterian church, and that its length be not less than twelve minutes and not more than twenty minutes. The judges will be Frederick A. Stock, conductor of the Chicago Symphony orchestra; Clarence Dickinson, organist and director of music, Brick Presbyterian church, New York, and Mr. De Lamarter. No manuscripts will be accepted after Dec. 1, 1919. Manuscripts should be sent to Mr. De Lamarter at 126 East Chestnut street, Chicago.

1914—BY FIELD MARSHAL VISCOUNT FRENCH OF YPRES

SPEAKING generally, it may be said that in the last days of this, the opening period of the battle, the northern portion of our line progressed slowly but surely, very heavy losses being inflicted on the enemy and many prisoners were captured.

To the south, however, between [illegible] and La Bassée, a certain amount of ground was lost, but the troops held stanchly to their positions and there was never any break of a serious nature made in the line.

On the 22d the enemy, who had thrown a number of pontoon bridges across the Lys opposite the cavalry corps, appeared to be massing troops against that part of our line. The Lahore division having then reached Bailleul, I sent Egerton's brigade to support the cavalry. I found there was no chance of getting the Meerut division for some time to come, as they were being hopelessly delayed at Marseilles and Orleans.

At midnight on the 22d both the 2d and 3d corps commanders were very anxious about their positions, and I therefore dispatched the Lahore division to Estaires, from which point it could support either corps in case of urgent necessity.

On the 24th I paid a visit to Gen. D'Urbal at Poperinghe. He had come to command the northern French army. We discussed the situation together, and he seemed hopeful as to future possibilities.

Describes Gen. D'Urbal.

D'URBAL impressed me as a man of striking personality. In figure and bearing he reminded me of the old Murat type of French beau sabreur. All his regimental service was passed in the cavalry. I was a great deal associated with him in the operations at Ypres and afterward, when he commanded the French troops on the Arras front, and I can testify to his remarkable powers of command, his fine courage, and his extraordinary tenacity. We were together in many critical situations, and I have passed some anxious hours in his company; but I never knew him other than helpful in the highest degree. Nothing ever ruffled the calmness of his demeanor or prevented him from exercising that deliberate and well weighed judgment which was a remarkable feature of his truly soldier-like character.

Dawnay came back from the 1st corps on this night and told me that late on the previous day the enemy had delivered a succession of counter attacks against the front of the 2d division just as they were being relieved. The German infantry came on in dense columns singing "The Watch on the Rhine." They were simply mown down by our artillery and rifle fire. The ground was a veritable shambles, and the 1st corps estimated that in the last three or four days they had put at least 8,000 Germans hors de combat.

Foch, with whom I had a long interview at Cassel on the morning of the 25th, appeared to be quite hopeful and sanguine about the situation on the canal north of Ypres. He told me that another French regular division was to be brought up on either flank at Nieuport and Ypres, and he proposed later to move Conneau from the neighborhood of Bethune. I told him I could hardly do without Conneau for the moment, and he agreed to leave him as long as I wanted him.

The first phase of the battle of Ypres may be briefly summarized as the conclusion of the successive attempts, begun a month previously, to effect a great turning movement round the German right flank. The operations up to the night of the 26th certainly failed in their original intention of clearing the coast line, and driving the enemy from Bruges and Ghent, but they succeeded in establishing a line to the sea which, if it could be held, brought the Germans face to face with the challenge: "This far shalt thou go and no farther."

What this meant to them is proved by the desperate but abortive attempts they made to break through in the second phase of the battle.

I regard the operations which were carried on by the British forces in France during the second phase of the battle of Ypres as more momentous and fateful than any others which I directed during my period of service as commander-in-chief in the field. Oct. 31 and Nov. 1 will remain forever memorable in the history of our country, for during those two days no more than one thin and straggling line of tired out British soldiers stood between the empire and its practical ruin as an independent, first class power. I still look back in wonder on that thin line of defense, stretched, out of sheer necessity, far beyond its natural and normal power for defense. Right, center and left our men were tried and pressed as troops were never tried and pressed before.

A lofty tower of some antiquity still stood by itself on top of a commanding hill just east of Kemmel. Its days even then were numbered, and after being heavily shelled it was completely destroyed later in the battle. While this tower remained it made an excellent lookout post. I spent some time there on the 27th, when the crisis of the battle was approaching.

A glance at the map will show that from this point of view an observer with strong glasses can compass almost the whole battlefield of Ypres, where seven British infantry and three cavalry divisions were extended on a front of from twenty-five to thirty-six miles.

It was a bright October day, with brilliant sunshine, and the line of fire could be seen all along the high ground encircling the Ypres salient to the north, the Wytschaete-Messines ridge to the east, and away to the southeast down to the Lys valley, almost as far as Armentieres, beyond which place the shell-bursts in the sky brought the right of the British battle line well into the picture.

For four or five days this line was being still further reduced in strength by the successful efforts of our troops to stem the tide of the enemy's advance, while on their side the Germans were being gradually reinforced to a strength which, by the 30th, reached about double our numbers.

In the great onslaught made by the enemy on Oct. 31 and Nov. 1 sufficient recognition has never yet been given to the glorious stand made by the cavalry corps under Allenby. And when I speak of the gallantry of the cavalry I desire to add that the splendor of their work was equally shared by Shaw's brigade of the 3d division (1st battalion Northumberland Fusiliers, 4th battalion Royal Fusiliers, 1st battalion [illegible] regiment, and 1st battalion Royal [illegible] Fusiliers), Egerton's brigade of the Indian corps, the London Scottish and the Oxfordshire yeomanry.

For close upon forty-eight hours these troops held the Wytschaete-Messines ridge against the utmost efforts of no less than two and a half Germany army corps to dislodge them. Here was the center of our line of battle, and had it given way disaster would have resulted to the entire left wing of the allied line.

In almost the same degree I would allot the honors of those splendid days to the defenders of the Ypres salient, namely, the 9th French army corps, the 1st British corps and the 7th British division.

It was only a slightly less arduous task which fell upon the 2d corps in this great battle, for they had a long line to hold, in a much more difficult country, and were subjected to powerful attacks by superior numbers.

There is, indeed, little distinction to be made between the troops who fought so bravely all along the line. All were doggedly tenacious; all were superhumanly brave. The fullest measure of mutual support was assured by the complete understanding and perfect loyalty which existed among leaders of all ranks, combined with the alertness shown by all commanders in filling up gaps in the line without delay and in using the troops at their disposal with the utmost economy.

All said and done, however, the main element of success was to be found in the devoted bravery and the stern, unyielding determination to "do or die," displayed by the rank and file of the "contemptible little army" and its reinforcements.

ON the 27th I had received an urgent message from Haig about the exhausted condition of the 7th division. During the day I went to Haig at Hooge and had a conference with him and Rawlinson. I decided to break up the 4th corps for the present and to send Rawlinson and his headquarters home to supervise the preparation of the 8th division pending its dispatch to France.

The 7th division, under Capper, was to be attached to the 1st corps until the 8th division arrived and the 4th corps could be again reformed under Rawlinson. Byng, with the 3d cavalry division, was placed under Allenby.

The 7th division took over the ground south of the Ypres-Menin road, then occupied by some troops of the 1st division, which were withdrawn in reserve.

The further progress of the enemy between La Bassee and the sea was probably now in suspense, awaiting the arrival of reinforcements. We had reliable reports that the detraining of troops was rapidly proceeding at Lille and Courtrai.. During the next two days they began pouring in.

Roughly speaking, there were some twelve German corps opposed to seven of the allies, while the enemy enjoyed artillery superiority, both numerically and in caliber of guns.

The condition of the 2d corps was again causing me anxiety, and the corps commander was calling out for help and reinforcements. It had also given cause for apprehension to our allies.

Willcocks arrived on the 27th, and took over command of the Indian corps in the field.

On this day Prince Maurice of Battenburg died of his wounds. He was a young officer of great promise and much beloved in his regiment, the 60th rifles.

The 28th saw the loss of Neuve Chapelle by the 2d corps.

I met Smith-Dorrien and Willcocks together at Merville and arranged for the Indian corps to take over the line now held by the 2d corps. The 2d corps was to fall back to Bailleul in reserve.

On the morning of the 28th I had got a message from Gen. de Mud'huy, commanding the 10th French army on our right. It was sent through the French mission, and was to the effect that the state of the 2d corps made him very anxious about his left flank. He added some criticism of its leadership and the way in which its artillery was being handled.

The 6th division, under Keir, scored a success on the 28th. On their front, just south of Armentieres, they repulsed a severe counter attack, in which the enemy left several hundred dead in front of their trenches.

Shell Supply Low.

THE supply of ammunition now began to cause me increasing anxiety, and my apprehension under this head continued more or less throughout the whole period of my command in France.

Oct. 29 witnessed the opening of that most critical stage in the first period of the war, to which I have already referred.

At 9 in the morning of that day the center of the Ypres salient, held by the 1st and 7th divisions, was attacked in the neighborhood of Gheluvelt by large masses of the enemy, who forced back our troops on the latter place. Well organized counter attacks, which were splendidly led, repulsed the enemy during the day with heavy casualties. By nightfall the 1st and 7th divisions had recovered all the ground they had lost, and the position that night [Oct. 29] was somewhat as follows:

The 7th and part of the 1st division held a line which extended on the left from a point about 500 yards north of the crossroads on the Ypres-Menin road, and ran thence south through the crossroads to the village of Kruiseij on the right, where the 7th division joined up with the cavalry.

This line was well to the east of Gheluvelt, and consequently represented a considerable gain as compared with the ground held the day before.

The left or northern portion of Haig's line extended slightly to the west of Reutel and Poezelhoek [both these places being held by the enemy], and was continued by the 2d division to the east of Zonnebeke station, where they joined the right of the 9th French corps. The attacking troops consisted of the 27th German reserve corps and the 6th Bavarian division, which suffered a very severe check. Their losses were known to be heavy. In the middle of the day I sent Haig the London Scottish, which was the only reserve I had left. They were moved in motor omnibuses to Ypres.

On the afternoon of the 29th I went to Cassel and had a long conference with Foch. The canal and the River Yser from Ypres to the sea were capable of wide inundation, which would afford excellent cover and protection all along that battle front. From the first I had been most anxious that this inundation should be carried out, but there was great opposition to it. Whether this came from the French or the Belgians I did not know, but I am much inclined to think that the French generals, in their sanguine anticipation of an immediate advance east, feared that such an obstacle would hamper them. When I saw Foch on this afternoon, however, he was all in favor of the inundation. He told me he thought the enemy was very "slack" in the north, that fresh French troops were being landed at Dunkirk, and that he still expected to see his hopes of an early advance realized. It was impossible to be closely associated with Foch and not come under the spell of his sanguine temperament, which was always a great help to me, although on this occasion I knew perfectly well that the enemy was increasing in numbers on our front, and that it was utterly impossible for us at that time to do more than hold our own with the utmost difficulty.

At dawn of Oct. 30 the 19th brigade (2d battalion R. Welsh fusileers, 1st battalion Scottish Rifles, 1st battalion Middlesex regiment, and 2d battalion Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders) carried out a brilliant counterattack with the bayonet, heavily repulsing the enemy on the right of the 3d corps.

An hour later, Haig reported that he was being heavily shelled all along his front, and that the enemy was moving in great force to attack Byng's 3d cavalry division on his right. Gough had sent two regiments and a battery of horse artillery to support Byng. One of these regiments (the Royal Dragoons) had, with great dash and gallantry, repulsed an attack on the chateau at Hollebeke.

I went early in the morning to Allenby's headquarters at Kemmel, where Barrow (his chief of staff) reported the situation to me. I ascended the tower I have spoken of already, to get a view of the field, which by this time had been drawn nearer, but mist prevented good observation.

Hearing heavy firing toward Ypres, I went to Haig's headquarters at Hooge. While I was with Haig Allenby came in.

It appeared that strong forces were attacking the 3d and 2d cavalry divisions, under Byng and Gough respectively, in and around Hollebeke. Allenby had sent a brigade from the 1st cavalry division on his right to support Gough, who had also been obliged to recall the support which he had previously sent to Byng. Haig had sent the London Scottish to support Gough, and had brought down Bulfin with most of the 2d brigade to strengthen the 7th division on his right. Furthermore, he had ordered Lord Cavan with the 4th (Guards) brigade (2d battalion Grenadier guards, 2d battalion Coldstream guards, 3d battalion Coldstream guards, 1st battalion Irish guards), to move south of the Menin road, ready to counterattack toward Hollebeke.

By the evening the 2d and 3d cavalry divisions had fallen back to the canal, and the enemy was in possession of Hollebeke.

On Allenby's right the 1st cavalry division was heavily pressed at Messines; the enemy gained a footing in the village, but were driven out later in the evening.

On Haig's left the 6th infantry brigade (1st battalion the King's Liverpool regiment, 2d battalion S. Staffs regiment, 1st battalion R. Berks regiment and 1st battalion K. R. R.) was attacked three times during the day, and on one occasion the enemy infantry reached the barbed wire close to the trenches.

North of the 1st corps and on the Yser heavy fighting went on throughout the 30th, but the situation there remained practically unchanged.

Late on this night orders were sent to Smith-Dorion to move Shaw's (9th) brigade of the 3d division to Neuve-Eglise (about five miles east-northeast of Bailleul), to come under Allenby's orders.

About 6 p. m. the line of the 11th brigade (1st battalion, Somerset, L. I.; 1st battalion, East Lancashire regiment; 1st battalion, Hampshire regiment, and the 1st battalion, rifle brigade) in the 4th divisoin, under Hunter Weston, was broken at St. Yves, but the ground lost was brilliantly recaptured by the brigade later in the evening.

Conditions on Oct. 31.

SUCH was the general situation at 2 a. m. on Oct. 31, at which hour I received a visit from Foch, who promised to let me have effective support for Haig on this day—namely: five battalions of French infantry and three batteries of artillery.

Shortly after dawn on this fateful Oct. 31 we had news that a serious infantry attack was developing on the left of the 4th division in the valley of the River Douve. The 4th division was able to extend its line some little way to the north of the river and thus release troops of the 1st cavalry division, which subsequently fought fiercely all day at Messines. Throughout the day the left of the 4th division rendered valuable and efficient support, as did the artillery on Hill 63, about one mile north of Ploegsteert.

But the great events of the day took place between Gheluvelt on the north and Messines on the south.

Early in the morning Allenby reported that Messines was being heavily attacked, and that the 9th lancers had been withdrawn after suffering severely; that the eastern exit of the town was held by the 4th and 5th dragoon guards, and that the situation was "decidedly critical."

A heavy attack had been delivered against the right of the 1st cavalry division shortly after 7 a. m., and an Indian battalion of rifles (the 57th, attached to the 1st cavalry division) were driven from their trenches. The reserves, however, held on, and the Inniskilling Fusiliers retook the trenches which the 57th had lost.

At half past 9 a. m. large masses of infantry were reported to be advancing against the 2d cavalry division between Oesttaverne and Roozebeek, and long columns of the enemy were seen on the road leading from the former place to St. Eloi.

Shortly afterward I reached Allenby's headquarters, which were now at Groote Vierstraat (between Mount Kemmel and Ypres). After we had discussed matters Gough arrived. Explaining the situation to me, he said he was in occupation of the canal to the northeast of Hollebeke, whence he had been driven back the day before. Thence his line extended south till it joined the left of the 1st cavalry division. He was in complete possession of Wytschaete, but he asked Allenby for some further support on the canal. Kavanagh's brigade (1st life guards, 2d life guards, and royal horse guards), which had been returned by Haig, was sent to him.

Just then I got a report that the five battalions of French infantry which had been promised by Foch were now directed to make a counter attack from Verbranden Molen toward the canal at the dangerous point.

The 2d and 3d cavalry divisions were heavily attacked during the day, but by dark they held the same ground as on the night before.

The most critical fighting of the day in this part of the line was at Messines on Allenby's right.

By 9 a. m. the cavalry was driven out of Messines, holding only one or two houses on the eastern side. Owing to heavy pressure elsewhere, no support was available until Shaws (9th) infantry brigade could arrive. It reached Kemmel at 10 a. m.

Gough sent the London Scottish to join the 3d hussars in support of Bingham's 4th cavalry brigade (Household cavalry, composite regiment, 6th dragoon guards, and 3d hussars) on the left of the 3d division.

At the same time three battalions of French infantry, supported by twelve guns, were just starting their attack from St. Eloi and Oesttaverne.

At about 11:45 a. m. two battalions (King's Own Scottish borderers and King's Own Yorkshire light infantry) were sent forward to retake the Messines ridge.

Gen. De Lisle, commanding the 1st cavalry division, was commanding at Messines. The Oxfordshire yeomanry and an Indian battalion were the last reserves sent up to him.

At nightfall the line held about Messines was the same as in the morning.

Oldsmobile
SETS THE PACE
22nd Year

The "THOROBRED"
7-passenger Touring Car

THE trend of automobile engineering points to the 8-cylinder car. And good buying judgment points to the Oldsmobile.

We aimed higher than simply pioneering the "eight." We aimed to produce one of moderate price and low maintenance costs, —that had the flexibility, smoothness and abundance of power inherent in the 8-cylinder car.

—that cost as little to buy and operate as the majority of "sixes" and many "fours."

—that would be smartly distinctive, yet characteristically Oldsmobile.

Our aim is attained in the "THOROBRED"—the only popular priced "eight" in which mechanical excellence is combined with rare riding comfort and up-to-the-minute body lines. Oldsmobiles have been the history-makers of motordom; the "THOROBRED" is well worthy to perpetuate the name.

Descriptive literature will be sent upon request, or a demonstration gladly arranged.

"THIS KNOCKS 'EM OUT OF THEIR SEATS" IN VAUDEVILLE

McVICKER'S.

Valentine Vox and company:

"I was quite a hit with the audience."

"There was hardly a thing they didn't hit you with."

"I mean I was quite a success, although I've changed my act since then."

"So I noticed."

"What change did you observe?"

"Your neck looks cleaner."

"Last time I was here I had a partner."

"Yes, he was the good one of the two."

"But the act split up because he had to go to the hospital. Perhaps you can take his place?"

"What? I should take his place in the hospital?"

"In my act. That is, if I know what to do with you."

"Do with me as you will."

"I have a great mind to take you out."

"Yes, but who's going to bring me back?"

"You'll come back in a blaze of glory."

"I'll be lucky if I don't come back in an ambulance."

"Never mind. Remember one thing, all our great actors started small."

"Yes, they began as babies."

"I mean from small beginnings. Dave Warfield, for instance, started as an usher. And where is he today? I say, where is he today?"

"How should I know?"

"He has climbed the ladder of fame—that's what he's done. And Annette Kellerman has also climbed up the ladder."

"I'll bet there was a crowd of fellows around when she went up."

"Dramatic authors and playwrights also had humble starts. Look at Gillette."

"I know; the fellow who wrote 'The Safety Razor.'"

"Here's a proposition. I have a new act in my trunk. Go down and read it carefully."

"What, the trunk?"

"No, the act. Then come back here and we'll hold a rehearsal. And then I'll take you with me—that is, if you act with credit."

"No, sir; if you want me to act you got to pay me cash."

"That'll be all right. The name of the act is 'Taking Chances.'"

"If I go out with you I'll be taking some awful chances."

"You'll never have another opportunity like this as long as you live."

"I'm afraid if I go with you I ain't going to live long."

"You'll be as safe as if you were in the trenches."

"That'll help some."

"And now leave me alone, as I have a date with a girl that's a peach."

"I bet she's a rotten peach."

"You're no judge."

"If I were I'd give you life."

Baraba and Grohs:

"Do you know I'm crazy about baseball?"

"Then perhaps you can tell me why a poor baseball player is like a man who picks roses."

"No; why is a poor baseball player like a man who picks roses?"

"Because he goes from bush to bush."

"I was outspoken in my sentiments at the club this afternoon."

"I can't believe it, my dear. Who outspoke you?"

MAJESTIC.

Leona Stephens and Len D. Hollister:

"I don't see why you are going to move. You have only lived here a short time and people are just beginning to know you."

"That's why I am going to move."

"Why aren't you married?"

"I don't know; just born lucky, I guess."

RIALTO.

Eastman and Moore:

"I love to go into the woods and study the habits of animals."

"What do the little toads do when they get tired?"

"They sit down on toad stools."

"What's your business?"

"I study hands."

"O, palm reader."

"No, poker player."

"Can you let me have a little money, my dear?"

"Why, certainly; about how little?"

"I dreamt last night that you bought me a beautiful automobile."

"Good heavens, you'll ruin me with your extravagant dreams."

"I bet you have wonderful talent for painting."

"How do you know?"

"I can see it in your face."

"Life would be all right, except for two things."

"What are they?"

"Blondes and brunettes."

"Whenever I see you, you are chasing after a fat girl."

"I believe in the old adage, 'Follow the crowd.'"

"You have been making love to some other girl."

"How do you know?"

"Because you have improved so."

"I'm a self-made man."

"Well, run along and finish the job."

"Look me in the face."

"What! And spoil my whole day's pleasure!"

"When you first married me you called me a package of sweets."

"I meant lemon drops."

Clark and McCullough:

"Where are you running?"

"That young man just tried to kiss me."

"Dont worry. There'll be another one along in a moment."

"Why do you speak to me when you don't even know me?"

"You are so beautiful."

"Do you really think so?"

"Yes, your face looks like a South Chicago sunset."

"Where did you come from just now?"

"A funeral."

"Were you one of the mourners?"

"Yes; the corpse owed me five hundred dollars. But you haven't told me yet who you are."

"Just a poor innocent country girl trying to get along."

"What part of the country do you come from—the bowery?"

"I don't understand you, sir."

"What's you name?"

"Graham, and I'm trying to earn my daily bread."

"Your graham bread?"

"Yes, sir."

"Have you a sweetheart?"

"I did have but we quarreled."

"What about?"

"He accused me of having stolen his watch, so he searched me."

"And did he find his watch?"

"No, sir; all he found was the ticket."

"Where do you live—in Siberia?"

"Never mind where I live. Tell me where you come from."

"Michigan."

"What part?"

"All of me."

"So you came from Michigan?"

"Yes, wouldn't you?"

"Have you a sister?"

"No, but my brother has."

"Was your brother raised in Michigan?"

"Yes, but the rope broke."

"And your father—what business is he in?"

"Pa has a big farm and raises chickens."

"If you're a sample I must look the place over."

"On father's farm you'll have a chance to rise early with the sun."

"I'd rather sit up late with the daughter."

Dunn and O'Connell:

"Stop personalities and tell me, is it true that you are working for John D. Rockefeller?"

"Not any more. He said something I didn't like, and I quit."

"What did he say?"

"Get out of here."

"Is it a fact that Rockefeller talks to himself when he's alone?"

"I don't know. I never was with him when he was alone."

"Have you any other job in view?"

"I'm in hopes of getting on the police force."

"I'll see if you know anything of the duties of a policeman. Suppose you were ordered to disperse a mob, what would you do?"

"I'd pass around the hat."

"Suppose you saw a big drum lying in the roadway?"

"I'd beat it."

"Suppose you saw a drunken cowboy sneaking along with a revolver in his hand."

"I'd beat it."

"Tell me one thing; when I see you in a full dress suit, how is it you never wear your watch?"

"Because I never have both at the same time."

Latest News from Movie Land.

New we hear that Mildred Harris Chaplin, who has entirely recovered from her serious illness which followed the birth and death of her first child, is going to Catalina island to gain the complete rest necessary for the picture work she is going to undertake in the fall under the management of Louis B. Mayer. She is to make the trip from Los Angeles to the island on one of the airships of her husband's recently established aerial line.

Elliott Dexter begins work shortly on his first personal starring vehicle, the details of which are coming out soon. Mr. Dexter, who has been sick for some months with a nervous breakdown, is rapidly recovering and will resume work about the first of October.

Soon we are to have the name of Mr. E. K. Lincoln's first picture announced. Walter F. Niebuhr, president of the American Cinema corporation, has just signed Mr. Lincoln to appear in a series of photoplays. Mr. Lincoln will begin work about Sept. 1. Now he is resting on his estate at Blanford.

"The Lee Kids" are appearing in some two reel comedy vehicles; short skits in order that they may "carry on" throughout the production with a snap and a vivacity which would be impossible for two such juvenile comedians if their rôles were longer. The release is by Lou Rogers corporation and is under the direction of Tefft Johnson.

Things to Watch If Your Car Has Hotchkiss Drive

Keep Spring Clips Tight and Don't Neglect Lubrication.

BY HIGH SPEED.

A GOOD majority of the cars now produced employ what is commonly known as Hotchkiss drive, which is rather a system or method of directing certain forces acting on the rear axle and other parts. In the Hotchkiss drive car such parts as torque tubes, torque rods, radius rods and other members are dispensed with and the work usually done by these members is given over to the rear springs. These springs therefore must be strong enough to take the rear axle torque and also are the means through which the car is propelled or pushed forward.

In order that the springs be able to do this work in addition to supporting the usual load, it is customary to make the main leaf of each spring of an alloy steel so as to be better able to take the added stresses without falling down. Certain other points also are taken into consideration in the design of a car with Hotchkiss drive, but the change in spring sturdiness and strength is the most important.

In a car using no separate members to take torque and propulsion it is absolutely essential that the spring clips be kept always tight. If they become loose the spring is allowed to shift its position at will, and having to take the stresses mentioned, under such conditions the spring will usually break.

As a matter of fact, where there is persistent spring breakage on a car using the Hotchkiss method, one can almost be certain that it is due to loose clips. A brand new car is likely to develop loose spring clips in a few hundred miles of running because the spring metal is such that it can stretch somewhat. The owner should therefore tighten the nuts which hold the clips securely in place. This should be done after the first 500 miles and as often after that as is convenient.

The spring shackles and shackle bolts should receive more than the usual attention. Where grease lubrication is provided one should make certain that grease gets to the bearing surfaces. Turn down the cup until grease oozes out around the ends of the bolt.

Side play in shackles is no uncommon complaint in cars of this type. This is at once noticed because of the peculiar and annoying sound emitted, which often sounds like a loose fender or other metal part. This is because the sound originates in a wheelhouse, the space inside the fenders, and there is magnified.

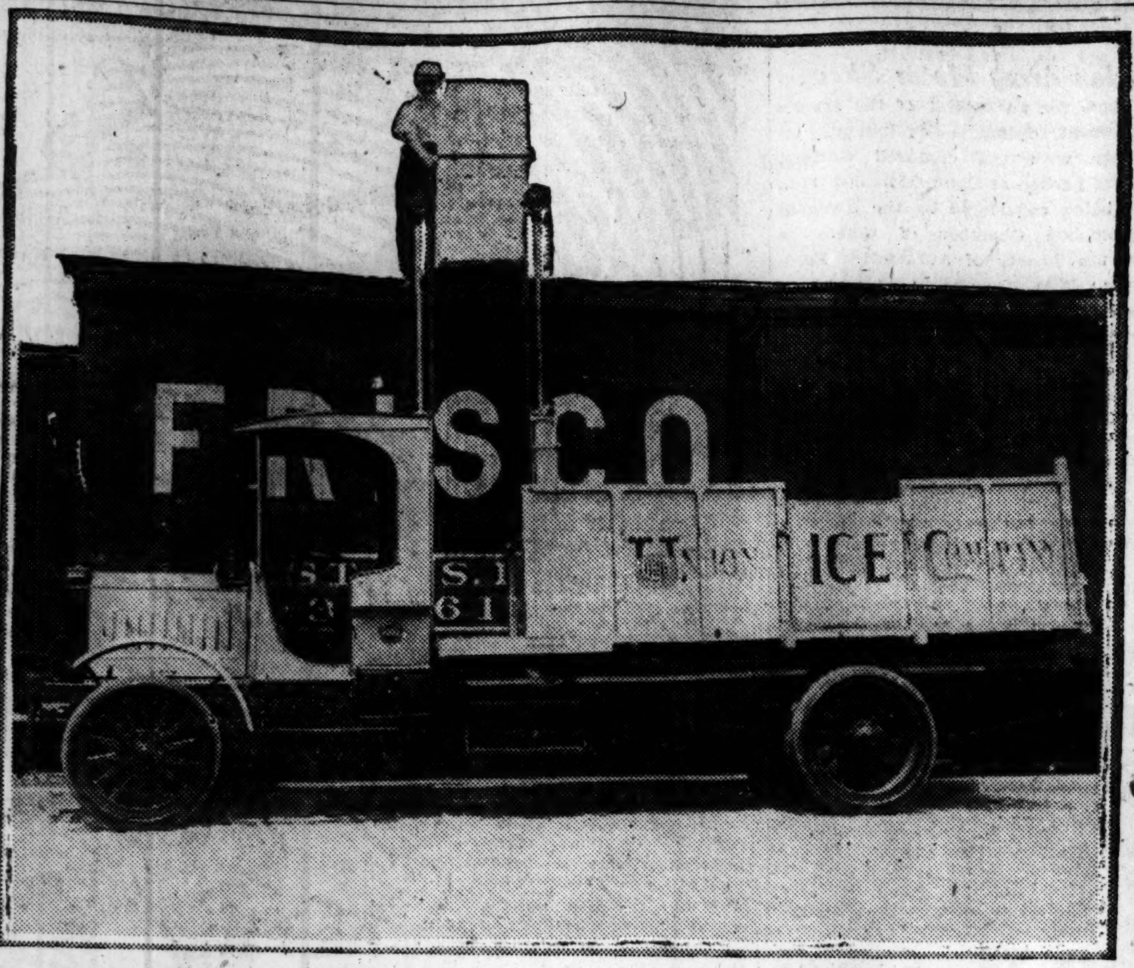
Recently a number of complaints have come to the writer regarding the breakage or loosening of front universal joints on cars with Hotchkiss drive. It is quite easy to see that if the springs do not do their work properly the propeller shaft and universals will have to take on the work and naturally they will suffer in a very short time. The shaft will have to take a little strain of this kind, but if the springs are properly tightened in place no injury will come to either part.

In some of the first designs of cars using Hotchkiss drive it was noticed by the drivers that the car would tend to hold back or brake itself under certain conditions. This was because the springs allowed too much movement of the rear axle when the car was started or when an abrupt change in speed was made.

In the cars in question no change was made in the brake layout, so that every time the rear axle turned slightly the brakes were automatically applied. One is likely to get the same result in some of the recent designs, if the springs are not tightly in place or if they are weak and allow too much freedom of movement to the rear axle.

The average owner of a car whether it uses Hotchkiss drive or not rarely pays any attention to the members that have to do the important work of transmitting the propulsive force. In the case of a torque member it is constantly moving at its forward end even if the road is only slightly rough.

There is provision for lubricating the joint at the front end, but being hidden it makes it hard for the owner to give it the necessary attention. If not attended to wear is very rapid, the joint becomes noisy and in light cars is likely to rattle like a loose brake rod. It also does not perform its function properly when it is badly worn.



FIGHTING THE H. C. OF L.—In these days of mounting grocers' bills, John H. Stubbe, who sells Riker trucks in Pittsburgh, seems worthy of a moment's attention. Mr. Stubbe has devised the motor truck elevator pictured above for use in icing freight cars. Since the cars are iced from the roof, it has been necessary hitherto to do the work from a raised platform or to hoist the ice into place by man power. With this contraption enough time, labor, and ice are saved to make a substantial difference in the cost of the operation—and you may or may not know that a large part of what you pay for perishable foodstuffs is for the job of icing the car they came in.

Barney's Record.

Says the Detroit News:

Bill Pickens was promoting a match between Barney Oldfield and Ralph De Palma in Atlanta a couple of years ago for the "world's championship." Let it be known that Bill never promotes anything unless it's for a "world's championship." He had the town, from the Negro washers in the garages to the bankers, split fifty-fifty in the selection of a favorite.

A Negro porter from the Packard agency and the Firestone Tire branch colored aid, both intense partisans of their respective idols, were engaged in a wordy war over who was the most popular of the famous pair.

"Mistah Bahney may be de oldes' racah, but Mistah Ralph is de man who's goin' to infulence de folk to pay silvah dollahs to git in de fai' groun's," declaimed the Packard henchman.

"Say, boy!" promptly came back the Firestone standardbearer, "Mistah Ol'fiel' done kilt 'moh peoples 'an Mistah De Palma evah raced befo'."

Seek Model Road.

Transformation of the forty mile stretch of the Lincoln highway from Upper Sandusky, O., west through Hancock county into a model section of the transcontinental roadway is the plan of the Lincoln Highway association. Plans include making the road sixty feet wide, building fences along each side, planting tres, and arranging lawns attractively.

Big Speedway for Texas.

Dalworth, Tex., Aug. 23.—At this point, just half way between Dallas and Fort Worth and only fifteen miles from each city, there will be built an automobile speedway by the Dalworth Park and Race Track company. It will be constructed of brick. The project has been financed and it is planned to have the track finished by Nov. 1.

The track is to be three-eighths of a mile longer than the Indianapolis speedway, giving Texas the largest speedway in the country. Two grand stands are to be constructed having a seating capacity of 50,000.

The Experts Say---

THE hydrometer, which every careful car owner uses constantly on his battery, is easily broken and it is somewhat of a problem to know where to keep it. The best way is to keep it right in the wooden case in which it comes and to attach metal straps to the wall, into which the case and instrument may be thrust after the car owner has finished his battery test.

It is possible to make a very useful floor scraper from an old license plate, by placing the same to the end of a broom handle and placing a crossboard to brace the plate. Iron braces from the handle to the crosspiece prevent the head of the scraper from bending. This tool is very convenient for cleaning oil and other messy matter from the garage floor.

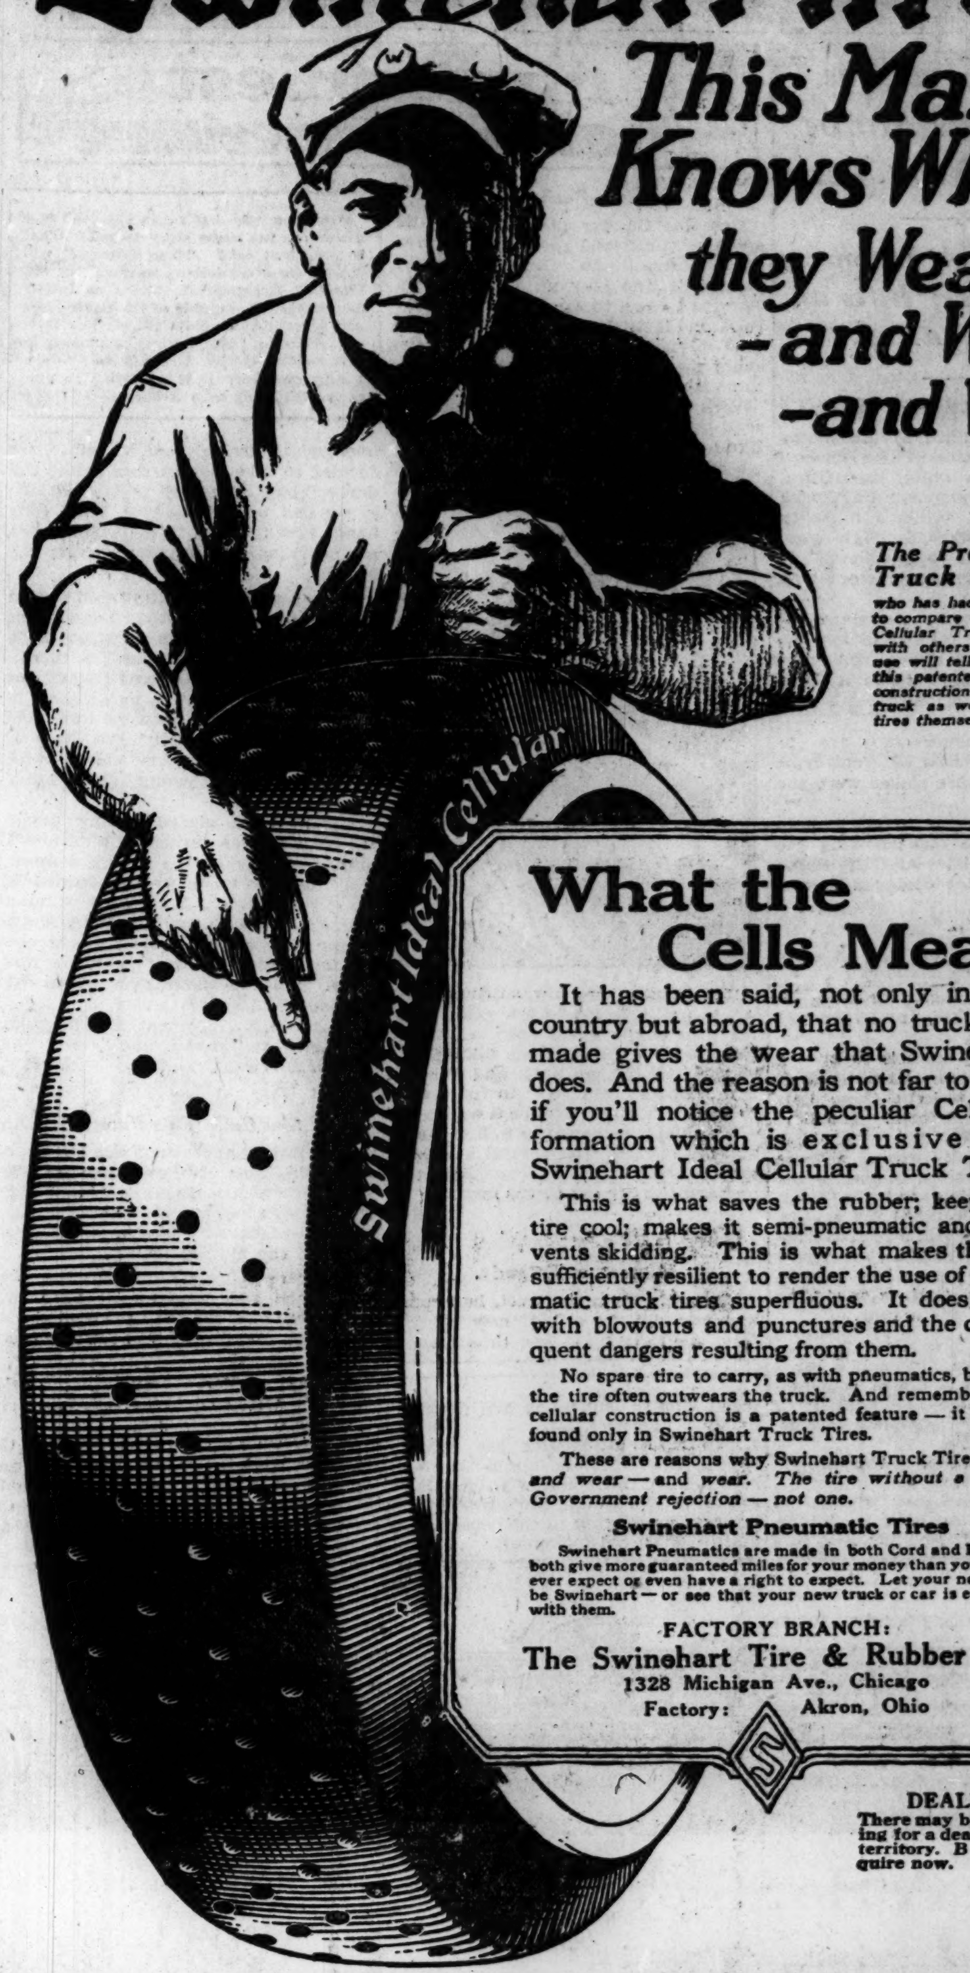
In the case of a rattling door the defective part can be detected by the simple expedient of holding each in turn while the car is running. Adjustment of the clearance between the spring bolt and its recess will cure the trouble.

Distilled water is, of course, absolutely essential for the storage battery. It is not always possible to procure this easily and any car owner can make his own distilled water by means of a very simple apparatus. Have a length of annealed copper tubing coiled, so that it will fit in a dishpan. Connect the end of the copper tubing with an ordinary tea kettle by means of a short piece of rubber tubing. The other end of the tube is curved so that the water passing down will drip into a bottle or other container. The dishpan in which the coil rests is filled with cold water, frequently renewed to keep it cold. The water in the tea kettle is boiled and the steam so produced passes out of the spout into the tube, through the coil, where it is cooled and condensed back into water again and is finally collected for use in the bottle at the end of the copper tube.

Don't forget the speedometer drive. This hard working part needs a little lubrication, a few drops of oil once a week. and the average owner seldom remembers it. Given this little attention, the drive will operate quietly and for a long period without other care.

Swinehart Tires

This Man Knows Why they Wear -and Wear -and Wear



The Practical Truck Driver who has had a chance to compare Swinehart Cellular Truck Tires with others in actual use will tell you why this patented cellular construction saves the truck as well as the tires themselves.

What the Cells Mean

It has been said, not only in this country but abroad, that no truck tire made gives the wear that Swinehart does. And the reason is not far to seek if you'll notice the peculiar Cellular formation which is exclusive with Swinehart Ideal Cellular Truck Tires.

This is what saves the rubber; keeps the tire cool; makes it semi-pneumatic and prevents skidding. This is what makes the tire sufficiently resilient to render the use of pneumatic truck tires superfluous. It does away with blowouts and punctures and the consequent dangers resulting from them.

No spare tire to carry, as with pneumatics, because the tire often outwears the truck. And remember, this cellular construction is a patented feature — it will be found only in Swinehart Truck Tires.

These are reasons why Swinehart Truck Tires wear and wear — and wear. The tire without a single Government rejection — not one.

Swinehart Pneumatic Tires

Swinehart Pneumatics are made in both Cord and Fabric—both give more guaranteed miles for your money than you would ever expect or even have a right to expect. Let your next tires be Swinehart — or see that your new truck or car is equipped with them.

1200 Degrees of Heat

In your motor is 1200 degrees of heat—absolutely dry heat. You have breathed un-moistened air? It is that condition multiplied hundreds of times. Every time combustion takes place a tiny bit of carbon is formed. The terrific heat burns it onto cylinders, where it stays. Thus trouble starts. As the carbon deposit increases, the gasoline wastage grows in increasing proportion. Sometimes it amounts to 50%—40% is common. Think of it! Out of every dollar spent for gas, 40 cents actually thrown away!

Steam Prevents Carbon

Every automobile man knows it. But how to get it there, how to get it into that 1200 degree explosion chamber—that has been the problem. But now it is solved. The Automatic Steam Carburetor does it. It is a clever new invention that was put to the most gruelling tests before you had a chance to buy it. Not only does it prevent carbon from forming, but it increases vaporization, making the mixture more responsive to the spark. Thus it gives you complete combustion, and uses every drop of fuel.

You will not be doubtful about results. When you see your car pick up five to seven additional miles per hour without using any more gas—when you feel the extra power and pep that you know it didn't have before—when performance shows that it is carbon free—then you will know that the Automatic is doing what we guarantee it will do. And when you spend from 25% to 40% less for gas, with motor cleaning and repair bills reduced to practically nothing, then you will see that the Automatic is paying for itself several times each season.

But try it yourself. You risk nothing. These dealers are authorized to equip your car (also truck, tractor, motor boat or aeroplane) and let you be the judge as to results. They let you use the Automatic thirty days, but thirty minutes will convince you. Within thirty days you may return it if you feel that you can afford to be without it, and they will refund your money. The first cost is only $15.00, which is also the last cost, as there is no expense for up-keep.

U. S. ORIGINAL MICA TIRE POWDER reduces all inner friction. This is the big item in tire wear.

Radical Changes in Illinois Motor Laws Next Year

Special Truck Licenses; Higher Fees; Bills of Sale Required.

BY JOHN L. SPELLMAN.

RADICAL changes in the motor laws were made at the last session of the state legislature. Scores of amendments and new bills were offered. While a majority of those were shelved, enough were passed to change the complexion of the general laws governing motor propelled vehicles.

Louis L. Emmerson, secretary of state, has issued a booklet giving the amended and new laws. The new sections become effective Jan. 1, 1920. Following is a list of the most important changes:

Trucks and pleasure cars are to have license plates of a different type. Heretofore the license places were the same.

Trucks are to carry in addition to their license plates tags showing the weight of the vehicles and the maximum loads they are designed to carry.

Increased license fees for all vehicles.

Instead of the license year being divided into four parts, it will be but two parts.

The secretary of state is to keep a list of automobile owners arranged alphabetically. At present these lists are not kept in this form. The lists are to be sold for $25 a set.

Commercial vehicles having a gross weight of 5,000 pounds, including the weight of the vehicle and the maximum load, are to be taxed $12 a year. The motor truck schedule of fees runs up to $60 for vehicles of 15,000 pounds.

Tractors, traction engines or similar devices are to pay $25 a year.

Every sale of an automobile must be accompanied by a bill of sale, setting forth the name and address of the purchaser and a complete description of the machine.

Motorists from other states are allowed six months' time during any one year for their machines within the borders of Illinois without the necessity of taking out Illinois licenses, provided similar courtesies are extended by their home states.

The state authorities are anxious that all automobilists familiarize themselves with the changes in the laws. Copies of Mr. Emmerson's booklet can be had by applying to the secretary of state's office at Springfield.

My Funniest Motoring Experience

Every one who has taken the road in a motor car has some story to tell. What is your best one? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "My Funniest Experience." Write as briefly as possible, on one side of the paper only, and address Automobile Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. Manuscripts submitted in this contest cannot be returned. They Pushed.

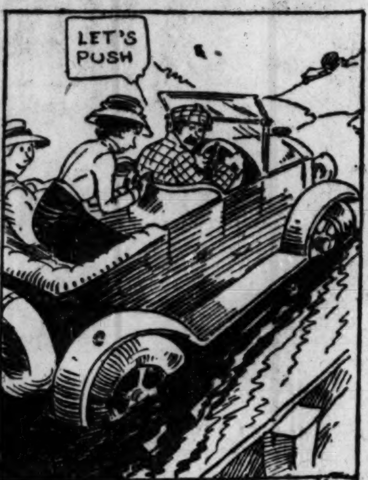
One fine Sunday morning my wife and I, with a friend and his wife, drove out to a small lake, where we went in swimming and had our picnic lunch. The road down to the lake was a clay road, and is fairly good in dry weather. Suddenly a rainstorm blew up, and for about a couple of hours it poured continuously.

When we started back, we found the road had been changed as if by magic into a veritable mud pie, and of course we got stuck. The ladies were seated in the tonneau and I was driving, trying to pull through in low gear, "killing" the engine every once in a while.



Suddenly I felt someone taking hold in the back of my seat, and I heard my friend's wife say to my wife: "Come, let's push. Maybe it will help."

We finally managed to pull through, and my friend's wife earned a reputation for sitting in the back seat and pushing the car out of the mud.

Almost a Tragedy.

My uncle, from the west, had come, unexpectedly, in a big, new touring car. As it was not yet time for my husband to arrive from his office, we decided to take a short spin before the dinner hour. We went pretty fast after we had passed the city limits [our home was then in the suburbs], and my uncle insisted on passing every car in sight.

On our way home, we passed one at such a rate of speed that I could not see who the occupants were, but both car and driver looked familiar to me. My uncle slowed down, and I could not resist the temptation to look back.

They were close upon us now, and my eyes looked directly into those of my husband. By his side sat a strange woman, young and rather pretty.

My husband glared at my uncle, whose back was turned to him, and I stared frigidly at the young woman. A little later, when we had turned in at our driveway, I saw the woman clamber out, with my husband gallantly assisting, and walk down the street. To my chagrin, I saw that she was lame. She was a stranger whom my husband had asked to ride.

At the same moment my husband smilingly recognized uncle, and the melodrama was over.

Y. R.

She Calls This Funny!

My funniest experience was last year, about this time. We were traveling by auto through the Topango pass in California. We had an experienced driver, and the roads were like boulevards all through the mountains.

We were going about eighteen miles per, when suddenly, for no apparent reason, we swerved from the road about four feet, and almost went into a canyon.

We all wondered why it happened, and the driver could not account for it himself.

When we got to town in about 15 minutes we learned there had been an earthquake. People were thrown off their chairs, windows broken, and other damage done. Then we knew what hit us.

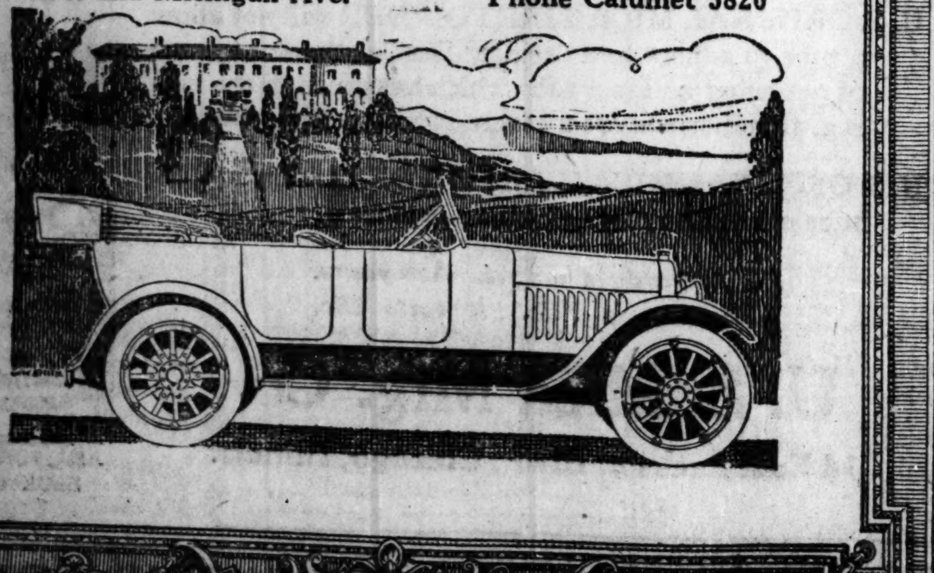
Doctors Want Cars.

The great scarcity of motor cars in England is a severe handicap to physicians and the British Medical association has made an appeal to the manufcturers to give priority to those who require automobiles for use in their practice. Many doctors who formerly owned cars disposed of them when they entered military service, and on their return they have found it practically impossible to get new cars. Manufacturers in Great Britain, it is said, have their orders booked for all the cars they can produce this year, and it will be difficult to give physicians preference without sacrificing the interests of others.

Plan Army Motor Show.

Plans for an exhibit of the army's motorized ordnance equipment, together with the captured German trucks parked at Camp Holabird, Md., are being considered by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce and the Society of Automotive Engineers. It is proposed to seek government sanction and coöperation for housing of the machines at a convenient point, at the Maryland camp, in Washington or in the west, so engineers may study there, particularly the German equipment, with a view to obtaining suggestions for improvement of future truck designs.



A Hot Spot Chalmers is a Tonic for Your Nerves

Chalmers Motor Car Co. Detroit, Mich. U.S.A. Quality First

WHEN things go wrong, and the sun refuses to shine, and your nerves wear through to the surface get out in a present day Chalmers—and experience the joy of perfect motion, of an alert "piece of steel."

No grinding noises, no "coughing" of carburetor, no backfires, no sound of friction, no vibration—nothing but sweet, silent motion beneath you!

Picture in your mind the old car that raced from gear to gear as it got under way, the whine, the creaks—and then the rasping, the twitching, the quiverings when you set the brakes.

Now your nerves can "go to sleep" in a Chalmers, for Hot Spot and Ram's-horn have "pulverized" gas and given it to the engine so well prepared for power that vibration becomes a thing of the past.

And with vibration out go those thousand and one things that disturb your ears and irritate your nerves.

One ride on this present day Chalmers will mark for you a New Epoch in Motoring, whether you drive two blocks or 200 miles.

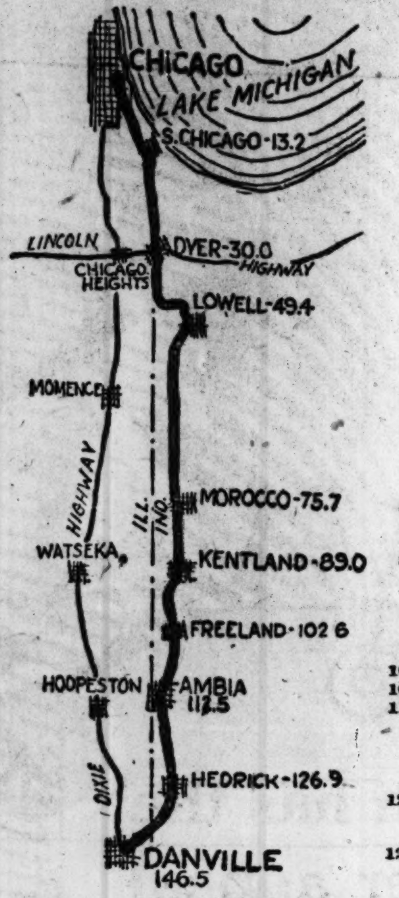
Tribune Tours

XIX.—To Danville.

ROADS which lie just east of the Indiana line have long been the best for travel directly south out of Chicago. This year they are virtually the only way to go, for much of the Dixie highway is closed for construction work, and the detour roads are bad in the best of weather and all but impassable when it rains.

This route, therefore, is serviceable to a variety of destinations. For Momence and Kankakee follow the itinerary as outlined to Schneider or Lake Village and then turn west. For Watseka turn west at Kentland, and for Hoopeston and Paxton turn west at Ambia.

Tourists bound for Champaign will find it well worth while to drive to Danville by this route and then continue west to the university city. It's a longer way 'round, but considerably better as to road conditions than the more direct route outlined in TRIBUNE Tour No. 16.



Mileage.

4.0 Jackson and Michigan boulevards. Width and Speed.

Regardless of how one feels toward the Japanse, he must admit they do things in an original way. Speed limits for motorists, for instance, vary according to the width of the thoroughfares.

On roads between twelve and eighteen feet wide machines may run eight miles an hour, between eighteen and thirty-six feet, twelve miles an hour. Within the city limits machines must not travel on streets less than eighteen feet wide. They may run at twelve miles per hour on streets between eighteen and thirty-six feet wide, and on those wider than thirty-six feet sixteen miles an hour is the limit.

DERF
SPARK PLUGS

Conqueror of a Hundred Fields

No other spark plug has ever equalled the marvelous record made by the Derf. Time after time, in test after test, it has come out a proved victor.

Why? Because it is built on the best idea—the one big idea: a 360 point, circle-within-a-circle surface for sparking. Naturally there can be no miss fires—no failure to function from oil splashes, dirt or carbon. And the fat spark fires a leaner mixture, giving you 25% to 35% more mileage out of your gasoline.

All this has been proved. The Automobile Club of America and the Motor Truck Club of America proved that the Derf will save 25% gasoline; The Tower Motor Co., in an Overland Dependability run, proved that, for 7 days and 7 nights continuous run, the Derf never once missed fire. Packard Motors Efficiency test showed that Derf was the most economical as well as efficient. The N. Y. Herald-Government Fuel Economy test proved Derf the winner—not only in less fuel used, but it fired the car that won the hill climb!

What Derf Spark Plugs have done in these tests they will do in your car. You'll get the greatest satisfaction from using these plugs. Buy them today. $6.20 for four, $9.30 for six.

Truck Section of Chicago Show to Be at Stockyards

REPORTS from the east, where they are perfecting plans for next winter's national automobile shows, have it that the International ampitheater at the stockyards is to house the motor truck section of Chicago's exhibit.

The passenger car show will be held, as usual, in the Coliseum and 1st regiment armory. Thus Chicagoans will have the novel experience of trying to observe an automobile exhibit housed in buildings some four miles apart. Last year's plan of having the truck show follow that devoted to passenger cars has been abandoned and all the vehicles will be shown simultaneously, so it will be something like trying to see everything that goes on at a three ring circus.

A similar arrangement has been worked out for New York. The passenger car exhibit will be staged, as in previous years, in the Grand Central palace and the trucks will be shown at the same time in the 8th coast artillery armory in Kingsbridge road.

The New York shows will be held Jan. 3 to 10 and those in Chicago Jan. 24 to 31.

Astor Cup Again?

New York racing men are discussing a proposal for revival of the Astor cup races, with the first contest at the Sheepshead Bay speedway, Sept. 20. If the project is carried out, A. A. A. contest officials declare a 200 or 250 mile race will be held, with a purse aggregating $25,000.

Readers who wish measurably prompt replies to requests for motoring information will do well to provide a stamped and addressed envelope, so that they may be answered by mail. Limitations of space are such that only a few of the many inquiries received can be answered in this column.

Please give me your opinion regarding the advantages or disadvantages of disk steel wheels as compared with wood or wire wheels for automobiles.

C. F. A., Chicago.

The disk steel wheels which are on the market have many advantages to make their consideration worth while. One is that they give an absolutely round wheel. This is not quite so with the wood wheel, which has the rim secured with six or seven lugs. These lugs, pressing on the rim, tend to make the rim hexagonal or heptagonal in shape. This tendency, while overcome to a large extent by the resiliency of the rubber tire, is nevertheless there. Tire removal is made an easy matter with these wheels, for it is only necessary to remove the bolts which hold the outside rim against the tire. Tires cannot be removed with the air in them, however, so that spares are carried mounted upon their wheels, which is a slight disadvantage, because it means that more weight must be carried. As far as strength is concerned, the steel wheel is undoubtedly stronger than any wood or wire wheel upon the market. But, because of its great strength, the steel wheel is very rigid. Just how much of a disadvantage this is cannot be said, but the flexibility of the wire wheel certainly is not there.

Some people make a practice of placing in with their gasoline a high grade of lubricating oil, using one quart of oil to ten gallons of gasoline. They say that they never have any trouble with carbon in their motors. Is this a good practice, or has it any harmful effects?

K. E., Davenport, Ia.

This practice is not at all to be recommended. The fuel which is being sold these days is hard enough to carburete without imposing this extra difficulty upon the engine. On cold days this practice will be sure to make a lot of trouble. The battery will have to work harder to start the engine. The accumulation of the heavier oils within the cylinder until the engine becomes warm will slow up the warming process considerably, and the spark plugs are very apt to become fouled.

A recent article in THE TRIBUNE spoke of using oil only in the rear axle. I have had a Dodge car since 1915. It has run 27,900 miles and is in good shape, with the exception of a loud droning noise in the rear axle, where I have always used grease. Would this car do better with oil in the rear axle, and what grade would you advise?

F. C. P., Chicago.

The noise in your rear axle is being caused by the slight amount of wear, which has taken place in the gears. This calls for an adjustment before any attempt is made to eliminate by muffling it in a bath of oil. It is not so very hard to adjust the gears. First take off the rear cover over the housing and clean out some of the grease, so that the parts will be exposed. On each side of the spider support you will notice a ring about the size of the pulley driving the fan. This ring has notches cut in its periphery, which afford an easy means of turning the ring. First loosen the ring on the toothed side of the ring gear. Turn it back only a few notches. Then turn the other adjustment ring the same number of notches in the same direction. This will move the whole set of differential gears toward one side and into the teeth of the pinion gear. When the proper position is secured the noise will be eliminated. In securing the adjustment rings be sure that the small retaining lug will the finger on it, that meshes with one notch in the ring, fits into the notched ring exactly in one groove or notch. In refilling the differential with lubricant use 600-W scteam oil. This is a heavy steam engine cylinder oil and is very good for the purpose.

Is it a safe practice to shut off the engine and coast down hill with the gears in high, throwing out the clutch at the end of the hill, turning on the ignition, letting the clutch in easily and keeping on in high gear? Would it be better at the bottom of the hill to stop and use starter, etc.? Is running down hill in second gear to avoid using the brakes a safe practice?

A. R. R., Dubuque, Ia.

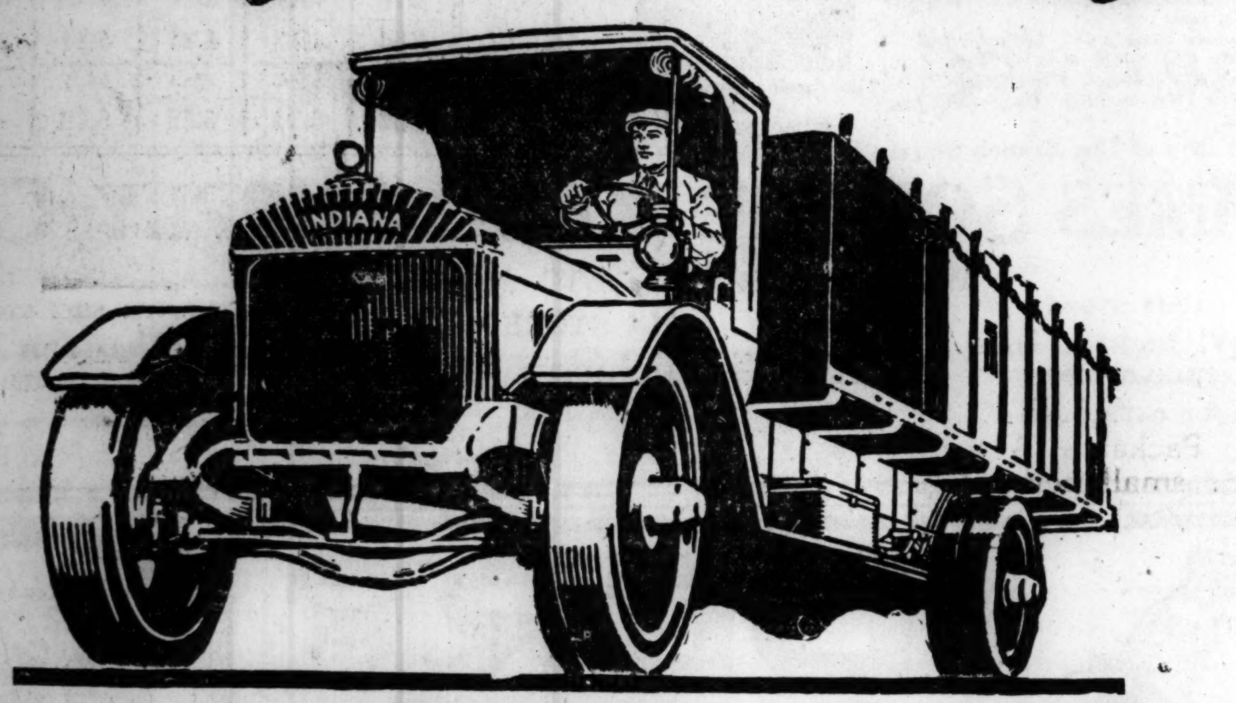
There is no harmful effect from this practice. In fact, it is much easier on the engine and the storage battery to start the engine from the car's inertia rather than to use the battery. However, coasting does not seem the most logical thing to do. This makes it necessary to use the brakes to check the speed of the car on the descent. Why not use the engine to hold the car back? If it is found that the checking action is not enough to hold the car back on a steep hill when in high gear, shift into second gear. If this is not enough, shift into first gear. The wear and tear on the brakes is saved, and it is an efficient method to cool the engine down a bit also. The engine while turned over by some external force constantly takes in fresh gas and expels it without burning it, which is an effective method of cooling.

Please tell me what per cent of all springs made for automobiles have a bolt through the center of the spring.

E. C. DEIBLER, Chicago.

To answer this question it would be necessary to take a complete inventory of the motor car industry. So far as I know, the information has never been tabulated.

THE WORLD'S HARDEST WORK



How Indiana Trucks Stood the Acid Test

Don't buy a weakling in a Motor Truck. Buy one that can do the world's toughest truck work which is:

1—Western Ore Hauling
2—Oil-Field Work
3—Mountain Hauling
4—Southern Lumber Hauling

In the western ore fields the only truck that consistently for years has stood up and outstripped trucks costing $1,000 to $2,000 more and stood the gaff like the steel giant it is, is the Indiana Truck.

The hardest oil-field work in the world is that in the Wyoming field, some of which is without any roads at all.

The Indiana stands up and does work that no other truck will do. It is easily champion in the Wyoming oil-fields.

In the Tulsa field, in the Ranger field, which are more difficult for trucks than any European battle-ground, the Indianas have stood the test where others failed utterly.

For seven years, after every other truck had failed to conquer the wild rocky mountain roads between Campbellsville and Columbia, Ky., two Indiana Trucks have been hauling freight, mail and passengers at an excellent profit to their owners. Due to the fierceness of the task, no other truck was ever able to do the work.

So you see the World's Hardest Truck Work is done by Indiana Trucks because we build them over-size in every part and dimension, a thing this organization did from the day it built its first truck, which is running today.

Old Indiana Trucks, which we have traced, have run 100,000 miles and over and are still at work. If Indiana 100,000 Mile Trucks will do the world's toughest hauling-work, they will do yours.

Indiana Sales are going ahead with great rapidity, 76% increase the past month. Indianas are sold at less cost to you than trucks they outstripped in the work outlined above.

A Tribute to Henry Ford

By EDGAR A. GUEST

Smiling mothers in happy homes, and well-clad children gay,
And decency in the place of lust and rottenness and decay,
And a reverence deep for the Stars and Stripes in the breast of many a man,
And an honest pride and a holy joy in the things American.
These are the signs that mark his path, these shall all eyes behold
Who follow the work of Henry Ford—by these shall his life be told.

Laughter and love and comforts sweet, in the place of care and strife,
A better man at the table's head, and near him a happier wife.
Light where darkness and gloom once reigned, and hope where ruled despair,
And tenderness where the brutal dwelt, and food in the cupboards bare.
These are signs that blaze his way, the work of his heart and hand
That all, who thinking of Henry Ford, shall see, and shall understand.

His tribute—the light in the mother's eye and the pink in her baby's cheek
Are tributes better than all the words that the tongue of man can speak.
And numberless homes where joy abides shall better his praises sing
In the days to come, than the song of man, or the printed and written things.
And those that follow his path shall find, not selfishly hoarded gold,
But hearts that throb with the joy of life—by these shall his work be told.

His fame—it shall live in the hearts of men, if not in their printed books—
You shall read it stamped in the holy charms of many a mother's looks.
You shall read it on faces of men set free from cold, grim circumstance,
And hear it ring in the laughter gay of boys who have had their chance.
You shall find it in ages yet to come, in patriot breasts that sing
The national hymn with a reverence deep, and unto our standards cling.

'Tis a happier world for his living here, there is joy where but grief was known,
Contentment reigns where misery once builded his hateful throne,
And children laugh where they used to wail, and the eyes of parents glow
With the happiness that they used to think that only the rich could know.
And this is the work of Henry Ford—all this shall the future scan,
And find in him a friend who lived and thought of his fellow man.

Motorists Can't Wait for Trains; Smash Into Them

Pacific Coast Report Lists 59 Such Accidents

That some progress is being made in the prevention of grade crossing accidents in which automobiles figure—at least in the west—is indicated by statistics gathered by R. J. Clancy, assistant to the general manager of the Southern Pacific, Western Pacific, and Tidewater Southern lines.

During the first six months of 1919 11 people were killed, 81 were injured, and 233 automobiles were either damaged or destroyed in grade crossing accidents. During a corresponding period in 1918 there were 26 killed and 110 injured.

The 1919 figures show a decrease of [illegible] per cent in the number killed and about 30 per cent of injured and when the increase in the number of cars this year is taken into consideration the lessening number of accidents is encouraging to those who advocate "safety first."

According to Mr. Clancy, when running at maximum permissible speed the average passenger train obstructs a crossing less than 7 seconds, yet there are many automobile drivers too impatient to wait even that brief time.

Of the 233 cars mentioned above 30 stalled on the crossing and were struck by trains; 111 attempted to cross almost immediately in front of and were struck by trains; 59 ran into trains; 1 [illegible] into train; 19 ran into and broke down crossing gates lowered to protect them from passenger trains; 3 ran into and injured crossing flagmen; 4 ran into cattleguards or crossing signs, and 6 ran over end of track or were not sufficiently into clear.

In some instances drivers of automobiles raced with trains and were either struck on the crossing or ran into the train, evidently failing to realize that the speed of their machine, though thought greater than that of the train, was in reality considerably less, as is usually the case. That misjudgment of the speed of passenger trains enters into such accidents appears quite clear from the fact that accidents of this character involving freight trains were relatively much less.

GOOD ROADS: A MESSAGE FROM THE RHINE

[From the Amaroc News, now printed at Coblenz, Germany.]

The most urgent necessity of our country in the immediate future is good roads, permanent roads that can be used twelve months in each year.

The roads of America today are absolutely inadequate, inefficient, and antiquated. They are not designed to carry the heavy traffic now. What will become of them in the future?

It is a vital problem, this question of roads, one that reaches down into the very foundation of our social and economic scheme of life, for roads are the clearing houses for the various states and the only means of free travel.

In no small measure the success of the allies is due to the great arteries of travel, which the farsighted Frenchmen had constructed in the time of peace. Subjected to a constant stream of heavy traffic for over four years, such as is largely beyond the imagination of those who have not seen for themselves, these roads stood the test, summer and winter, spring and fall, and made possible those victories which resulted in driving the Hun back across the Rhine. Whether those who are opposed to the building of highways are purposely blind to these facts is not known. In the true sense they are obstructionists. They are a drawback to any community. They are uncivilized. America, because of her government, permits these creatures to hibernate and live among us.

Since the time is approaching when all of the expeditionary forces will return across the seas, it is inevitable that their thoughts should be more and more of home, their minds relieved of the worry of war. . . . America has made a wonderful record during the war; her fame has spread far and wide by the manner in which her men responded to the call to arms. Are we to show less foresight or less determination in meeting the problems of peace?

We are faced again with a great problem, for our national prosperity, education, and social intercourse of the immediate future demand that this disadvantage of roads be overcome. This can only be done by honest legislators making laws the enforcement of which shall be placed in the hands of men who have passed the test by service in the construction and maintenance of highways. Good roads mean extended prosperity to America.

Good Roads for Japan.

Leading citizens of Tokio have organized a society to foster the improvement of roads in Japan, particularyl those in and around Tokio.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

The "national motor truck development tour," which left Chicago on Aug. 4, is spending today in Huron, S. D., having traveled somewhat more than a third of the distance comprised in its proposed circuit of six middle western states. Eighteen trucks are now in the caravan, several having joined it since the start. Intercity freight has been hauled from city to city along the way, and many farmers along the route have been helped with their thrashing by way of demonstrating what the motor truck will do on the farm. The only real adventure thus far was encountered just beyond Spencer, Ia., where a section of the road gave way and the Winther truck slid down an eight foot bank. It was pulled back and went ahead under its own power.

A superintendent of county works in Georgia reports to the Fisk Rubber company that he has driven an Overland more than 18,000 miles over the poorest of Georgia roads, sometimes with a load of from five to ten workmen, without changing any of his Fisk tires.

"Starting, Lighting, Ignition—Simplified" has been published in book form by the Remy Electric company. It is designed as a thorough explanation of automotive electric equipment in terms reduced to everyday language. Copies may be obtained free on request to the company's offices in Detroit.

Tests of a "skip-stop" system for automobiles have been made with a Maxwell in Seattle, Wash., the idea being to find out how much gasoline might be saved if motorists were permitted to stop only at every second crossing in crowded city areas. Two city officials checked the consumption of fuel, and reported that by "skip-stopping" the car could make 20.8 miles to the gallon, whereas, when it halted at every block the figure was only 12.4 miles per gallon.

The biggest users of motor trucks in the world are the American farmers, according to statistics gathered by R. E. Fulton, vice president of the International Motor company. The farmers, he says, had 79,789 trucks in operation in 1917. Manufacturers came second with 75,928, and retailers third with 74,486. Estimates for 1918 show a big increase in the number of trucks used, with the farmers still in the lead.

A Cole touring car hung up a notable record in the state of Washington last week, covering 375 miles in a single day's run over roads which led to the top of the Cascade mountains.

Buy Your Next Motor Car on a "Missouri" Basis

In presenting the new Allen we ask no man to buy on the strength of any verbal claims. A motor car is supposed to do certain things, and the better it does those certain things—the better motor car it is.

A motor car's power to perform can not be veneered in actual road test with you at the wheel. We know what this new Allen will do. We found out by doing the same things with the car that we challenge you to do with it. Test this car out, against any car on four wheels, for speed in getting off from a standing start, for power on the hills, for smooth even power at slow speed in high, for ease and comfort from the passengers' standpoint, and from the standpoint of the driver's comfort.

To Insure the High Quality of Transportation to which Packard Owners are Accustomed

It is a fixed Packard principle that price is incident to quality.

Price advances in Packard cars are never made for any other reason than to maintain the highest standards.

It used to be the fashion among manufacturers to think that quality was a matter of materials—to think that it could be maintained solely by purchasing high grade steel and lumber and fittings.

The Packard people have always held that the spirit of the artisan is equally important and are confident that the advantage the Packard owner gets in the performance of his car is largely a matter of the quality of workmanship and the spirit of the workman.

* * *

A Packard price advance is interesting to the present Packard owner because it draws attention to the cash value of his investment in transportation.

We know of no motor car which brings today such a high percentage of its purchase price on the used car market.

Men whose first fine cars were used Packards will tell you that there is little gamble in such a purchase—less than in many an ordinary car fresh from the hands of its manufacturer.

* * *

To men about to purchase Packards, a price advance merely emphasizes the small percentage the first cost of their Packard is to the value of the transportation delivered.

When they buy a Packard they are buying the highest grade of motor car transportation.

They are buying the nerve rest which comes from traveling in the utmost comfort.

They are buying the true saving which comes from having speedy, reliable transportation at their call for business or pleasure.

And they are buying fifty thousand, a hundred thousand miles of such transportation, more if they wish, without the necessity for another initial investment.

Always with the highest possible used-car value to be cashed in at any time.

Because the miles are built in the Packard ready for the new man to use when the first owner gives it up.

Packard representatives are always glad to talk about the true value of motor transportation whether you are ready to purchase or not. You will find a call at Packard headquarters interesting and profitable.

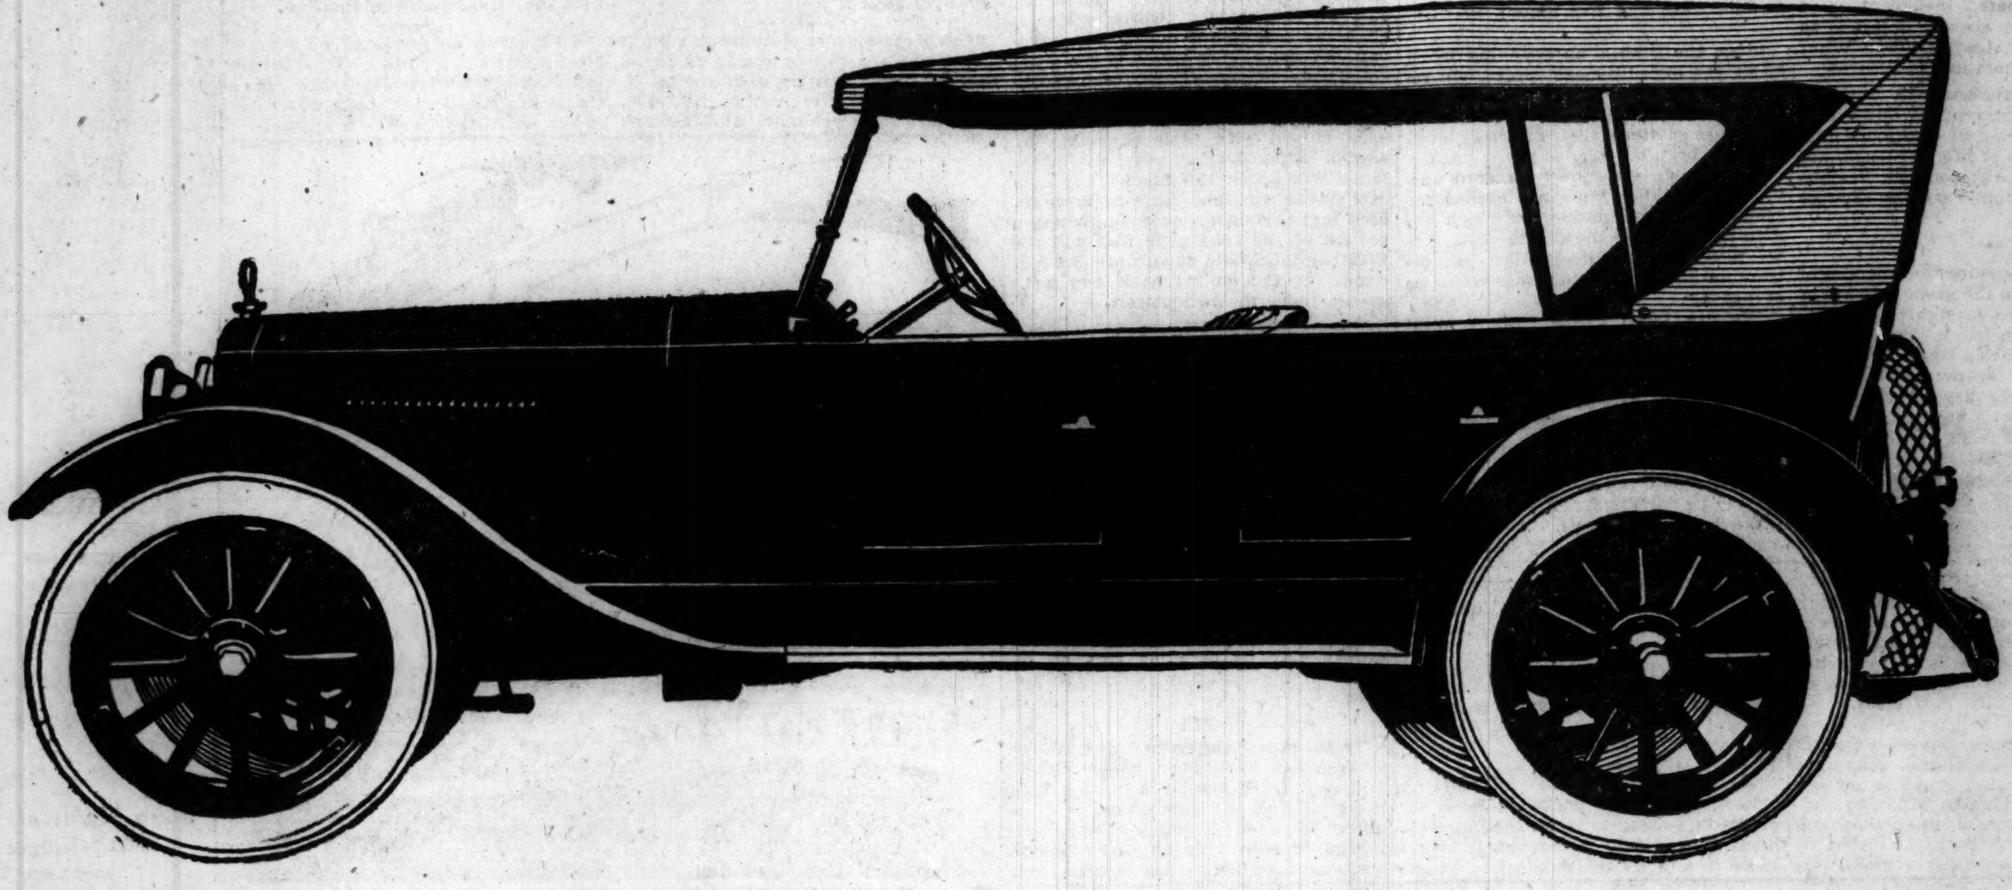
AN ENTIRELY NEW MODEL



GRANT SIX

THE new Grant Six is a truly fine car—fine mechanically—fine in performance—and fine looking. You will like it, for it presents features of style, beauty, refinement and completeness, entirely new in a car of its price.

Back of this new Grant Six is an experience gained in building over fifty thousand Grant Sixes. In it is embodied all the benefits of this ripe knowledge.

Smartness with Comfort and Completeness

Of course, the first thing that strikes buyers who look at this car is its extreme beauty. It is the perfection of proportion and design. Its lines typify the best thought of the world's greatest body designers. Nothing so attractive has ever been seen in a car of such moderate price. Indeed, it is not surpassed by cars of much higher prices.

The new style radiator is imposing in appearance and in entire harmony with the body lines. The top is well designed and beautifully made from excellent materials. The upholstery is in genuine leather and the cushions luxuriously comfortable. Seat springs are the finest money can buy. Inside trimming is finished with leather covered moldings. Instrument board is mahogany finished. Tool kit is carried in special compartment in the left front door—and equipment includes such surprising conveniences as a Boyce Motometer and a Kellogg Power Tire Pump.

Dependable Power with Unusual Strength

Fine engineering is apparent in the Grant Six chassis. Everything about it denotes strength, permanent durability and convenience of operation.

The motor—overhead valve type—is powerful, quiet and quickly responsive. It will take the car over any road or up any hill as fast as you care to go.

It is a motor that creates and sustains enthusiasm. But that is best demonstrated by a ride. Come and get it. Sit at the wheel yourself.

The pressed steel frame is extra deep and strong. The Columbia rear axle is floating type with one-piece housing of exclusive design, and twelve inch equalized brakes. Front axle is drop forged I-Beam. Steering connections are of extra strength and all bushed.

World's Easiest Riding Light Six

This sounds like a strong claim, but the car in action proves it. We emphasize its wonderful spring suspension. It is by long odds the most comfortable riding light six ever marketed. Springs are semi-elliptic both front and rear, 38x2-in. in front and 56½x2-in. in rear, the longest ever used in a car of its size. Spring shackles are extra long and all springs are equipped with oil-less bushings (permanently lubricated). Springs ride almost flat with the car loaded, reducing rebound to the minimum. You will like the supremely comfortable riding qualities revealed in this model.

Every Detail High Grade

Spark and throttle control are on the steering wheel, which is placed at an ideal position for any size driver.

We would like to tell you about every detail of the New Grant Six. It is a genuine pleasure to talk about and show its different high grade features. We feel honest pride in this car. It's just the smart, stylish, well built five-passenger car that most people want—and its finish and lines are certainly beyond comparison. But better than anything we might say, any picture we might paint, is the car itself. Come and see it. Find out all about it before you buy any car. Let it tell its own story.

Read these brief specifications carefully:

Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

HEAVYWEIGHT SPECIALTY SALESMEN, ATTENTION!

This is your opportunity for unlimited earnings. We are the oldest, biggest, and most successful people in our line of business, doing a business of as much as a million dollars a month. Some of our salesmen in the last year have made as high as $50,000. A number of them have made better than $25,000.

We have just perfected an original and unique sales plan, which changes our proposition from a four or five call sale to a one call sale. It makes our proposition incomparably easier and more profitable to sell. There is no limit to the money salesmen can make who can qualify for this work.

On this plan a commission is seldom under $400 and will average upwards of double this amount. A good salesman should average five sales a week, and have business within a week from the time he starts in the field.

Credit is extended on all sales for the full amount of sale, but your commissions are payable in full as soon as the order is accepted by purchaser and the sale completed, which is nearly always within thirty days.

This is nothing in the nature of stocks, bonds, or insurance, and is something on which we have practically no competition.

We realize that good men are just as scarce as good sales propositions, and it requires more than a desire to make big money to qualify for this work. You must have made better than $5,000 a year and expenses. Most of the men we employ have made double this amount.

Our proposition is one that requires about two hours to present, and you must be able to master it thoroughly and present it honestly and convincingly. It does not make much difference what your previous sales experience has been, although Specialty Salesmen and Stock Salesmen take to the work very readily.

You must be able to furnish gilt edge references as to ability and honesty at interview.

Write or wire for an appointment, giving an outline of your experience and earnings. Address A F 297, Tribune.

IT'S UP TO YOU.

YOU CAN MAKE $5,200 TO $14,000 YEARLY.

Our salesmen are proving it can be done. No salesman wanted unless able to earn $100 per week or more. We show you the way to successfully handle this attractive offering. Have opening for a limited number of high grade salesmen possessing ability, ambition, and character. Not just a "good job," but a RARE OPPORTUNITY seldom offered new men in any permanent, established organization. If you are a man of responsibility and MUST MAKE MONEY, call 1:30 to 4:30 p. m.

REAL ESTATE SALESMEN.

$1,115 in commissions was made last week by one of my salesmen. Anotheer started with me Wednesday and has made $70 a day. All the others are selling enough to make them more than happy. Ask any of them and you will be convinced that the trouble is not "you," it's because you are selling on the wrong subdivision. My property is absolutely new, never been sold on before; has cars now running directly by it, 2 other lines 3 and 4 blocks away, and 2 more coming directly to it shortly. Located in the fastest growing section of the city, the Northwest Side. It is the largest "close in" subdivision in Chicago, surrounded by attractions that compel the buyer's favorable decision. The prices are low because it was bought for cash and is sold direct by the owner with no middleman's profitts. The commissions are unusually large. There are 20 business corners, 100 business lots, 36 apartment corners, 70 boulevard lots, and over 300 fine 30 foot restricted residence lots. A property where 95 per cent of the prospects "close" and stay "closed," where no interest is charged and every cent paid goes to paying for the lot itself, making a compulsory saving plan unequaled for security and profit, where each sale leads to more sales to friends of the buyer. You hold your head high with every person you sell to. Come in and let me talk it over man to man. If you do you will take it up. Your good judgment will tell you that you cannot afford to pass it by.

O. M. McLAREN,
Sales Manager for the Hulbert Fullerton Avenue Highland Addition, 3d floor suite, 81 E. Madison-st.

SQUARE IN THE FACE!

One of Chicago's $10,000 sales managers, whom we recently placed, called in last week for a chat. He remarked that on his first visit the activities of our office fairly hit him in the face, and he was further astounded at the class of positions we offered him.

In 15 years he held but 2 positions and stated that he was skeptical of our ability to place him satisfactorily. Since accepting this last and best position of his career

We Have Placed Several of His Closest Friends.

Mr. Man, by working in the position where you are dissatisfied with the salary and visualize no apparent future, you are simply stealing a good portion of your salary because your employer could place a man on the job who would be content with conditions and a great deal more efficient.

We urge you to utilize our 16 years' experience in placing "The Right Man In The Right Place." We have 21 good vocational counsellors who are always glad to advise and assist you.

Look Your Future Square in the Face.

If your opportunity is not listed get details of others in the office. It costs nothing to talk it over.

WANTED—TO RENT—MANUFACT'G.

WANTED—TO RENT—I WANT TO RENT a solidly constructed factory building of about 10,000 square feet. It will be necessary to install about $5,000 worth of machinery and fixtures which, from their nature, must be done as a semi-permanent part of the building. For this reason, I desire to make a deal with one who will either build to suit or remodel to suit and one who will install the necessary machinery at his own expense. A 10 year lease desired during which time the cost of machinery to be entirely absorbed by the rent. Would like an option on building and machinery or machinery alone at the end of the 10 year period, at a figure to be agreed upon.

This property must be located within one mile of the loop. Prefer north side and, if difference in rental is not too great, would prefer location on track or river. Address D 532, Tribune.

Fine Wheat Farms: Low Priced: Easy Terms.

Good farm lands in the older localities, in this country, are advancing to unheard of values. Do you want a farm as good as any of these but in a newer country where production is sure, failures unknown and where the opportunity is still offered to buy the land at low prices, the opportunity that existed here 25 years ago? These new lands have the same future before them that these high priced lands here had at that time.

Our district is 16 years old, well settled, has good roads, good water, schools, rural telephones, and modern living conditions in every way. The district is a sure producer and has had no failures, it is in the center of the finest wheat and oats producing area in the world. The opportunity of a lifetime for a young man wanting to own a farm, or for others wanting to buy land on a good investment paying basis. If you have been thinking it over, now is the time to act and investigate. Values will increase rapidly from now on in sympathy with the rapid increase in values in the older countries. This seems a sure prediction.

Write us for literature and full particulars. Excursion rates every Tuesday.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Michigan.

SUCCESS

In your final analysis of a land proposition be careful to get correct data as to the cost per acre, fertility, location, climate, markets, shipping facilities, roads, and educational advantages. All these combined make for your success. If some necessary feature is lacking, then the farmer is handicapped that much at the start.

TODAY the farm renter and wage earner have an unparalleled opportunity to get 10, 20, 40, 60, 80, or more acres of hardwood land in a fine farming district for only $15 to $30 per acre on very easy terms. This district is Kalkaska and Antrim counties, Michigan, where we own and control many thousands of acres.

Although the price of the land is low, the crop earnings compare very favorably with those of Illinois and Indiana, where the price per acre is sometimes as high as $300. The location cannot be better, being in Michigan's great fruit belt, from where many large cities are quickly reached. There is abundance of rainfall and a fine climate due to the influence of Lake Michigan. Michigan is probably the greatest health resort state of them all.

THE ABOVE CONDITIONS assure you success. Combine with them our special features and your success is made doubly sure. We offer you free insurance; we loan you money after your land is paid for to make improvements; to new settlers who are developing their lands there are no taxes for five years; we have free farm advisers and many other helps, such as no other organization offers to its customers. Ask for our big booklet, mailed free on request.

WRITE TODAY for special excursion rates and dates. Best time of the year to see the growing crops.

OUR STATE COMMISSIONER

MR. C. P. NORGORD of the Wisconsin Department of Agriculture writes us from his office in the Capitol Building, Madison, Wis., on the 13th day of August, 1919:

Mr. A. L. Mordt
Gen'l Manager, Home Lands, Inc.,
Chicago, Ill.
Dear Sir:

Your policy to employ well-trained agriculture men in connection with your company, to work with your settlers and aid you in the sale of land, appeals to me as a wise, honest, and far sighted move. Such men would be capable of setting before the settlers the condition of the soil, and the crops to which it is adapted, in an accurate and safe manner. The service to your settlers in advising and aiding them in the many vital problems which come up before them in the beginning would be of great value to them. I hope that you may find it possible to institute this plan and thus place your company in the front rank of those companies which are looking after the real interest of the settlers while they are carrying on a land business.

Sincerely yours,
C. P. NORGORD,
Commissioner of Agriculture.

It is unnecessary to say that we appreciate this letter very much. We are co-operating closely with the State Agricultural Department, as we realize it is of the greatest importance that we secure the assistance of all the well trained agriculture men connected with the Wisconsin College of Agriculture, as well as its Agricultural Department. Our agriculturists have been instructed to keep in close touch with the state authorities so that they may avoid mistakes and assist our settlers in a satisfactory way.

Mr. A. L. Mordt, the general manager of our company, just returned from a trip to Madison, where he secured the promises of direct assistance from several of the state agriculture men. Mr. C. P. Norgord, Commissioner, and Mr. John Swenehart, who is in charge of the land clearing investigations for the state, both promised to come to Chicago and speak to our prospects, provided we could get them together in a hall so that they could speak to them collectively.

If you should want to have a meeting with these state authorities for the purpose of discussing with them the local conditions in our territory we will make arrangements for a hall and immediately connect ourselves with Madison so as to arrange for a meeting. If you should be interested in this proposition kindly write us and we will send you a ticket giving you free admission to this meeting. We cannot set any date at the present time until we know how many there are in Chicago and surrounding district who want to take advantage of our offer. It is possible that we may be able to get the Director of Immigration, Mr. B. G. Packer, to help us out also. We will endeavor to get pictures, soil samples, and, if possible, crop samples, if this does not interfere with the state exhibits which our counties are getting up.

Much has been said about the reliability of companies. There is no doubt but that the public as a whole has been more or less suspicious of companies that sell land. In many cases the suspicion is well founded. On the other side, there are numerous land companies in our state as well as other states that transact a legitimate, absolutely reliable business. In late years the Agricultural Department at Madison has helped considerably to elevate the land business of our state, and we want to take advantage of the assistance this department offers us in our effort to colonize our lands, and we feel that we cannot do anything that will increase your confidence in us any more than giving you an opportunity to find out from headquarters or state authorities what our district offers you. During the meeting above referred to there will be lectures accompanied with pictures, and between the lectures there will be ample opportunity for all present to ask questions in regard to soil, climate, crops, or the general conditions of our district.

This meeting is not gotten up for the purpose of having the state authorities indorse Home Lands, Inc. It is simply an arrangement that our company is making to enable you to get a chance to talk to the state authorities, discussing such matters as are of interest to the prospective settler in Northern Wisconsin. The state cannot recommend any one land company any more than another.

We hope that you will avail yourself of this opportunity to get first hand information about our district and urge upon you to let us know at once if you want a ticket.

Only bona fide prospective land buyers, homeseekers, or our own representatives will be admitted.

No Profiteering HERE

KESSEL BROS., STORAGE WAREHOUSE, has become the headquarters for persons who are solving the high cost of household furnishings by purchasing unclaimed storage.

We not only carry the most complete line of storage merchandise in the city, but carry the best. One visit will convince you of the truth of this statement.

As a climax for our wonderful mid-summer clearance sale we have secured a lot of over 500 high grade

MATTRESSES

These mattresses are to be had in all sizes, colors and quality. All of these mattresses are brand new, made correct in every detail, complying with sanitary bedding laws. The edges are all firmly sewed around and the tufts are carefully made, being uniform in size, evenly placed, and of the same tension throughout. The ticking is especially attractive in art design and fast in color. All have built in them those features which insure excellent wearing quality and satisfactory service.

Here is the most attractive thing of all regarding these mattresses—the price. They were secured from a bankrupt stock at 45 cents on the dollar, and we are going to turn them over on a 5% margin.

GOTHAM BANKS SHOW DEFICIT IN CASH RESERVE

For Second Time in Year Surplus Is Below the Requirements.

For the second time this year the weekly statement of the New York Associated Banks showed yesterday a deficit in their surplus reserve, the amount being $812,690. The excess reserve shown on Aug. 16 was $53,095,710, so that, with the decrease yesterday of $53,908,400, the surplus was wiped out and the cash reserve was, by the amount mentioned, below the legal reserve required.

It cannot be easily foretold what, if any, influence the figures will have upon the money market this week. The bank statements, beginning with December, 1914, have shown so much irregularity that they have not been followed by changes in the money market. But, sentimentally, the fact that the banks are below the legal reserve requirement, is unfavorable. Within the last year, however, the surplus has several times been below or around $5,000,000, so that yesterday's figures mean a change of but a few million dollars from previous statements that were disregarded in a money way.

Cash Decreases.

The immediate cause of yesterday's showing was a decrease of $60,712,000 in cash. The reserve requirements, based on deposits, were less, since a decrease of $50,683,000 in deposits was shown. There was also a contraction of $34,911,000 in loans. A shrinkage in loans is, however, no longer associated with fluctuations in the aggregate reserve.

The treasury department drew out $60,618,000 from its cash deposit. But this may be disregarded in figuring the excess reserve, since no reserve is required against such deposits. The weekly statement follows:

$11,280,200 Deficit.

Following the closing of the New York stock exchange on July 30, 1914, the bank statement as of Aug. 1, 1914, showed in the "actual" condition a deficit of $11,280,200. This did not include the trust companies. The latter on that date showed a deficit of $6,136,500, making the total deficit for the clearing house banks and trust companies $17,425,700.

With the closing of the exchange the "actual" statement figures were discontinued for a time, and only the "average" statement appeared. This, on Aug. 15, 1914, showed a deficit of $49,992,200. Thereafter the deficit decreased until Oct. 17, 1914, when it stod at $934,100. This was the last deficit shown until that of yesterday. The statement of Oct. 24, 1914, showed a surplus of $8,460,600.

Consolidated Form Issued.

On Nov. 28, 1914, a consolidated form of bank statement was issued. The worst was then over, and the banks showed a surplus of $131,176,090. This fluctuated considerably, but rose to the high point about ten months later, when on Sept. 18, 1915, the surplus reserve stood at $217,320,000, the high mark.

The weekly statement of the Chicago federal reserve bank showed a rather large expansion in loans to member banks on government securities, the increase being $30,635,795. The reserve bank, however, decreased the amount of bills bought in the open market by $4,221,936.

The bank made a large reduction in the amount of United States certificates of indebtedness, the decrease being $49,000,000, and bringing that item down to $32,612,000.

Federal Reserve Notes.

Federal reserve notes in circulation expanded $5,832,755, and federal reserve bank notes increased $1,464,900. The figures follow:

STOCKS AGAIN SHOW STRENGTH; MOTORS ACTIVE

Shipping and Oils in Demand; Sentiment Improves.

The New York Times.

New York, Aug. 23.—[Special.]—Stocks again displayed considerable strength in today's transactions and traders who bought to cover short sales or for the long account found that offerings were rather scarce. Automobile, shipping, and oil issues were in largest demand, particularly the first two classes, among which gains running from 2 to more than 3 points were well distributed.

As on Friday, motor company shares seemed to appeal to speculators because of the presentation of more or less official figures on earnings for the concerns and others which make accessories for automobiles. The fact that sales of motor cars and trucks were progressing on a large scale has been known for some time, and for this reason it was difficult to decide today whether purchases of the stocks represented really new accumulations or the retirement of short contracts. Motor stocks were depressed more than many other groups in the recent decline.

The week ended with speculative sentiment somewhat more cheerful than at the opening. A survey of quotations showed that the establishment of new low records for the movement on Monday and Tuesday had been followed by a recovery which practically offset many of the early recessions. Sentiment in respect to the labor situation was still apprehensive over the outlook when business ended today, but at the same time traders were more confident than they had been a few days earlier that the unions in the steel industry would not be able to bring about a widespread reduction of output.

Steel shares lagged behind others in the recovery, yet advances were sufficiently important to disclose less uneasiness among traders in respect to them than on the day the strike vote was taken. The railroad stocks were largely neglected throughout the week.

CHICAGO STOCKS

Chicago stocks were but moderately active. National Leather held steady at 21 with limited trading. Swift & Co. was up ½ point and International Packing was fractionally higher. Union Carbide was in fair demand and advanced fractionally. Mitchell Motor stock was up about 2 points at 48. John R. Thompson showed some improvement at 35¾. Bonds were dull.

BEARS POUND DOWN GRAINS; RALLY AT CLOSE

Outside Markets Weak, All News Favoring Sellers.

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

It was a day of lower prices all around, with buyers of cash and futures constantly backing away and selling pressure increasing as prices receded. Selling by the bears was especially aggressive and while closing prices were at a good rally from the inside, due to profit taking, there were losses of 5½c on September, 3@4c on cash, and 2⅝@3⅝c on deferred futures of corn. Cash oats were 1@2c lower and futures off ⅞@1c. Rye lost 1½@1¾c and barley 1¼@2¾c for the day. Provisions finished at the inside, with pork off $1.00@1.05 per brl, lard 25@50c lower, the latter on January, and short ribs 65c lower.

Outside markets were fully as weak at Chicago and closed with a heavy tone, the news all favoring short sellers.

All grains and provisions show losses for the week, as follows: Corn, 2@3½c; oats, 1⅛@2c; rye, 2½@3½c; barley, 3¾@5c; pork, 65c; lard, 15@90c; short ribs, 40c.

Liquidation On in Corn.

Fears that Texas would inundate the northern markets with new crop corn, combined with offers at $1.81 at Kansas City, more than offset the effect of an advance of around 4 points in sterling exchange and futures broke sharply.

September, which has been sustained by the shortage in the cash article, felt the effect of the lower price offerings of new crop, and led the decline. Liquidation was on and the lack of support was pronounced. At the low point prices were off 6⅞c from the previous day's finish, with the close on a rally of 1⅜c, due to week end evenign up by shorts at $1.78¾. Cash houses were fair sellers early.

Stop loss orders were uncovered in the deferred deliveries and they dropped 3¼@4⅛c. At no time were prices as high as the previous finish, and December closed within ⅜c of the bottom, at $1.41½, while May was $1.36⅞.

Oats Have Lower Range.

Highest prices for oats were made at the start and the lowest toward the close. The break in corn induced general selling by the local element, and while there was fair resistance to bear pressure the close was within ½c of the bottom, with September 71⅞c, December 74½c, and May 77¾c.

The market appears to be in a rut, there having been no important developments in the situation for several days, and the fluctuations, on the whole, are a reflection of those in corn. Hedging pressure limited, and many of the pit element are inclined to keep close to shore in consequence. Domestic demand fair. Sample value, 1@2c lower.

Holland has been a good buyer of rye of late, and sales in all positions are reported to have been 400,000 bu. In futures the featues was the buying by cash houses to remove hedges, but this was offset by selling by longs, and the close was 1½@1¾c lower. Spot No. 2 sold at $1.55¼@1.56.

Barley was in light demand and 2c lower, the break in other grains having a depressing effect. Spot sales were at $1.36@1.38.

Flaxseed at Duluth closed 2@4c lower; October, $5.53; November, $5.43; December, $5.36. Winnipeg, 2@3c lower; October, $5.37; December, $5.17.

Timothy seed, unchanged. Country lots, $9.00@12.00 per 100 lbs. Toledo, 2½c lower; October, $5.70 per bu of 45 lbs. Clover seed, easy. Country lots, $30.00@45.00 per 100 lbs. Toledo, 15c lower; October, $30.80 per bu of 60 lbs.

Weakness in Provisions.

Scattered liquidation in all speculative provisions and limited buying, except by shorts, brought a slow and weaker market with lower prices, the close being at the inside with good losses.

There was said to be an order here for 1,000,000 lbs long cut hams and 250,000 lbs shoulders from Italy, also a little better domestic demand for lard. Hogs were easier at the last. Shipments of meats and lard for the week were 45,917,000 lbs, against 24,666,000 lbs the previous week and 24,562,000 last year. Packing here since March 1 aggregates 3,300,000 hogs, an increase of 19,000 over last year. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Corn led the decline yesterday and traders said the market acted better for the bears, the breaks being more suitable to their line of action. A noticeable feature was the indisposition on the part of buyers to take hold and conservative people expressed a belief that while sentiment was too radically bearish for the real condition of the market to make it possible for bears to continue to depress prices and a rally might result from overselling, the situation did not favor buyers.

Texas continues to offer corn and everybody in the corn trade is talking about the big crop there and the great prospects. Northern markets have never had but little corn from the southwest, and while the crop there is the second largest on record for that state, there has been no year in which much of the corn ever got very far beyond the Texas state line. As the unexpected is constantly happening under existing conditions, this year may be different from any other. Kansas City reported 25,000 bu of Texas corn offered there at $1.81, or 5c over their September. It was said that Chicago houses bought Texas corn and sold September against it, but gave out no details.

Weakness in September corn, with a break from $1.82½ to $1.77⅝, brought it to within ⅞c of the low point of last Monday, from which there was an advance of 9¼c. It was due to commission house and local selling, Wagner being especially aggressive on that side. A rally of 1⅜c followed the break. Holders of old corn in the country are showing more disposition to sell, fearing that new Texas corn will come into competition with the old corn of the north, and there were increased offerings to arrive, with less demand on the part of cash interests.

"Sentiment in corn is bearish, but offers of Texas corn will not fill September short sales here," says Thomson McKinnon. "Inability to get cars and reluctance of holders in this territory to sell cash corn on breaks argues against September shorts getting much relief. This, in turn, calls attention to the great discount at which December is selling. Any declines that come from this local bearish attitude will probably prove temporary in both December corn and oats."

Heavy selling of oats yesterday was led largely by Wagner and by several of the local professionals, who picked out the weak spots to do most of their trading. Considerable capital was made out of the selling back of 325,000 bu of oats by seaboard exporters to the original sellers in Minneapolis. It is hard to spoil a bear story, but it is said that the Minneapolis people sold 36 lb oats and found it difficult to fill their sales, and it is easier to buy them back.

A Kansas City man, in discussing the corn situation in the southwest, said: "In reference to yesterday's item in THE TRIBUNE, giving Texas, Oklahoma, and Kansas 334,000,000 bu of corn, against 207,000,000 bu of corn this year, there should also be taken into consideration the kaffir corn crop, which is 122,000,000 bu, all raised in the southwest, against 60,000,000 bu last year; also that western Texas, Oklahoma, and Kansas have a large barley crop, which they are shipping out now. We actually are getting shipments f barley from the Panhandle country in Texas, which has been drought stricken for several years."

A Board of Trade membership sold at $9,050 net to the seller. Victor E. Herter, H. D. Gibbons, and J. S. Reddy applied for membership. N. De Golyer, an old timer, posted his membership for transfer.

CASH GRAIN NEWS

An easier tone developed in cash wheat at Chicago, although offerings were not large. Northwestern millers have been buying some grain here of late. While the choice kinds showed little change in prices, low grade springs were off 3@5c. Minneapolis was easier, with new northern there unchanged to 2c lower. Southwestern markets were unchanged.

Demand for cash corn was less active and prices generally 3@4c lower. No. 1 and No. 2 yellow and white closed at about $1.96, and No. 2 mixed at $1.95. Domestic shpiping sales aggregated 25,000 bu.

Domestic shipping sales of oats aggregated 150,000 bu, making about 700,000 bu sold in the last four days. While offerings in the sample market were light they had little effect on values and they declined 1@2c with futures. St. Louis was off 1c, and Milwaukee 1½@2c, while Peoria was ⅜c lower, with receipts 9 cars.

The hog market ruled rather uneven but general selling was about steady with previous day. The top at $21.90 was 5c higher; however, the market weakened at the extreme close. Average price for the day at $20.35, was 15c higher, smaller number of packing grades being responsible for the higher average. Both top and average was highest since Aug. 14. More than half the regular packers were out of the market on account of the light receipts, the total being 5,000. Shippers purchased 2,000.

Despite the sharp advances during recent days, average price of hogs for the week at $19.50 was $1.75 below the previous week, but 45c higher than a year ago. Saturday's average price was $1.85 higher than the low point of the week. Estimated average weight of hogs at 257 lbs was 7 lbs heavier than the previous week and heaviest since the week ending Oct. 1, 1910, being 9 lbs heavier than a year ago and 27 lbs heavier than two years ago. Eleven markets received 27,000 hogs, being exactly the same as the previous Saturday and a year ago and 5,000 above two years ago.

Hog receipts for the week totaled only 69,000, or 32,500 less than the previous week. On the other hand, outside orders increased, being largely responsible for the strong market after Tuesday. Shipper buyers took 14,800, or 3,000 more than the previous week, despite the small arrivals.

Packers had nearly half of the cattle receipts forwarded from other markets. Most of the market stock was put away for the Monday trade, because of the small demand. Like in the hog trade, cattle receipts were smaller than the previous week, yet the outgoing shipments were larger, due to the increased country demand.

Range of prices for steers widened during the week. Quality was lacking most days, and the better classes sold relatively strong. Due to the plainer class of offerings, the general average price of good beef cattle dropped to $15.95, or $1.35 below previous week, but was 35c higher than a year ago and $6.10 higher than the eight year average for the corresponding week.

Sheep and lambs closed very weak, there being nothing on offer to attract the country demand. Quality of offerings was poor, and packers discriminated against poor grades, causing a wider price range. Average price of lambs for the week was $17.35, the range stock running to good quality early in the week. The average was 30c higher than the previous week, but 40c below a year ago. Sheep averaged $10.25, being 25c higher than the previous week and $3.65 higher than a year ago.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 20,000 cattle, 27,000 hogs, and 30,000 sheep, against 22,971 cattle, 29,425 hogs, and 29,099 sheep the corresponding Monday a year ago. Next week's estimated receipts, 70,000 cattle, 90,000 hogs, and 125,000 sheep.

Investors Need Protection.

There has never been a time when the need of a strong organization to protect the rights and property of investors was so urgent as now. Various other groups of citizens, acting through organizations, have been obtaining concessions and privileges and are demanding more. Evidently every special favor granted to one group is at the expense of all the rest, and the investor, having no organization and receiving no consideration, is in danger of being crushed.

In the course of the economic changes brought by the war the farmers won the first prizes. The government arranged to lend them money far below current rates and incidentally is gradually forcing investors out of the farm mortgage field. The farmers are now the only people who may legally hoard food and combine to advance the price of their products.

Next, employés of railways and many public utilities obtained large advances of wages for the reason that the purchasing power of the dollar had decreased. The people in general are being taxed to pay some of these increases, and investors are deprived of their incomes to pay others. It has not occurred to anybody that the purchasing power of the investor's dollar has decreased just as much as the wage worker's, and that the investor needs a larger dividend just as much as the worker needs a higher wage.

Investors are far more numerous than organized workers, and most of them need their small income for living expenses just as much as the workers need their wages and more than the farmers need double prices for their products on three-fourths interest rates for their loans. If the investors had a great organization they would almost without further effort receive their fair share of consideration.

Pullman.

R. S., Spring Valley, Ill.—The Pullman company's car service was taken over by the government early last year, and because of that no complete annual report has been issued since then. A brief statement for the calendar year 1918 was filed with the Massachusetts public service commission recently. It indicated a large operating loss, but the standard return paid by the government plus "other income" gave a surplus of $8,756,374 applicable to stock. The 8 per cent dividend took $9,544,000, leaving a deficit for the year. The company's fiscal year ends July 31. Until it issues a complete report little will be known about its present position. The brief report here quoted probably does not fairly represent its status.

Brief Answers.

T. C.—Pick & Co. earn the dividend on preferred stock many times over. There is no funded debt and the preferred stock is being retired by a sinking fund. It may be called at 110. The stock is well protected.

Z. A. T., Crystal Lake, Ill.—Marland Refining has been reviewed. It is a substantial concern, producing and refining oil. Dividends are at the rate of 10 per cent.

SHORTS' BUYING BOOSTS COTTON

New York, Aug. 23.—COTTON—Prices advanced and closed well toward the highest of the day with gains of 25@33 points, the latter on October. The news generally was favorable to holders. There was considerable covering by shorts. Private estimates on the crop will be out next week and give a line on what the government report is expected to show on Sept. 2. Reports from the leading dry goods traders indicate a large distribution of business. The into sight movement for the week was 60,697 bales, against 75,162 bales last year and 107,444 bales two years ago. There were insect damage reports from Texas and less selling pressure on the part of professionals. Prices follow:

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.	Prev. close.
October	31.03	31.30	30.95	31.27	30.97

NEW ORLEANS.—COTTON prices had a good advance, but reacted from the top on profit taking. Prices:

January	31.00	31.11	30.92	30.91	30.80

December	30.95	31.05	30.81	30.85	30.71

The world's cotton conference will be held in New Orleans in October. There is a shortage of cotton pickers. The picking season lasts only 90 to 100 days. Unless machinery can be invented to pick cotton, the American cotton industry may suffer.

Buying After A Reaction
The recent decline greatly reduced the market valuation of standard securities, and the opinion is quite general in financial circles that the technical position of the market has been considerably strengthened.
At present, many issues, in view of the increasing prosperity of the industries they represent, at prevailing quotations would seem to merit consideration from discriminating investors.
